The labor and capital question looms up in the distance and bids fair to demand a prominent place in the discussions among politicians and the people, and will doubtless cut no small figure in the next campaign.

Then the temperance element is not dead yet by any means and will, when things are so split up be in a better position to command the attention of all.

It looks as if there would be more than one prominent plank in the platform that wins this time. Tariff reductions. Good sound money; one dollar as good as another. Arbitration between capital and labor. And general reformation in morals all along the line.

Easter.

Today is Good Friday, kept in commemoration of the death of Christ on the cross. Sunday the third day after his death He rose from the grave. And that day is kept throughout Christendom as Easter Sunday; in remembrance of the day when the Savior exemplified in Himself the resurrection, in which Christians believe.

The word is supposed to come from the German, Oster, or the Anglo-Saxon, Eastre, a goddess of light or spring, in honor of whom a festival was celebrated in April.

A great controversy was had, for years, in the churches, as to the time when Easter should be observed, and on account of changes in the mode of reckoning time these difficulties were hard to settle. Some wished to observe Easter on Sunday, regardless of the day of the month; others desired that the particular day of the month be observed, without paying attention to the day of the week. Controversy as to what time Easter should be observed was mostly ended in 669 when Archbishop Theodor got the Roman rule established in England. This rule is: Easter day is the first Sunday after the 14th day (not the full moon) of the calender moon which happens on or next after March 21. Encyclopedia Britanica says the moon here used is an imaginary moon created for ecclesiastical convenience, and that when England adopted the Gregorian calendar in 1752 the "New Style" put an end to all controversies between the Roman and English churches in regard to the time to be kept as Easter. The churches of Russia, Greece and the Oriental churches still generally observing the old calendar, their Easter being observed sometimes before, sometimes after ours; occasionally, as in 1865, on the same day.

Religious services, fasting and prayer are customarily kept up from Good Friday morning until Sunday morning when rejoicing and songs of praise are heard at an early hour in many churches.

We find the word easter but once in the Bible. In speaking of the imprisonment of Peter by Herod, Acts XII, 4, "And when he had apprehended him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions of soldiers to keep him; intending after Easter to bring him forth to the people."

Money! Money!

ARTICLE III.

Among articles used for money paper holds a prominent place. In early days a system of banking, or money borrowing and loaning at a higher rate was carried on, mostly by tradesmen, jewelers and others who had sufficiently established themselves in the estimation of their neighbors to be entrusted with such matters. Probably from the use of receipts for deposits and from orders to others for money deposited, came the idea of regularly stamped currency of paper. Those using this kind of money having on deposit an amount of coin, sufficient to pay all outstanding orders.

In 1694 the Bank of England was established which issued its notes payable without endorsement to the bearer on demand. This seems to have been the beginning of the use of money of this kind, and, of course, necessitated the having an amount of money on hand sufficient to meet all demands liable to be made. This bank was the first to agree to issue notes, payable on demand, in exchange for individual paper, payable at a future date.

In 1690 the first paper money was issued by the colony of Massachusetts; other colonies followed their example. In 1751 an act of Parliament deprived it of the quality of being legal tender; and in 1763 declared any issue void. In 1775 the Continental Congress exercised its power to make money and borrow money. It resolved to issue $300,000 of bills of credit, for the redemption of which the faith of the colonies was pledged, each colony taking its share. This went very well until $9,000,000 had been issued; then it began to depreciate in value. Paper money continued to be issued notwithstanding it was growing less in value all the time, until 1780, when the final redemtion of the bills was doubted; and in 1781 it took $200 and then $500. of paper to buy a dollar of coin. During the Revolution each state issued money of its own. In 1781 the states repealed all tender acts, on the recommendation of Congress.

In 1781 Congress created the office of Superintendent of Finances, and incorporated the Bank of North America. In 1791 the first Bank of the United States was established and run until 1811. In the war of 1812-15 the government was financially in straitened circumstances, and issued Treasury notes running one year at 5 and 2-5 per cent interest, which were increased up to $17,000,000 in 1814. These would pay taxes and imports, but were not legal tender. The second U. S. Bank was organized in 1816 and ran until 1836. Aside from the money mentioned other paper money was furnished by the banks in the different states.

On Dec. 17, 1860 Treasury notes bearing 6 and 12 per cent interest, to the amount of $10,000,000 to run one year were authorized. Other issues were made until in all $100,619,200 were actually issued besides other notes, bearing compound interest and 7-30 notes.

In 1863 a National banking system was resolved on by Congress, and superseded by the national bank act of 1864. In 1870 a law was made for banks whose issue should be redeemable in gold on demand. In 1875 specie payment was resumed by vote of Congress providing for the redemption of outstanding fractional currency in silver coin. This fractional currency was 50 cts., 25 cts., 15 cts., 10 cts., and 5 cts. paper, known at the time as "shin plasters." At one time in Minnesota almost every business man issued a lot of these denominations for himself; printed on card board, simply, "Good for 50 cts. in goods at ——'s store," and when offered to him he paid in goods for them And when his neighbors thought he was circulating too much of his home made money they would refuse to take them.

Paper money then, as a rule, seems to have simply represented something else To have acted as a substitute, to be redeemed in something valuable; something that would pass current in any land; or with any people, usually gold or silver. Paper can be made to represent any amount of gold or silver. A wagon load of silver dollars or more gold than a man can carry may be represented on paper that may be carried in the vest pocket. And the value of paper money usually depends entirely on the ability of the issuer to redeem it in coin.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, April 5, 1895.

The Treasury today is in better condition than it has been at any time since the present administration came into power. For some time there has been a steady increase in receipts both from customs and internal revenue, and they are expected to continue right along. Not the least gratifying thing about the situation is that it is now certain that no extra session of Congress will have to be called even if the Supreme court decides against the income tax, unless something now entirely unexpected shall make it necessary. The Treasury will have ample money to pay all claims, and the arrangement made with the syndicate which bought the last issue of bonds has so far worked like a charm in keeping the gold in the Treasury.

Postmaster General Wilson formally took charge of his department yesterday. He was sworn in Wednesday afternoon by Chief Justice Fuller, the ceremony being witnessed by Mrs. Fuller, Miss Wilson, Mr. Bissell and a number of the officials of the department. Mr. and Mrs. Bissel expect to return to Buffalo in about three weeks. President and Mrs. Cleveland have invited them to spend a few days with them at "Woodley" before they leave.

Mr. M. H. Twitchell, of Louisiana, who has been U. S. consul at Kingston, Canada, for nearly twenty years, reports to the State department a curious method of discrimination against Americans which has been recently put into effect by the Canadian authorities. Physicians residing on the boundary line between the United States and Canada have for many years—ever since colonial days, in fact—practiced indiscriminately on both sides of the line, but those who live on the American side of the line have been notified by the Canadian authorities that they will no longer be allowed to visit patients living on the Canadian side. That is an application of the doctrine of protection that should be studied by Gov. McKinley and his deciples.

Washington was all torn up early this week by the publication of a telegram from New York saying that Mr. Theodore Roosevelt—our own incomparable "Teddy"—was to withdraw his support from the temple of national civil service reform and become a member of the motley municipal aggregation which Mayor Strong is assembling in the name of reform in New York City. In short that "Teddy" was to retire from the Civil Service Commission to become a New York Police Commissioner. But Washington breathes easier now. We are not to lose our "Teddy." There are several reasons why "Teddy" will not become a New York Police Commissioner. He says he does not wish to do so. And another somewhat important reason is that Mayor Strong has not asked him to.

Secretary Herbert believes there is much in a name particularly when it comes to the selection of a name for a new vessel. As soon as it was learned that the Secretary was almost ready to take up the question of selecting names for the gunboats now being constructed at Newport News, Va., the pressure in favor of the cities which are competing for the honor began and has been steadily increasing and the end is not in sight. The cities having active partisans working in their behalf are Nashville, Chattanooga, Lexington, Ky.; Mobile, Norfolk, Niagara and Gloucester, and others may enter the good-natured contest. Three states have already put in applications to have their names given to one of the two battle ships authorized to be built by the last Congress—Rhode Island, Kentucky and Pennsylvania—but it will probably be a long time before those names are selected.

It doesn't require much foundation to build a sky-scraping cabinet resignation rumor. Mrs. Gresham happened to mention to a friend that she intended taking the Secretary away for a rest in order that he might get a chance to regain his health which has suffered on account of his hard work during the winter. That was enough. It was telegraphed in every direction, that owing to a serious difference of opinion between the President and Secretary Gresham, the latter would resign. There is no difference in opinion between the President and Secretary Gresham, and the latter has had no idea of resigning in the immediate future, although Mrs. Gresham would like him to do so, and has, it is said, exacted a promise of him that he will resign next winter if his health is not better than now. But there is little doubt that the rest will bring him around all right. That he thinks so himself was clearly shown by his arranging to keep the Washington apartments occupied by himself and Mrs Gresham right through the coming summer, which he expects to spend here, as the foreign complications are likely to make it necessary that either the President or the Secretary of State shall always be in Washington, and the President expects to go to Gray Gables early in June.

ROCKFORD RIPPLES.

Forest Gent returned after a six weeks trapping trip on Elk River. He captured nine rats, one mink and two skunks. Ha, ha; a poor year for trapping.

Mr. Harry Purdy started Wednesday for a visit with friends and relatives in Chicago.

Some property changed hands this week. Joe Thomas traded his house and lot in Rockford for 80 acres of land in North Rockford owned by Harry Purdy. Next fall Joe moves onto the farm. Then he will be a full fledged hay seed and he will make a good one.

J. Benner's team took another run yesterday.

Our ball player claims to be in love. Ask him with what.

Johnny Murphy commenced trapping skunks. They are worth 75 cents. He claims he can stand it as long as they can.

The bicycle fever has struck this point. A good many have already ordered of D. R. Thompson. They are now asking "have any wheels come for Thompson to-day."

Will Clifford shot himself accidentally through the fleshy part of the thigh with a revolver, the ball not striking the bone. He is doing well at this writing and we hope he will soon be out.

G. Irving is visiting near Loretto the past few days. It looks suspicious, Geo.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

Farmers have finished up their seeding and are now ready to make sugar, garden, etc., but it seems we will not have much sugaring this spring. Next on the farmer's program is planting potatoes, corn, etc.

Times do not seem to improve much and a great many men are looking and hoping they may get a job of work somewhere.

The democratic party by many is called the mean party, the disloyal party, the whisky party, the God forsaken party, yet the last Congress (democratic) passed a pension law making a soldiers pension no lower rating than $6 00 per month and even Cleveland signed it. What party made the rating $2 00 per month, can you tell? There should be a committee appointed to balance up accounts between the two old parties. Hardly think the democrat party has been given credit on the national books for all they have contributed to this country.

In looking up a little political economy I find that during the first half year under the McKinley tariff law and the Wilson law shows that the receipts under the new law were nearly 25 percent greater than under the old. The total under the McKinley law was $61,786,541 and under the Wilson law $79,686,456. Subtract these footings and you have $14,899,915 in favor of the Wilson bill, and this the bell wethers of the republican party call free trade. It will work all right if you can only make the people believe it but all of them are not fools enough to swallow it. McKinley has been riding his tariff horse all over the country until he is about jaded to death. The last trip he made was down south to see if he could wake those fellows up to a sense of duty, but Mr. McKinley might as well tie up his tariff horse or sell him at auction and contribute the proceeds to some benevolent institution for he never can ride into the White House on this "hoss", for he is blind, wind broken, spavined and very colicky. Should think the people had been fooled on this tariff question about long enough.

The funeral of W. F. Ingerson was largely attended at the M. E. church at Armstrong last Sunday. Elder Thayer, of Minneapolis officiated. Mr. Ingerson was one of our best citizens and will be greatly missed by his family, friends and neighbors.

An Easter entertainment will be given at the A. C. church next Sunday evening. Everybody is invited to come out.

We are in need of more money, more rain, more grass, more sand, more confidence and more statesmen. So say we all.

LONG LAKE.

The organization of a creamery association, with headquarters at this village has finally become a fact. Land near the R. R Station has been secured upon which material is now being hauled for the purpose of erecting suitable buildings to carry on the enterprise. The association is composed mostly of farmers in this vicinity.

DIED: On the night of the 4th inst., Mrs. Jessie Braden, widow of the late William Braden. Although she had been sick for several weeks with Pneumonia, her demise was rather unexpected. She leaves a family of two daughters and a son, the latter being a lad of some ten years.

The many friends of Fletcher Ingerson in this community were pained to learn of his death. They recall many incidents of the deceased, setting forth his frank and genial character.

Ex-County Superintendent Lewis and family are expected to arrive in Long Lake soon from Iola, Wis., where he has been taking treatment for his cancer. His death was rumored a few days ago, which the tidings of his intended return to this place contradicted.

Herbert H. Archibald met with a mishap on Monday, as he was hauling stone for the new creamery, and driving with an empty wagon after unloading, his horses became unmanageable and persisted in running at their full speed. Mr. Archibald, being some what out of breath was unable to control them. They ran through the streets of our village and turned abruptly into D. A. Lydiard's premises by which movement Mr. Archibald was thrown violently from the wagon, resulting in breaking his leg below the knee joint. He will necessarily be confined to the house for a few months till the limb heals.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.
Square Type.
Conical. Spatulate. Artistic. Philosophic. Feminine.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $250.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and find of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft tall, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and will admit that sewing these THUMBS has put in the way of saving money by finding in one volume everything to satisfy the literary wants of whole family.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Railway Age suggests that newspapers give less prominence to train robberies, and especially that they do not insist on it that it is a profitable business. He thinks newspaper reports of such events are generally exaggerated and the fabulous sums alleged to have been obtained by the robbers stimulate the imagination of embryo robbers. There is a great deal of common sense in these suggestions. Still the best work toward the abolition of train robbery is done by the express companies, which are now generally provided with almost absolutely burglar proof safes.

EMPEROR WILLIAM has fixed the date of the formal opening of the Baltic and North Sea canal on the 20th of June. Immense preparations are making for the ceremony. The Hamburg-American line will join in the parade with two of their twin-screw express steamers, the Augusta Victoria and the Normannia. The canal is expected to have great influence in the development of German commerce. Its strategic value is also enormous.

Building Collapsed.

WHEELING, W. V., April 9.—This morning, shortly after 8 o'clock, the five-story business house of Chapman & Sons, on Main street, in the wholesale district, and the adjoining four-story hardware establishment of T. T. Hutchinson, fell suddenly without warning and buried seven persons in the ruins. "Dad" Williams, a carpenter, escaped with serious injuries, but T. T. Hutchinson, the veteran merchant, and the following employes of the establishment, were entombed. J. A. Ford, a salesman; P. J. Horan, a clerk; Eugene Burch, a clerk; Bob Winches, a clerk. A Western Union messenger boy, Harry Cowl, was caught in the alley and buried.

Hutchinson was taken out with two ribs broken and other injuries and cannot live.

Michael Ford was taken from the ruins alive, but fatally hurt. He had been pinned beneath an iron girder, and the dead body of young Horan lay across him.

It is now known that Rev. Father H. F. Parke, vicar-general of this Catholic diocese, is under the ruins. He was on his way to the cathedral from a train when the walls fell.

Supreme Court Decision Cripples the Income Tax Law.

Landlords and Bondholders Are Exempt from Payment on Rent Profits and Interest on State, County and Municipal Securities.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—As forecasted by the newspapers for several days, the supreme court has decided that the income tax law is unconstitutional so far as it affects incomes derived from rents and real estate or from state, county and municipal bonds. The court was divided as to the remainder of the law, and as the decision of the court below was in favor of its constitutionality, that decision must stand.

An Accurate Forecast.

Chief Justice Fuller read the decision before one of the largest audiences that ever crowded into the courtroom. The closest atttention was accorded him, but it was soon evident that the press forecast had been an accurate one, and hence there was less interest taken in the decision than would have been the case had it not already been discounted in the newspapers.

How the Justices Stood.

Upon the question of the constitutionality of the taxation of incomes from state and municipal bonds the court was unanimously in the negative.

Affirming the law — Justices Harlan and White.

Upon the general question of the constitutionality of the law, the court is said to be divided as follows:

Synopsis of the Decision.

The conclusions of the court were stated to be as follows:

1. That by the constitution federal taxation is divided into two great classes: Direct taxes and duties, imports and excises.

2. That the imposition of direct taxes is governed by the rule of apportionment among the several states, according to numbers, and the imposition of duties, imposts and excises by the rule of uniformity throughout the United States.

3. That the principle that taxation and representation go together was intended to be and was prescribed in the constitution by the establishment of the rule of apportionment among the several states, so that such apportionment should be according to numbers in each state.

4. That the states surrendered their power to levy imposts and to regulate commerce to the general government and gave it the concurrent power to levy direct taxes in reliance on the protection afforded by the rules prescribed, and that the compromises of the constitution cannot be disturbed by legislative action.

5. That these conclusions result from the text of the constitution, and are supported by the historical evidence furnished by the circumstances surrounding the framing and adoption of that instrument, and the views of those who framed and adopted it.

6. That the understanding and expectation at the time of the adoption of the constitution was that direct taxes would not be levied by the general government except under the pressure of extraordinary exigency, and such has been the practice down to August 15, 1894. If the power to do so is to be exercised as an ordinary and usual means of supply, that fact furnishes an additional reason for circumspection in disposing of the present case.

7. That taxes on real estate belong to the class of direct taxes, and that the taxes on the rent or income of real estate, which is the incident of its ownership, belong to the same class.

8. That by no previous decision of this court has this question been adjudicated to the contrary of the conclusions now announced.

That so much of the act of August 15, 1894, as attempts to impose a tax upon the rent or income of real estate without apportionment as invalid.

The court is further of opinion that the act of August 15, 1894, is invalid so far as it attempts to levy a tax upon the income derived from municipal bonds. As a municipal corporation is the representative of the state and one of the instrumentalities of the state government, the property and revenues of municipal corporations are not the subjects of federal taxation, nor is the income derived from state, county and municipal securities, since taxation on the interest therefrom operates on the power to borrow before it is exercised and has a sensible influence on the contract, and therefore such a tax is a tax on the power of the states and their instrumentalities to borrow money, and consequently repugnant to the constitution.

Justices Are Divided in Opinion.

Upon each of the other questions argued at the bar, to-wit: 1. Whether the void provisions as to rents and income from real estate invalidates the whole act? 2. Whether as to the income of the personal property as such, the act is unconstitutional as laying direct taxes? 3. Whether any part of the tax, if not considered as a direct tax, is invalid for want of uniformity on either of the grounds suggested? the justices who heard the argument are equally divided and therefore, no opinion is expressed.

The result is that the decree of the circuit court is reversed and the cause remanded with directions to enter a decree in favor of complainant in respect only of the voluntary payment of the tax on the rents and income of its real estate and that which it holds in trust, and on the income from the municipal bonds owned or so held by it.

The Line of Argument.

The power to decide a law unconstitutional, the chief justice said, was used with reluctance, but the responsibility could not be evaded when the necessity arose. The contentions respecting this law were:

1. That a tax on rents was a tax on real estate, and that not being laid according to apportionment it was invalid.

2 That it was not uniform, and a violation of the constitutional requirements that such taxes shall be laid with uniformity. Under this head came the exceptions in favor of those persons who were not in possession of an income of $4,000; of mutual insurance companies, savings banks and partnerships, all organized for and doing the same business as that of corporations authorized by the states. These exceptions, it was held, were arbitrary and capricious, and not based upon sound public policy.

3. That incomes from investments in state and municipal bonds could not be taxed.

Taxation, Direct and Indirect.

The chief justice proceeded to a consideration of the constitutional requirements with respect to the imposition of taxation, direct and indirect, and said that the framers of the constitution intended to make the consent of those who were expected to pay essential to the validity of any tax. They had just come out of a conflict upon the great principle of taxation with representation, and they were intended to go together—that congress should so impose a tax that it would fall with even force and effect upon all of the constituents of those who voted for it.

The first question to be considered, said Chief Justice Fuller, was whether or not a tax on rents is a direct tax within the meaning of the constitution? It had always been held, he said, that a tax on estate, real or personal, was a direct tax, but it might be that the constitution had a different meaning, and that it was to be applied to this case. In that view it became necessary to inquire what were direct taxes at the time the constitution was adopted. The fifty-three members of the constitutional convention were men of great sagacity, alive to the duties and responsibilities of their trust. They had before them the example of Great Britain and the constitutions of the several states, which they had, in many cases, helped to frame. Many of them were well versed in the literature of the times, especially on the subject of political economy.

The chief justice then made extensive quotations from the history of the debates in the convention on the subject of taxation. The inference from them, he said, was that the general distinction between direct and indirect taxation was well understood by the members of the convention and that the expectation was that a direct tax would be the last resort of congress.

"What the constitution intended to prevent," said the chief justice, "was that no tax should be laid on the residents of any state by the representatives of other states." The exercise of the power to levy direct taxes was to be restricted to extraordinary occasions.

In conclusion, therefore, upon this point, the chief justice announced that the court were of the opinion that that part of the law imposing taxes upon rents obtained from real estate was invalid.

State and Municipal Bonds Exempt.

Next in order the opinion considered the third objection to the law: That it imposed a tax upon the incomes derived from investments in state and municipal bonds, and was therefore invalid.

Chief Justice Fuller reasserted the general principle that the tax on government bonds was held to be a tax on contracts and prejudicial to the public interest. It was therefore obvious that such a tax on the power of states or municipalities to make contracts was prejudical to public policy and therefore unconstitutional.

Field and White Read Opinions.

Should Be Declared Null and Void.

Justice Field devoted some time to a review of the provisions regarding rents, and denounced the principle sought to be established by the income tax law. Many of his conclusions were in conformity with those expressed by the chief justice. He also attacked the law on account of its lack of uniformity, and dwelt upon its exemptions and the many discriminations found therein. In conclusion Justice Field announced his opinion that the whole law of 1894 should be declared to be null and void.

Thinks the Law All Right.

Justice White prefaced his dissenting opinion with the statement that the custom of rendering long dissents in a court of last resort was more honored in the breach than in the observance. Their only effect was to weaken the efficiency of the opinion of the court. Justice White said he should not speak but for the fact that the court had overruled and set aside established precedents and the settled and uniform doctrine of the supreme court down to the present time. He regretted that at this late day this court should thus overthrow and nullify an act of congress, supported and affirmed by all text writers and by every decision of the supreme court of the United States. When the fathers constructed our form of government, they gave it, not limited, but unlimited power to levy taxes, with but one exception—that of taxing exports. The assertion that the constitutional power of congress was limited was, he thought, the fundamental error in the reasoning of the majority of this court. The great question before the court was, is the income tax a direct tax? That question was practically decided on a hundred years ago, and he did not deem it necessary to enter into an elaborate review of the cases that had been decided.

Effect of the Decision.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The effect of the supreme court decision on the income tax law so far as the treasury department officials can determine after a hurried estimate made Monday afternoon will be a reduction of about one-half in the revenue originally estimated as obtainable from that source, thus making the annual revenue to be expected about $15,000,000. The original estimate of $30,000,000 per year was based on the assumption that the law would be held to be constitutional in all its provisions.

A Disappointment.

The president was informed of the income tax decision shortly after it was rendered by the supreme court, and at 1:30 he summoned Secretary Carlisle to the executive mansion and the two discussed the matter for some time. Other members of the cabinet dropped in later, among them the attorney general. The decision was a disappointment, but the administration will at once issue instructions to collectors of internal revenue to conform to the emasculated law. Secretary Carlisle followed his well defined custom not to discuss the matter for publication.

Will Accept the Decision.

Attorney General Olney said the government would not ask for a rehearing, but would accept the decision as rendered. He was not surprised at that portion of it excepting municipal and state bonds from taxation, but expressed the hope that the question of rents might be brought before the court in some other shape, when he entertained the strong belief that the present attitude of the court would be revised.

No Extra Session of Congress.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The president on being asked Monday afternoon whether in view of the decision of the supreme court on the income tax law an extra session of congress would be called, said that neither he nor the secretary of the treasury saw any necessity for such action, and that unless there was an unexpected change in conditions, he had no idea that congress would meet again before the time appointed for its regular session.

Rev. Dr. Lansing Apologizes to President Cleveland for His Charges.

BOSTON, April 9.—Rev. I. J. Lansing, whose references to the president in his address before the New England conference at Salem last Thursday night provoked extended criticism, gives out the following statement:

"My allusion made in a temperance address at Salem, on Thursday, April 4, to the drinking habits of the president of the United States, was based partly on common report and partly on the testimony of eye-witnesses. From various and independent sources which I believed to be wholly reliable, I had been informed that the president had been seen, on different occasions and in the presence of many persons, in an intoxicated condition. From the substantial and detailed character of these statements I supposed there was no doubt as to the facts alleged. I therefore made this allusion as a matter of common report, basing my confidence on the testimony of personal and, I suppose, credible witnesses. The names of these witnesses obviously, I cannot with propriety reveal, since, sharing their knowledge in common with many others, they might justly shrink from being singled out and called to verify that to which not only they but equally with themselves, had ocular proof.

"I must therefore say that if my statement reproducing such testimony is not in harmony with facts, I regret having made it. I could have neither desire nor motive for saying anything unkind or uncharitable of the president or of any party whatsoever. The case being one of conflict of testimony between witnesses of equal credibility, I cannot decide, and since I have no personal knowledge apart from the testimony, I withdraw the statement, and tender apologies and sincere regrets to the president of the United States and to the public."

RUSH OF WATERS.

AKRON, O., April 9.—The large mill-race of the American Cereal company, formerly the Ohio and Pennsylvania canal, gave way under pressure of high water Monday morning and the water rushed in a torrent down the valley. The track of the Valley railroad and of the Akron, Cuyahoga & Toledo electric line were washed out for some distance. Several small buildings, none of them tenanted, were swept away. A Valley switch engine crashed into the washout and rolled to the foot of the hill. Charles Konrad, the engineer, had three ribs broken and was frightfully bruised, John Daly, fireman, escaped with cuts and severe bruises. The damage will amount to about $6,000.

A HUMBLE room—and humble men
Cast down and broken-hearted,
With faltering tones and weeping eyes,
Bemoan their Lord departed.

Beyond, a lonely, rocky grave,
By angel guard attended,
And two sad women come to weep
O'er hopes forever ended.

"Where have ye laid my Lord?" one cries,
While tears are falling faster;
So strong her doubts that later faith
Can scarcely falter: "Master!"

Above, a throng in burst of song,
High holiday are keeping.
"Thy work is done, Thou risen One,"
But men below are weeping.

"O radiant day!" the blessed say:
"O day of mirth and gladness!"
"O darkest day!" men sadly say:
"O day of gloom and sadness!"

"O triumph day in courts above!"
We welcome back our Banished.
"O lonely day!" on earth they say,
"We mourn our Master vanished."

Heaven shouts: "O joy without alloy!"
Earth wails: "O sore disaster!"
The angels sing: "Good-morning, King."
Men sigh: "Good-night, O Master."

To-day a countless host on earth
High holiday are keeping,
While praising with the hosts above
Are those who then were weeping.

"The Lord is risen, is risen," they shout
We answer: "He is risen:
Come, share the feast, O great and least,

Another Easter morn will dawn
(O dawn that darkens never!)
When they who wept, and we who slept,
Have joined the great Forever.

O glorious morn! O cloudless dawn!
When past earth's stormy weather,
Each saint with song has joined that throng
To keep the feast together.

—Louise Doisy, in N. Y. Observer.

"IF all the beautiful flowers, glowing sunsets, faces of friends — all things were blotted out from your life—" Juliet's lips quivered with emotion. She was unable to finish. The young companion placed her arms tenderly around the speaker's neck.

"Oh, it is terrible to be—this way." It was so hard to say "blind" when its meaning was so real. Juliet Markley and Belle Ellis were both under twenty, and both were penniless and orphans. One could see that they had known better days, but memories of other times could not supply the wants of the ever present now.

Despite the modest little dressmaker's sign upon their door, anything could be ordered from the hemming of a sheet to the most elaborate embroidery.

Alas for the exquisite flowers which grew beneath Juliet's hands while her patron slept the sleep of the—indifferent. She arose from a bed of sickness to find her eyes, which had been likened to pansies, shrouded in darkness. She remembered attending a great reception when a little golden-haired child. It was given in honor of a noble Englishman whom people were lionizing. And this great man came where she was standing by her father's side. "What eyes!" he had exclaimed. "What would Turner do with that face!" Then he had "begged the privilege" of a kiss from the little "lass," and she, childlike, threw her arms about his neck and kissed him, because he had "such a good, kind look."

She thought nothing of his compliments. She was used to them. She asked her father who "Turner" was, and upon being informed that he was a great artist, innocently wondered "what he would do with her face." All her life she had heard of her eyes; now she thought of little else. Oh, the bitterness of that thought!

"I have been thinking," Juliet continued, "that it is a glorious thing to have true friends. All of mine have deserted me but you, Belle. Do you think Paul Webber would have continued to love me through—through everything?"

"Yes, I know it," the other replied. "Juliet, dear, I used to wonder how you could be so indifferent to that good man when he fairly idolized you."

"Belle!" Juliet cried, "I did love him! I wonder why I acted such a fool."

"PAUL!"

Two years ago, Paul Webber had lavished upon this girl all the devotion his manly heart was capable of bestowing. His were not the pleasing features which win for many a worthless man the affection of foolish girls. Perhaps it was this very fact which made Juliet's peachy skin and dancing blue eyes attract him. One of her thoughtless remarks, which he had overheard, crushed all his bright hopes.

"Oh, yes," she said heartlessly, to some of her young friends who were trying to banter her, "I really think I should love him desperately if I were not compelled to see him."

The last straw! Soon after this he was in a western mining camp. One cannot always escape from one's old life. To this western miner, some one brought word of the sorrow which had come to her whom he loved. "Would she love me now that my homeliness would be hidden from her view?" he asked himself. There was no malice in the question, only a great burning love which knows no barrier, which hails even blindness as a blessing if it will give love for love. Instantly Paul thought himself the unworthiest of men.

All is excitement in the little rooms occupied by Juliet and Belle. There are tears and kisses. Then the pretty sightless young girl is assisted into the cars by such a kind-hearted, gentlemanly man. As the train speeds away, she wonders if all who enter the blind asylum as "charity patients" are treated with so much consideration.

A brief note, naming the day upon which an escort would be sent, threw the little household in a frenzy of delight. Perhaps she would once more behold the light of day! The very thought was overwhelming.

"Doctor," she said, one day, to her physician, "will my sight be restored? Don't give me false hope," she pleaded. "Oh, you wouldn't do that, would you?" she added, pitifully.

"We are positive we will be able to effect a complete cure," Dr. Greene said. Then he added something about "worse cases," but she heard it not. "I will see! I will see!" her pretty lips were whispering. Her very soul was thrilled with the glorious thought.

"You are mistaken, my dear; it is a private asylum. All of its inmates are 'pay patients.'"

The girl sprang to her feet. "Dr. Greene," she cried, "how came I here—in a pay institution—I, who haven't a cent in the world?"

"Dear miss, it is the work of a good, kind friend."

Juliet could think of no "friend" but Belle, dear Belle, who was as poor as herself.

"Tell me who it is," she said, eagerly.

"You shall know," was the reply. "Let me see, to-morrow will be Easter. Well, if everything is favorable, we will remove the bandages to-morrow."

"Then I want to behold my benefactor before any other living soul," said Juliet.

"It can all be arranged. You shall see—" The girl thought that the last word was "her;" however, she did not hear distinctly.

The momentous day had come. "Miss Juliet, your friend will remove these cloths. I must go to another patient who requires my services."

Gently, so gently the coverings were moved. Sudden light might shock the delicate nerves. Then the beautiful eyes, those "pansy" eyes, looked straight into her benefactor's face.

"Paul!"

A brief silence followed which was broken by Juliet.

"Paul, I don't deserve this, after the way I treated you!"

"I do not blame you," he replied. "I am glad I can render a service to an old friend." He was struggling hard to appear calm. "Now that I have done so, I will go back to the old camp."

Juliet had fancied that the time might come when Paul would be the same loving Paul of other days. She could detect no trace of love in his look, none in his voice. The thought was one of agony.

"You bestow the greatest of blessings upon me and then"—her voice was almost a whisper—"you break my heart."

The lover's forced composure vanished, instantly. "Never! Never!" he exclaimed. "Do you not see, darling, that I love you as dearly as ever, that I have been trying to conceal my love and that it was killing—" He did not complete the remark, but kissed the rosy lips.

No one saw this pretty tableau. The songster in his gilded cage turned his head and sang louder than ever.

"I have been exceedingly fortunate since going west," Mr. Webber remarked with pardonable pride, "but, dear, my interests may suffer if I do not soon return. Can you consent to be married at once?"

The beautiful Easter service was held in the building where Juliet had spent many days longing for, and expecting, happiness but oh, not all the joy that was hers to-day!

"Dear!" she whispered, "Christ ascended into Heaven on Easter, and I—" pausing not to think what an odd comparison she was making—"I have gained both Heaven and earth on Easter."—Susan B. Baker, in Housekeeper.

EASTER ARITHMETIC.

How Dot's Five Eggs Grew to Ten, and Back Again to Five.

"There are just three dozen eggs in the pantry, I believe," said Mrs. Brown on Easter Monday, as she gathered up the breakfast dishes. "You children may have them if you really want them; there will be just six apiece. I'll boil them and color them for you, and I hope you'll have no end of fun with them."

"All right, mamma!" "Hurrah for Easter eggs!" "Six for me!" "Won't that be fun!" "Be sure to boil 'em hard!" "I want blue ones!"

Into the kettle rolled three dozen fresh white eggs, but one had a thin shell, so only thirty-five came out whole, and, of course, nobody knew whose egg was broken.

"Six into thirty-five five times, and five over," said twelve-year-old Daisy. "Now, who's the 'five over'? You, Bob?"

"I wouldn't give a cent for less than half a dozen," said Bob, gloomily. "Isn't five enough for you, Bess? You're the littlest."

"I dot to have sits," said Bessie, firmly.

"I don't need but five," said Dot, who was eight years old. "I couldn't eat six if I tried."

When the eggs were finished and counted out, Dot had gone to a neighbor's with a message from mamma. She was always the one to run errands, or go upstairs, or hunt up lost things. Bob remembered that, and followed his mother into the pantry to say: "Just put this biggest one with Dot's; she ought to have it."

Presently Daisy edged up to the kitchen table and whispered: "Here's the prettiest of mine, mamma. That's for Dot."

Later the twins came together on the same errand, and finally little Bessie remarked: "I dess I don't want sits," and one of hers went, too.

So, when Dot came back, she was very much surprised to find ten eggs instead of five.

"What nice children!" she said. "Whatever made 'em think of that? But where are your eggs, mamma? You didn't count yourself at all, and I know you like eggs. Now there'll be five for you and five for me, and we'll just every one of us have five apiece, won't we?"—Youth's Companion.

Dance of the Sun.

In many parts of Ireland and England in olden days the belief obtained that on Easter morning the sun danced in honor of the resurrection. On the evening of Holy Saturday great preparations were made for the finishing of Lent; many a fat hen and dainty piece of bacon were put in the pot by the cotter's wife, and woe to the person who should taste it before the stroke of twelve, but at that hour would be heard the clapping of hands and cries of "Out with the Lent!" All would be feasting and merriment for a few hours, when the good people would retire, to rise about four o'clock in order "to see the sun dance." This custom was not confined to the humble laborer and his family, but was observed by educated and wealthy people as well. An allusion to this superstition occurs in an old ballad, which says:

"But, Dick, she dances such a way!
No sun upon an Easter day
Is half so fine a sight."

—Chicago Tribune.

Becoming More Commonly Observed.

A few years ago the custom of observing Easter was not as general as it is at present. Two religious denominations observed it as a church feast. The week of Easter was the most important one in the whole year, ending as it did the penitential forty days of Lent. There was more solemnity and more rejoicing in the observance of this season than in Christmas, for it betokened the new birth of the whole world, a return of life to the universe. From being a special feast of a church it became a season of gladness everywhere, and now even the commercial world emulates the religious bodies in its warmth of welcome and in preparations for the great event. — Detroit Free Press.

In Birmingham formerly crowds of people were used to assemble to see the children "clip the churches." This ceremony was performed by the children of the different charity schools, who at a certain hour flocked together for the purpose. The first comers placed themselves hand in hand with their backs against the church, and were joined by their companions, who gradually increased in number till at last the chain completely surrounded the sacred edifice. As soon as the hand of the last of the train had grasped that of the first they dispersed. —Chicago Tribune.

His Funny Sunday.

In Roman Catholic countries it was a very ancient custom for the preacher to divert his congregation with a humorous sermon, as during Lent the good people had mortified themselves and prayed so much that they began to be rather discontented and ill-tempered, so that the clergy deemed it necessary to make a little fun from the pulpit for them, and thus give as it were the first impulse toward the revival of mirth and cheerfulness.—Chicago Tribune.

Easter Sunday.

How beautiful the flowers—
The lilies white and fair!
The music was delightful—
The hymns, the chanted prayer.

The toilettes were so perfect,
Of textures rich and rare,
No wonder that each of us
Would at the other stare.

Oh! 'twas a glorious service,
And you should have been there.
"But how about the sermon?"
You've got me, I declare.

—Judge.

Making Them Useful.

"What are you doing," asked the neighbor, who had just dropped in for an afternoon call. "Makin' patterns?"

"No. I'm cutting all the Easter bonnet jokes out of the newspapers. I'm gointer show 'em to my husban'. Maybe when he sees how everybody regards Easter bonnets ez a necessity, at any price, he'll step up an' do his dooty like a man."—Washington Star.

A YOUNG GIRL'S TRIALS.

Nervous Troubles End in St. Vitus' Dance.

Physicians Powerless—The Story Told by the Child's Mother.

[From the Reporter, Somerset, Ky.]

Among the foot hills of the Cumberland Mountains, near the town of Flat Rock is the happy home of James McPherron. Four months ago the daughter of the family, a happy girl of sixteen, was stricken with St. Vitus' dance. The leading physicians were consulted but without avail. She grew pale and thin under the terrible nervous strain and was fast losing her mental powers. In fact the thought of placing her in an asylum was seriously considered. Her case has been so widely talked about that the report of her cure was like modernizing a miracle of old. To a reporter who visited the home the mother said:

"Yes, the reports of my daughter's sickness and cure are true as you hear them. Her affliction grew into St. Vitus' dance from an aggravated form of weakness and nervous trouble peculiar to her sex. Every source of help was followed to the end, but it seemed that physicians and medicine were powerless. Day by day she grew worse until we despaired of her life. At times she almost went into convulsions. She got so that we had to watch her to keep her from wandering away and you can imagine the care she was.

"About the time when our misery was greatest and all hope had fled, I read of another case, almost similar, that had been cured by a medicine known as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Almost in desperation I secured some of the pills and from that day on the wonderful work of restoration commenced; the nervousness left, her cheeks grew bright with the color of health, she gained flesh and grew strong both mentally and physically until to-day she is the very picture of good health and happiness.

"It is no wonder that I speak in glowing terms of Pink Pills to every ailing person I meet. They saved my daughter's life and I am grateful.",

The foregoing is but one of many wonderful cures that have been credited to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. In many cases the reported cures have been investigated by the leading newspapers and verified in every possible manner. Their fame has spread to the far ends of civilization and there is hardly a drug store in this country or abroad where they cannot be found.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are now given to the public as an unfailing blood builder and nerve restorer, curing all forms of weakness arising from a watery condition of the blood or shattered nerves. The pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

A PRETTY SCRAP BAG.

"Mother's work basket" usually catches all the odds and ends of scraps and snippings about the sitting-room, much to the discomfiture of the tired woman when she goes to look for something in a hurry and has to fish for half an hour to get it out from the mess.

It isn't fair to harass her that way, and here is something to help you avoid it, says an eastern exchange. Make a bag of one of the pretty dark Turkish towels, leaving the fringed ends at the bottom and running a draw-string of some cast-off bright ribbon at the top; or make a bag out of strips of bright silk, or a yet stronger one of narrow-striped ticking, which you can embellish with feather-stitching in bright wools. This bag can be hung by the mantel, in an obscure corner, or from a nail driven on the under side of the sewing table. It will be a splendid catch-all, and will save a lot of ill-temper, for embroidery silk and scissors will not get too intimate in it, and the particular button wanted will not be under half a ton of undarned stockings, gloves to mend, and tops and balls and other bric-a-brac. Little helps of that kind save a lot of trouble.—Chicago Mail.

To Renovate a Couch.

Old couches that it would not be profitable to pay the upholsterer to recover can often be rejuvenated at home, if over them there is put a fresh cover of chintz, sateen, corduroy or mohair furniture plush. If the sofa or couch has a back, which it is difficult to manage on the new plan, take it off. Make the new cover wide enough to nearly touch the floor at the foot and across the front, and long enough to press deep into the crease between the seat and the raised head, if it has one. Put a frill around it or not as you like best. Long hat pins are a convenience in holding the covers in place. Upholsterers, when draping on a cover, gather up a large rosette on it at each corner of the foot, and tie it in place with linen thread, flattening it and shaping with a few stitches if necessary. The pillows added, if pretty, make one quite blind to the covering, if it is only of the right color.—N. Y. Post.

The Lid Still On.

Among stories told by country doctors, this one certainly deserves a place. The doctor had prescribed for an Irishman, and visited his cabin the next day to see how he was getting on.

"Well, Patrick, are you better today?" he asked, pleasantly.

"Why, didn't you take the pills I ordered?"

"I did that, an' I'm worrse, but maybe the cover hasn't come off the box yet!"—Youth's Companion.

THE LEGISLATURE.

ST. PAUL, April 3.—The senate took up the bill to regulate express companies as a special order and after an hour's discussion was recommended for passage. The bill of Ringdahl's to investigate the cost of railroads was killed by indefinite postponement. The following bills were passed: Relating to the practice of medicine and the licensing of physicians; providing for the election of a state dairy and food commissioner; relating to the removal of school sites; to regulate the payment of grand and petit jury fees in district court; reducing the penalty for the sale of liquor without license so as to bring it within the jurisdiction of justice courts. This bill was opposed both by liquor men and by temperance people and was advocated by friends of both in the senate and was carried by only two votes to spare.

The house killed the bill for the relief of cyclone sufferers in Meeker county. The Russian thistle bill, after considerable discussion, was recommended to pass. Dr. Zier's bill providing for a state pardoning board was passed. The bill is an amendment of the state constitution, and will have to be voted on by the people after it has run the gauntlet of the senate, where it has the assurance of the united support of the Hennepin and Ramsey delegations. At present the entire pardoning power is vested in the governor only, and the bill amends this by creating a board of pardons, consisting of the attorney general and the chief justice of the supreme court, who, together with the governor as an ex-officio member, are given the power to grant pardons and reprieves.

ST. PAUL, April 4.—The senate defeated the bill to license newsboys. The following bills were passed: To provide for the orderly observance of Memorial day; to provide a speedy hearing in special proceedings instituted upon a writ of habeas corpus and review thereof in the supreme court by any party feeling aggrieved by the decision and order made by a district court, a district judge, a court commissioner; to provide for the bonding of counties to build court houses; to amend an act entitled "an act to provide for the organization of school districts; relating to the the descent and distribution of the estates of adopted children; to prohibit the sale of cigarettes, cigars or tobacco to pupils attending the public schools or schools supported wholly or in part by taxation.

The house put in an all-day's hard session. There were two special orders on, one in the forenoon and one in the afternoon. The one in forenoon comprised the senate and the house bills for a constitutional amendment allowing the state board to loan the state school funds to counties, towns, villages and cities. The senate bill was passed, after considerable discussion. The special order of the afternoon was Mr. Foss' inheritance tax bill. This was passed, after a deal of discussion with some amendments. Dale's bill for a constitutional amendment to tax church property was passed and the bill for the destruction of the Russian thistle.

ST. PAUL, April 5.—Senator Stevens presided a greater portion of the morning and rushed the work along at a rapid rate. The calendar was reached early. The Miller bill for the regulation of express companies was first taken up. A call of the senate was ordered. The call being dispensed with the roll was called on the final passage of this important bill, and it received 29 ayes to 11 nays. A number of senate bills came back from the house, with amendments, all of which were concurred in, and the senate then went into committee of the whole. Stevens' bill for the inspection of cattle and swine was taken up and discussed thoroughly until noon and then killed. In the afternoon the Red River drainage bill was taken up. The whole afternoon was occupied in the consideration and it was finally recommended for passage.

The judiciary committee of the house presented two reports on the matter of impeachment of Judge Ives of the 14th district. The majority report favors impeachment. The following bills were passed: Relating to grain inspection; to prevent the spread of noxious weeds on the highways; to encourage smelting iron ore; making municipal corporations subject to garnishee in certain cases; to establish an interstate park at the Dalles of the St. Croix; to provide elementary normal instruction in high schools; to provide a bounty for the arrest and conviction of poultry thieves; relating to boiler inspection; to appropriate money for higher education. The Pipestone normal school bill was lost, also the county seat bill of Mr. Wright.

ST. PAUL, April 6.—The senate had a somewhat amusing debate over a proposition to establish another experiment station, the result being the recommendation of the bill for passage. In the afternoon the senate worked on general orders, the most important bill considered being that to provide for free analysis of ores and specimens at the state university. This bill was fought by many of the senators, but nothing could prevent a favorable recommendation. A number of other bills were recommended for passage, but as a rule they were measures which met with little opposition.

The bill for the extension of the work of the work of thestate experimental station is H. F. 468, introduced by Representative Craig, and passed through the house after some opposition.

The three normal school bills remaining on the senate general orders were recommended for passage. The bills provide for the establishment of normal schools at Litchfield, Glencoe and Pipestone. The Litchfield bill was recommended for passage by a vote of 13 to 9, and then the senators turned in and pushed them all through.

ST. PAUL, April 8.—The senate in committee of the whole, had Barr's woman suffrage bill under consideration. Considerable opposition was developed but not enough to defeat the measure. A motion for indefinate postponement was lost and the matter finally refered back to the judiciary committee with instructions to prepare a constitutional amendment giving women the right to vote on all occasions. The bill fixing the term of office of probate judge at four years instead of two was recommended for passage. Potter's bill providing for a state immigration agent was refered back to finance committee.

The house while on general orders, recommended the Hastings & Dakota land grant bill for passage by a vote of 59 to 11. The senate has already passed the measure and the action of the lower body of the legislature practically assures the final passage of the bill and its presentation to the governor for signature. The mineral land lease bill which had once been recommended for passage and recalled, was taken up again and killed by indefinate postponement. The following bills were passed: legalizing affidavits in certain cases; relating to banking and trust companies; to provide public school libraries; relating to the practice of medicine and the licencing of physicians; to suppress the sale of unwholesome poultry and game; relating to village water works; relating to foreclosure of mortgage; relating to municipal bonds; relating to weights and measures. The bill relating to the practice of medicine is an amendment to the present law. It provides for licence of all practitioners and requires two years study instead of three.

CYCLING LORE.

THE support of Miss Frances Willard and Lady Henry Somerset has given a new impetus to bicycle riding as a sport for girls.

THE Australians are not as fast as we are. Their record for the mile is 2 minutes 14 2-5 seconds, which performance was made against time by J. W. Parsons. This rider holds all the records, from two to ten miles, as well. All of them are slower than the American records.

THE difference between "gauge" and "diameter" of cycle tubing is that by "guage" is meant the thickness of the metal, while the "diameter" is the width of the tube itself. It is correct to speak of the "gauge" of spokes and of the actual materials of which the tubes are built, but not in speaking of the tubing itself.

IN replacing a front wheel, care should be taken that the adjusting cone is at the left-hand side. If by mistake it is placed at the right-hand side, and the nut at the end of the spindle becomes loose, it will screw home and lock, with disastrous results. It is a far more common mistake than people imagine. We have seen a machine come back from the repairer's in this condition.

DELANO DIARY

--Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—Olaf Peterson is rearranging and repairing his shoe store, opposite the City Hall for occupancy by A. Sandberg.

—On the inside of this paper will be found something appertaining to the decision of the Supreme Court on the Income Tax Law.

—Several Delanoites have clipped their horses. Some of them looked more comfortable on Wednesday with a blanket on than otherwise.

—A number of new carriages and surries have been seen on our streets lately. Such things sell for a small amount of money now-a days compared with what they brought a few years ago.

—The bicycle craze is in all its glory now and wheels are getting to be quite numerous. Even the ladies have caught the contagion and can be seen frequently keeping up with their male companions in a lively run up the street.

—J. S. Cooper's horse broke into one of the covered drains near the depot, yesterday, while hauling lumber; as he was a quiet animal no harm was done save the loss of time. Had some fractious team met with the accident somebody might have had some damages to pay.

—One of our enterprising merchants left home the other day for the cities expecting his wife to take charge of business in his absence, and did not discover until noon the next day that he had the store key in his pocket. The better half of the family procured assistance and broke into the store and proceeded to wait on customers as if nothing was the matter until the return of her liege lord.

—The street commissioner with a crew of men cleaned up some of the thoroughfares of the village in good shape this week. If several of the streets, especially R. R. Ave. and River street were rounded up in the middle, as they should be, with proper drainage made on each side, they would present a much more citified air; and traveling over them a good share of the time be greatly facilitated.

—The Epworth League succeeded in securing about a dollar a day last week; if they keep up that rate 100 days will find them with their $100 to apply on the M. E. church debt. They expect to have dinner again next Fair Day, for all comers, on the European plan; 5 cts. per dish for whatever you wish. Your dinner will then cost according to the number of dishes you have. As most of the eatables are donated and those serving them work for the good of the cause, what is received is mostly clear gain.

—The Eagle told her readers something about the Oregon Medicine Company's show of "Monday". As the show didn't exhibit before Tuesday the manager suggests that perhaps the Eagle had Delerium Tremens. The Old Bird is in the habit of having things happen at inopportune times. Her readers are used to her pranks. One week she even went so far as to try to make her readers believe that she was the only paper in the county to give people the President's Message the same week Congress got hold of it. Of course the GAZETTE readers know she was away off on that as they had it the same week it was delivered. The Monticello paper also claims to have published it the same week. Correct your mistakes, Eagle.

—Joseph Cramer says he enjoyed a concert by the frogs in the pond on his place Tuesday. He thinks the weather will be warmer after this.

—Easter services are to be held at the M. E. church Sunday evening. A short programme has been prepared. Epworth League at 6:45 as usual.

—The horse power has been placed in position at the round elevator and now Fred's old gray mare is the power that moves the wheat of this vicinity.

—A robin red breast, the first of the season, made his appearance in our yard on Wednesnay, April 10 It looks like spring to see the birds returning to our land.

—One of Joseph Cramer's horses struck another in the head with his front foot, with a heavy shoe on, cutting a hole through the outer table of the skull and making a very sick horse. Joe is at work trying to cure him.

—Roosen's new creamery on the west side is being constructed as rapidly as circumstances will permit. The foundation is built, a well 78 feet deep, with plenty of water has been made. Lumber is on the ground and things look as if the establishment would be ready to receive milk soon.

—Only three more entertainments will be given here by the Oregon Indian Med. Co. Special attractions will be offered on each occasion. Friday night is tooth powder night, Saturday night the ladies woodsawing contest and Monday night a grand Farewell performance will be given. 28-1t.

—Two trains, one of 32 freight cars and the other of 7 passenger cars, and a dining car, forming a Homeseekers excursion, passed through town Thursday last week on its way to North Dakota. They were from Kansas, Illinois and Indiana, and mostly Dunkards with their families and stock and were bound for Turtle Mountain, Devil's Lake and the Red River country.

—Eggs have advanced in price to 9 cents per dozen. Why didn't the Eagle while telling its readers claim the rise for the republicans. Of course we are under the Wilson tariff now, but the Old Bird don't seem to regard that as of any consequence when she wishes to make a point. We think because people eat more eggs during Lent in this community and because some of the hens have commenced setting occasioned the present rise.

—The Public School had a fire alarm sounded and drilled the scholars in getting outdoors as soon as possible. This is sensible and may sometime prove serviceable. But if the hall should happen to be so filled with smoke before starting as to preclude passage through it, it would be found very handy indeed to have a fire escape on either side of the building where the children could be got down safely, just as they have in Minneapolis and other well regulated school districts. A few dollars spent in this way may save the life of your own child, reader. Fire escapes should be provided without delay.

—Prof. L. P. Probst and Prof. Vernon Wilder are said to have had quite a serious collision this morning, while riding their bicycles. Both parties to the accident are rather "high-headed" and quite likely Prof. Probst was seriously deliberating on some new invention in electrics; or on the most satisfactory way to get the most butter out of milk; or mayhap he was discussing in his own mind the "financial question"; while Prof. Vernon, having a bran new wheel and being an amateur rider was possibly trying to keep a "bee line" for some given point expecting the professional to turn out and give him the road. Howsomever Prof. Wilder was seen repairing to a shop with a tire out of fix, seriously hoping it could be mended. Look where you are going and keep your mind on your business when you ride "safeties".

—An entertainment consisting of music, drills, and two comedies will be given at the City Hall on Friday evening, April 19, by the pupils of the Delano High School for the benefit of the school library. The comedies are entitled "A Masterpiece of Diplomacy," and "The Eye of Love."

| | |
|---|---|
| Mr. Roberts | Joseph Kuchenmeister. |
| Willis Campbell | Vernon Wilder. |
| Dr. Lawton | George Kurtz. |
| Dr. Williams | Fay Parslow. |
| Robby Roberts | Tommy Jacobs. |
| Mrs. Campbell | Erma Wilder. |
| Mrs. Roberts | Stella Davis. |

| | |
|---|---|
| Henry, Grand Duke of Grossherzogstein | David LeRoy Sutton. |
| Prince Rupert of Hohenschossburg | Roy F. Wilder. |
| Baron Von Zimmer, Lord High Chamberlain of Hohenschlossburg | John Catlin. |
| Carl Brau, Groom to Prince Rupert | Alva Catlin. |
| Princess Sophia of Grossherzogstein | Anna F. Maxfield. |
| Attalie, her French maid | Amanda Erickson. |

It is expected that Mother Goose will be present and will introduce some of her most famous characters.

The cause is a worthy one and the scholars and teachers have worked hard, and deserve the patronage of the community. A good sized library of properly selected books will be an acquisition to our school for which the scholars will be thankful.

Minnesota S. S. Convention.

The annual convention of the Minnesota S. S. Association will be held at Faribault April 16--18, 1895. Mr. B. F. Jacobs, of Chicago, the veteran leader, and others from abroad will be present. A one and one-third round-trip R. R. rate has been secured and delegates will be entertained free at Faribault. A large, enthusiastic and helpful gathering is assured. Elect your delegates and plan to attend. For further information write

A. D. PERKINS, Sec.,
916 S. E. Fifth St., Minneapolis.

—Chape Farnham, of Rockford, we hear on going to press, received a kick from a horse while he was after a peacock, breaking his leg below the knee.

Personals.

Dr. O. R. Fassett, of Rockford, was in town Tuesday.

W. D. Young made a business trip to Minneapolis Monday.

Miss Hannah Seibel, of Montrose, was in town yesterday.

Esquire Guptil, of Rockford, was a GAZETTE caller this afternoon.

A. F. Shillock, of Minnetrista, was a GAZETTE caller on Saturday.

Rev. J. W. Powell is sick at the home of Cramer Swartout near Montrose.

Geo. P. Schaffer drove over to Watertown Wednesday to attend the funeral of August Mears.

A. F. Corey has completed his term of school near Cokato and is arranging to return to Delano soon.

W. L. Haggerty, Rockford's smiling depot agent, with his nobby rig, is seen on our streets occasionally.

Jacob Yager, of Watertown, was in town yesterday sending telegrams notifying friends of the death of his mother.

Mrs. Joseph Cramer who has been confined to the house so long with Sciatica, was up town Monday, calling on friends.

Mrs. Hawker and Mrs. Church visited Hamline University recently and were highly pleased with things in general.

J. E. Oren, of Minneapolis, on his way to Dassel, stopped a few minutes, Monday to see his old college mate, H. E. Coffin.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Hohl, of Rockford, drove over Monday to the metropolis; Mrs. H. patronized the milliner while Mr. H. called on the GAZETTE.

[Handed in.]

J. H. Walters, of Independence, will begin the erection of a new residence at Rockford City, soon.

Mr. Sam Kimmins and family of Minneapolis, visited his mother-in-law, Mrs. Zimri Willcutt's, family last week.

Ben Willcutt, of Independence, was in Rockford Saturday and purchased a roll of tar paper, to roof his ice house.

School Jottings.

Only eight more weeks of school and then commencement and vacation.

The scholars have been practising coming out of the building at the sound of the fire alarm, which is five taps of the bell. The building was cleared in about one minute.

The number of high school pupils is gradually being lessened but there is still a fair enrollment.

The school entertainment will probably take place in a couple of weeks.

Teacher in History Class, "How was the king protected?"

Pupil, "He was beheaded."

One of the high school pupils has adopted a new way of pronouncing "burlesque". For further information inquire of His Royal Highness.

This has been a dull week in everything at school, especially in lessons.

The club has been dropped until after the entertainment, when it will probably be revived.

County Cullings.

From a list published in last Friday's Pioneer Press we learn that state Auditor Dunn has made loans from the permanent school funds to school districts in different parts of the state. The largest loan is to Itasca county, District No. 1, $6.477; Sherburne, district No. 6, $400; Wright, district No. 66, $500.

The Buffalo Journal last week contained an article on quarantine. We know nothing concerning the cases mentioned. But we do believe that village and township officers often do hire help and go to needless expense in quarantining, in case all people were willing to obey the law; but often ignorance and superstition are to be met with, in persons one would little expect to find tinctured with such things; and an awful carelessness about the consequences of spreading disease and death in the form of Scarlatina or Diphtheria among neighbors' families. Many care nothing for signs posted up but "run right in" as they have been in the habit of doing and sit awhile in spite of the warnings; often they bring their children with them. As soon as it is known that neighbor so and so has a sick child the custom is for those living near by and friends from a distance to take their families and go and see them, remaining all day, often all night, and returning home, in a few days find their own families down with the same disease. Some people seem never to learn anything on this line; or to disregard what they do know; in some cases it looks as if they did so on purpose to experiment and learn for teemselves whether or not diseases were contagious. In such cases it is necessary to arrest a few people for violating the health ordinances and perhaps then all the precautions and expense could be avoided. On the other hand sometimes when a family is quarantined everybody shuns them like they would smallpox; and they are left with no one able to cook; no wood to cook with and sometimes little or nothing to cook. Somebody must look after these things or the family actually suffers for the want of something to eat; town boards often hire someone to see to these things; and where it is necessary they should have their pay.

List of Patents.

Granted to inventors this week. Reported by C. A. Snow & Co., Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C. J. Bigelow, Minneapolis, threading device for sewing machines; H. B. Fuller, St. Paul, Detergent compound; R. C. Kruschke, Duluth, portable bicycle support; E. J. Woolf, Minneapolis, compound engine.

Attorney General's Opinion.

Some time since a bill rendered by Justice Walter to a litigant in his court, who had costs to pay, was published in the GAZETTE. On the advice of the attorney for the defense exceptions were taken to a part of the bill. Among other items was one of 15 cts. per folio for taking down testimony at request of the attorneys in the case. The matter was left out by mutual consent to a former Justice of the Peace, who decided that the bill should be paid with the exception of the item mentioned, which was done. Justice Walter wrote the Attorney General concerning the matter and has handed us the following letter:

STATE OF MINNESOTA.
ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE.
ST PAUL. April 4, 1895.

R. M. WALTERS, Esq.,
Justice of the Peace, Delano.

Dear Sir:--When a Justice of the Peace has, pursuant to General Statutes of 1878, Ch. 65, Sec. 116, furnished a transcript of the evidence, he is entitled to compensation therefor at the rate of 15 cts per folio, pursuant to chapter 70, section 17, and may tax it as costs against the losing party.

I am,

Very truly yours,
H. W. CHILDS,
Attorney General.

Senator Culkin Ill.

President Day at the opening of the senate this morning announced that Senator Culkin, of Wright county, was seriously ill with typhoid fever and would not be able to attend any more sessions of the senate.

Senator Masterman moved that a committee of three be appointed to draft proper resolutions of sympathy.

President Day announced as the committee Senators Masterman, Wyman and Schaller, and the committee subsequently reported:

Whereas, the senate of the state of Minnesota has been informed that one of the members, Hon. W. E. Culkin, is dangerously ill of typhoid fever, and that he will be unable to attend any further sessions of this body; and

Whereas, the members of this body who have during the past three months learned to know and appreciate the many excellent qualities of our afflicted colleague both as a man and as a hard working, just, able, and fearlessly honest legislator; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, by the senate of Minnesota, that we tender to Hon. W. E. Culkin, and to his family, our sympathy, and that we hope that his present illness will terminate favorably, so that he may be speedily restored to his family, and that this senate may again welcome him to his duties in this body, which he honors by his membership.

The resolutions were adopted by a unanimous rising vote and an engrossed copy of the resolutions will be sent to Senator Culkin.--St. Paul Dispatch.

SAVE UP YOUR ROCKS.

When the world is sunny,
Save up your rocks!
When you're out of money,
Nothin's ever funny—
Not a bit o' honey:
Save up your rocks!

Time has got a sickle—
Save up your rocks!
If you need a nickle
You'll be in a pickle:
Won't laugh when they tickle—
Save up your rocks!

Take what life is bringin'—
Save up your rocks!
See the flowers a-springin';
Arms of love a clingin';
Hear the birds a-singin';
"Save up your rocks!"
—Atlanta Constitution.

Among Our Exchanges.

A request from the Y. M. C. A. for the usual annual appropriation was read, and a motion was made and carried unanimously to appropriate $100. for the benefit of that organization.—Brainerd Journal.

Mr. Brandt has purchased the interest of Mr. Herrmann in the Norwood Times, and will hereafter "go it alone." Mr. B. is a good writer and gets up a first class local journal. We wish him continued success in the management of the Times--with riches and honors thrown in.—Valley Herald.

Co-operative Creamery Exempt from the Income Tax.

Collector Kelly, of the U. S. internal revenue district of Iowa, has ruled that co-operative creameries are not subject to the income tax, thus disagreeing with collector Harries, of this state. The former is probably correct although the commissioner at Washing may have to be called on finally to settle the matter. In his letter collector Kelly says:

"It is incorrect to include the cost of all milk handled as a part of the expenses. All operating expenses, which might be covered in the cost of your creamery, by the salary of your secretary, compensation of buttermaker, and perhaps an assistant to the same, the price paid to milk haulers, interest or debt due by the creamery, and those added to the cost price of milk and all deducted from the gross receipts, will show pretty nearly the net income. The tax is intended to be levied upon the net income, profit or gain of the corporation, company or association."

The Chicago Produce, from which we gather this information, says: "No co-operative creamery makes above the cost of the milk handled an income to cover more than the running expense. This ruling, therefore, seems to settle the whole matter."—Litchfield Independent.

TARIFF IS A TAX.

Minnesota Now Has Two U. S. Senators who are aware of that fact.

CHINA has been giving up her tails to Japan at a rapid rate; but has now succeeded in securing peace by, among other things, giving her two hundred million more taels.

THE gold bugs are claiming President Cleveland as one of their number and some of them are booming him for a third term as President. This is the height of foolishness in this democratic country; people don't want a king; neither do they care to discuss even the possibility of giving any man a third term as President.

THE Union League, of Minneapolis, met Monday evening and are reported to have discussed the question: "Should the Fifty-fourth Congress re-enact the McKinley tariff bill?" It is said the club was nearly unanimously in favor of so doing; raising a few articles still higher than before. This smacks loudly as being a boom for McKinley for the nominee for President in '96.

THE man that writes all the sensational rumors about Secretary Gresham defying England; the United States taking Cuba; the Catholics capturing Canada and such like, should be relegated to a back seat, somewhere. What's the use of keeping the people's nerves at their fullest tension all the time? Why not give people a day off occasionally? Go a fishing. Do something. Anything for a change.

REPUBLICAN politicians are very inconsistent sometimes. At the last Presidential election some of them went so far as to send out circulars, on the back of which was printed the United States flag and the flag of England, and the question asked, which flag are you for. Now they are howling that English financiers do not like the tendency of the United States toward free silver. From their own theories this should be the best of reasons for adopting it.

THE city papers are trying hard to do "Coin" up, in regard to his lectures on the coin question. "Coin" may make some misstatements, we are not prepared to say; but we don't think the average voter in this part of the country will consider him any further from the truth in most of his statements than is the St. Paul Pioneer Press, when, on the subject of prices it says: "But not all the prices have come down. A good many of them have kept up, and the price of labor, the most important of all is steadily rising. The argument of universal misfortune from a general fall of prices is illogical and untrue."

THE Aitkin Republican is putting in its best licks to prevent the Wright County Times and other monoplistically inclined sheets from educating the voters in the wrong way concerning the taxing of unused railroad lands. It claims the northern portion of the state would be benefitted very much by the new law and asks people to support it. The whole question seems to hang on whether the new law would do away with the present tax on earnings of roads. If it would people dont want a change; if not they think railroad lands should be taxed same as other lands are taxed. It seems as if some authority ought to settle this point before time to vote comes round.

INDEPENDENT voters appear to be becoming more numerous. People read the papers, keep posted on the great and live questions of the day. Every man has opinions of his own on some of the issues liable to come up for settlement at the next Presidential election. Very few can be found in line and perfectly agreeing on all issues. Thus it is getting to be almost every man for himself. If some one can formulate a creed of sufficient congruity to entice the majority of voters to support it, the thing is done. Old parties, of every persuasion are rended in twain. None of them can tell which side of any question their party is going to fall on. Perhaps they will feel like falling into line when the time comes and marching to the polls with the party of their previous preference, and perhaps they won't. Everybody is waiting to see how the cat will jump. Nobody seems to be willing to express themselves on all questions. They will on one or two. But invariably something seems to remain in the background; awaiting future development. The latent power of the parties seems to be the power behind the throne. The power that has got to shape the course and steer the party on to success or ignominious defeat.

Money! Money!

ARTICLE IV.

Webster's International Dictionary defines:

BUSHEL. A dry measure containing four pecks, eight gallons or thirty-two quarts. It further says: The Winchester bushel formerly used in England contained 2150.42 cubic inches, being the volume of a cylinder 18½ inches in internal diameter and eight inches in depth. The standard bushel measures prepared by the United States Government and distributed to the States hold each 77.6274 lbs. of distilled water at 37.8 Fahr. and 30 inches atmospheric pressure, being the equivalent of the Winchester bushel. The imperial bushel now in use in England is larger than the Winchester bushel, containing 2218.2 cubic inches, or 80 lbs of water at 62 deg. Fahr.

YARD. A measure of length, equaling three feet, or thirty-six inches, being the standard of English and American measure.

DOLLAR. A silver coin of the United States, containing 371.25 grains of silver and 41.25 grains of alloy, that is, having a total weight of 412.5 grains. A gold coin of the United States containing 23.22 grains of gold and 2.58 grains of alloy, that is, having a total weight of 25.8 grains, nine-tenths fine. It is no longer coined.

Thus we see that a bushel is a fixed standard of measure; very carefully arranged; so that deviation therefrom is next to impossible; that, although the standard is water, it answers the purposes of measurement for some things; that although the standard, as made, is not changed, all commodities that are measured by this standard have their ups and downs, when measured by other standards, allowed, as by weight. We find the farmer's wheat weighing 58 lbs to the bushel, passed through the elevator and sold at 60 lbs. to the bushel. When measured in the half bushel oats are heaped up more than wheat, yet a bushel weighs but 32 pounds; potatoes are heaped up and weigh 60 lbs to the bushel. What a bushel is by weight, the other standard allowed for measurement, don't always prove it comes up to the standard of a bushel of water, as required by law. Some seasons wheat from the threshing machine weighs 60 lbs; other seasons or from other fields it weighs but 56 lbs. The same is true of most products of the soil. This has caused people to adopt the double standard of measure and weight, for commodities that can be valued by the two methods. People like to have the two standards of measure agree as nearly as possible; but have learned that it is not always possible for them to do so, and so make the best they can of it.

Many things are sold by the yard. Most woolen and cotton and other goods that are universally used, are sold by the yard. A yard is three feet or thirty-six inches, and is generally accepted as such; yet many kinds of goods are required to weigh so much per yard, and thus, often, such goods are weighed out, enabling the purchaser to get a few yards more where the manufacturer has made the goods short of weight. Thus in measuring goods that can be measured by the yard we find a double standard made use of on some occasions.

Articles of merchandise that weigh a pound, or 7000 grains of wheat, vary in value, when compared with other substances, and this is so to such an extent that they are not always exchanged by the pound, or by the grain; but their value is determined in other ways. Some potatoes, even, are worth in the market, 10 cts per bushel more than others of the same weight, or even heavier ones. A double standard is here found in use.

A dollar is defined as being a silver coin of the United States containing a certain number of grains of silver and a certain unmber of grains of alloy, and weighing in all 412.5 grains. A gold standard was also adopted, but seems from Webster's dictionary to have gone out of use, though the five, ten and twenty dollar gold pieces are still in circulation. So at the present time the actual standard of value is the big round piece we are familiar with as the dollar and which serves our purposes well, at present. The only trouble being their scarcity and the difficulty of keeping enough of them on hand, or in the pocket, to make a first class jingle.

The leading politicians are looking about for some way to carry on an exciting campaign on the money question and seem to think it necessary to offer this, that and the other excuse for changing the standard. It matters little what the standard is, so the people are willing to accept that standard as the standard of value for the products of their farms, workshops and for their services and if the same standard will be used when they wish to purchase the necessities and luxuries of life.

It is impossible, apparently, to fix upon any standard that will keep the same value; and hard to have two standards agreeing on all occasions. As the bushel of wheat varies in weight so will the fifty yard roll of woolens weigh a trifle more or less; so will the greater abundance of gold or silver in the market at any time tend to change the value of the metal, but, so long as the United States stamp is on the piece of metal it may fluctuate, may rise or fall, it is worth its face value in this country.

Gold and silver have since the foundation of our country been used for money; both did service in other countries long before; both are now used in many countries, and one or the other in many more. Both are now recognized as standards in our land and there appears to us no good reason for changing the double standard.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, April 12, 1895.

Democratic Senators are as a rule in favor of the republicans reorganizing the Senate committees and taking the responsibilities for legislation at the next session of Congress, but they do not favor the proposal that has been informally made to ignore the right of Senator Morrill, of Vt., to become chairman of the finance committee in order to give that place to Senator Sherman. Senator Voorhees, the present chairman of that committee, having said that he expected to turn the committee over to Senator Morrill at the beginning of the next session, was asked if he thought Senator Morrill would relinquish his claim to the chairmanship in order to give it to Sherman. He replied: "I certainly do not. Why should he? He is as vigorous as many younger men, and any effort to displace him would be shameful, after his many years of service on the committee. I should personally resent any movement of that character."

So much has been said about what the Finance committee may do at the next session of Congress that Senator Voorhees' diagnosis of that committee is interesting as well as valuable. He says, "It is a silver committee now, and it will continue to be a silver committee regardless of the views of the addition which the republicans may make to it. Mr. McPherson a democrat, is the only member of the committee, as at present organized, who will not be a member of the next Congress, and he is the only democratic member who is opposed to silver. The other five democratic members will, with Senator Jones, of Nevada, constitute a quorum of the committee, even if the vacancy should be filled by the appointment of an anti-silver republican, but if the silver republicans should succeed in getting one of their own number on the committee the silver majority will be just that much more pronounced."

No official under the Treasury department who may hereafter get into trouble through any sort of delinquency or misconduct will be allowed to resign. Secretary Carlisle has issued an order to all the chiefs of bureaux, that in such cases recommendation for the removal of the offending person must be made to him. This may appear to be a small matter, but it is really an important reform. It has been the custom for many years to allow employees detected in some dishonorable transaction to retire from office by the resignation route, leaving nothing upon the records to indicate that the retirement has been under a cloud, and complaints have been made by those who have afterwards lost money by supposing these men were honorable because of their department record. The record will in future show these things as they really are.

Senator Lindsey, of Kentucky, who arrived in Washington this week, direct from home, where he has been since the adjournment of Congress, says the Kentucky campaign appears to be, up to this time, more talked about in Washington than in Kentucky.

Hon. E. C. Wall, the Wisconsin member of the National democratic committee is in Washington. He expressed himself as follows about the calling of that silver convention by the Illinois democracy this summer to consider the silver question: "I don't see what they are driving at or what good they can accomplish by such an action. It occurs to me that it is premature and unnecessary. Speaking for what I believe to be the sentiment of the democratic party in Wisconsin, I have no hesitation in saying that the flat silver craze has no following with us, and it is not probable that it ever will have. Our people, and especially the German element, are dead set against all financial heresies.

Probably the busiest official in Washington just now is Internal Revenue Commissioner Miller, who is engaged in making the instructions for the collection of the income tax conform to the decision of the Supreme Court. He has the benefit of the advice of President Cleveland and all the members of the Cabinet, but it is a hard task all the same.

If there was ever a more unpopular decision of the Supreme Court handed down than that declaring incomes derived from rents and state and munipal bonds constitutionally exempt from Federal taxation nobody in Washington remembers it. The question of the constitutionality of the remainder of the income tax was not decided, the court standing 4 to 4 with Justice Jackson absent on account of sickness. This leaves the decision of the lower court, affirming the constitutionality of the law, in force, but it also leaves a cloud over the law that will remain until the question is decided by the Supreme Court, with a full bench sitting.

The Poison of Alcohol.

Alcohol is so insidious and so deadly in its character that there is no other article or material in nature that is so well calculated to produce disease, and consequent crime and misery. Its acrid, poisonous nature is also attested by the most eminent scientists as the most virulent poison. One half ounce of pure alcohol taken into the system will paralyze the nerve centers and kill just as surely and as quickly as a stroke of lightning; and the same poison when taken in the form of whisky, beer, wine, brandy, or other alcoholic beverage, is so antagonistic to the vitality of the system that its effects cannot be entirely eliminated even by total abstinence, but will remain in the system, more or less, making it less able to resist rheumatism, diphtheria, pneumonia, or other dangerous diseases.—From "The Crime of Liquor Selling," in Demorest's Magazine for May.

A fine, large House, has the Public School;
And children, educated to run, by rule;
A back door, or escape, would be a good thing,
In case the fire alarm ever had to ring.

Resolutions on Death of Comrade W. F. Ingerson.

HEADQUARTERS GORDON GRANGER POST, No. 120, G. A. R.

Preamble and resolutions passed by the members of Gordon Granger Post at their regular meeting on April 13, 1895, on the death of W. F. Ingerson, an ex-soldier of the war of the Rebellion and at one time an honored member of this Post:

Be it resolved by the members of this Post that we are in heartfelt sympathy with the family and near relatives of Comrade W. F. Ingerson in the loss they have sustained of a husband, father and brother.

And be it further resolved that we offer those words of comfort and condolence to the family and friends of the deceased, not as a matter of form and outward show, but offer them as words of comfort and sympathy to those in sorrow and affliction who have been bereft of a husband, father, brother and friend.

And be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased and also a copy to the Delano Eagle and BUFFALO GAZETTE for publication.

Be it further resolved that these preambles and resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Post.

JOHN H. MCGARY,
JACOB BEAL.
Com. on Resolutions.

Accepted and adopted by the Post as read.

Certain fool friends of President Cleveland are beginning to boom him for a third term. Better let the President rest on his laurels. Racing, even presidential racing, is dangerous business, and the old fellows who have done a lot of it ought to stay out.—Globe.

Some newspapers are wasting space in discussing at length a third term for President Cleveland. There is no need of words. Mr. Cleveland would never consent to it, and any party which attempted it would be everlastingly snowed under.—St. Cloud Times.

Public sentiment is everywhere throughout the country changing with wonderful rapidity in favor of the double standard of gold and silver as redemption money, instead of the single gold standard. There never was such a revolution of public sentiment on any public question since this government was founded. The dismal failure of the single standard as thus far tried has convinced the public mind of the utter hopelessness of restoring prosperity to this country while the single standard remains.—Brainerd Journal.

Protection papers of the Ledger and Review stripe, which cried long and loud about the destruction of the sheep industry of this country by taking the tariff off wool and advised farmers to sell their sheep at once for 50 cents or a dollar a head, because if they didn't they would have to give them away later on, are not explaining the present situation of sheep being higher in price than for years and still going up. They shed copious tears of sympathy for the poor sheep farmer, and those who followed their advice and got rid of their sheep now see that they were gulled by false prophets.—Litchfield Independent.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.

Square Type.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the other sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and it will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put it in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of a whole family.

Edison has his phonograph cone more under his own control, and he says he is going to drop nickel-in-the-slots and go in for household machines that will take an entire novel or opera. He will have it so that a phonograph will read "Trilby" to the family circle of an evening, or repeat to them a grand opera entire. There are immense possibilities in this, and the confidence in Edison to open them is undiminished.

Rev. A. B. Earle, who died recently in Newton, Mass., was one of the successful evangelists of the country. He had preached for sixty-four years and in that time had held 39,330 public meetings, preached 21,840 sermons, traveled 370,000 miles, and added 160,000 members to the church, of whom 400 became ministers. About once in every six months the Washington society gossips announce that Mrs. Sheridan, the widow of the general, is engaged to be married. Young, attractive and with a comfortable fortune, she has many admirers, and has undoubtedly had a number of suitors, but has apparently made no engagement. In denying the latest report that she was engaged she said to a friend: "I'd rather be the widow of Phil Sheridan than the wife of any man living."

The ancient custom of kissing the Bible in taking oath has been abolished in Pennsylvania. It was found that the microbes infesting the stock copy of the Scriptures which was kept in the courtrooms for the purpose of adding to the solemnity of the oath-taking formality in no way increased the credibility of the kisser, while it was a material aid to the spread of disease. A witness, says an exchange, who could not tell the truth without kissing the book would lie with equal facility if he were compelled to eat it.

Col. John A. Cockerill, in a letter from Yokohama to the New York Herald, says that "everything in Japan is for country; everything for the emperor." He also gives incidents showing the unselfish patriotism of the Japanese, soldiers anxious to die for their country and parents rejoicing rather than mourning over their sons killed in battle. It is not surprising that the victory should be with such a people in their war with China. They represent just the opposite of the Chinese, who have no respect for their soldiers, and treat them little better than slaves.

A Sensational Tragedy Enacted at Covington, Ky.

Bank Cashier Sanford Attempts the Life of State Senator Goebel and Is Himself Shot Dead by the Latter.

Covington, Ky., April 13.—State Senator Goebel shot and killed Cashier John Sanford, of the Farmers' and Traders' bank, Thursday afternoon in front of the First national bank of this city. Senator Goebel, accompanied by Attorney General Hendrick, of Kentucky, and Frank Helm, president of the First national bank, was en route to the bank. When they reached the door there stood Sanford. He shook hands with Hendricks, using his left hand. Then he asked Goebel if he wrote an article attacking him. Goebel answered: "I did." Immediately Sanford fired, the ball passing through Goebel's pantaloons. Quick as a flash Goebel fired. To do so he had to place the pistol beneath Helm's chin. The ball crashed through Sanford's forehead. Sanford fell in the doorway of the bank, blood oozing from an ugly wound. Helm's chin was badly powder-burned.

For years Theodore Hallam and Harvey Meyers, two of the brightest lawyers in the south, have been the democratic leaders of this county. Goebel appeared on the field while they were at the zenith of their career and under the guise of an anti-ringster, fought for prestige in the party. He was frequently rewarded most generously and came deservedly popular. Personal ill-feeling naturally resulted and it was not confined to the leaders. Partisans sprung from every quarter. Sanford was one of these and he espoused the cause of Hallam and Meyers.

Personal encounters and convention fights were numerous. It is not an exaggeration to say that a hundred citizens have constantly carried pistols for the past three years, expecting an attack any moment.

Last Saturday an article appeared in a Covington paper called the Ledger, in which a bitter attack was made upon Sanford. The headline of the article referred to Sanford in the most depraved language. The publication aroused Sanford and his friends, who declared that they would have satisfaction from the author. It was generally said about the streets of Covington that Senator Goebel was at least responsible for the publication of the article, and that neither Mr. Goebel nor his friends took the trouble to deny the allegation.

Covington, Ky., April 15.—A coroner's jury has cleared Senator Goebel of the shooting of Cashier Sanford Thursday afternoon. At an inquest held Friday morning the jury found that Sanford came to his death from a wound caused by a pistol ball fired from the hands of William Goebel in self-defense.

PLEAD GUILTY.

Great Northern Strikers Fined for Obstructing the Mails.

Fergus Falls, Minn., April 13.—In the United States court Thursday Grant Mason, of Barnesville, was tried for obstructing the mails during the Great Northern strike last April. The testimony was brief, and the jury found him guilty. His conviction was followed by the conspiracy case against seven Barnesville men, and during its progress the defendants all agreed to plead guilty of obstructing the mails.

The conspiracy case was stopped, and after addressing the men briefly, Judge Nelson sentenced each to pay a fine of $100 and until the fine was paid each to be committed in the Otter Tail county jail. Sentence, however, was not to become operative till moved by the district attorney. The effect of this is to allow the men to pay their fines in installments. Two paid in full and the others paid half and will pay the balance before September.

NORWAY'S CRISIS.

Trouble with Sweden May Cause King Oscar to Abdicate.

Berlin, April 17.—The Frankfurter-Zeitung's correspondent in Stockholm says: King Oscar takes the gloomiest view of the present crisis and probably would abdicate should it come to an open rupture. The crown prince is much displeased with the malcontent Norweigans, and would not yield an inch if his father should abdicate. It is reported that the Sweedish general staff declare that Norway could be easily occupied, but do not deny that the real difficulty would begin afterward.

Decided to Die Together.

St. Louis, April 15.—At 3 o'clock Friday afternoon the dead bodies of a man and a woman were found lying side by side on Jacob Duffy's farm, a few miles west of the city on the Walton road. Their throats were cut and their faces stained with blood. In the right hand of the man was a revolver. Each was shot through the heart. Pinned to a ribbon was this note:

"April 9.—We have both decided to die together, and if one or the other should happen to recover, the other shall not be held responsible for the deed. We both are going to take poison and I will do the shooting. We are not doing this on account of any love affair, but simply because we do not want to live any longer. This is all we have to say, and hope there will be no trouble. We remain as ever, yours truly,

"Mr. Louis Frank.

"Miss Kate Kolb."

Sudden Death of a Prominent Journalist.

New York, April 16.—James W. Scott, proprietor and editor of the Chicago Times-Herald, died suddenly of apoplexy in his room in the Holland house, Thirtieth street and Fifth avenue, at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. His death was as peaceful as it was unexpected.

Bit the Dust.

Kansas City, Mo., April 13.—A special from Hennessey, O. T., says: The Lacey mail carrier brings news of another battle between the Dover train robbers and United States marshals, in which two more outlaws have been killed.

Lots of Early Strawberries.

Madison, Miss., April 13.—The first shipment of strawberries made from Mississippi this season was made Thursday by R. C. Lee, of this place, consigned to a Chicago firm. The early crop this season will be unusually plentiful.

Death of Prof. Dana.

New Haven, Conn., April 15.—Prof James D. Dana, of Yale university, probably the greatest scientist in America, died Sunday night at his home in this city.

DEMAND FOR HIGHER WAGES.

Dun Thinks It an Obstacle to Trade Improvement.

New York, April 15.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

"Progress toward better business continues, but is slow and meets many obstacles. In speculative aspects and in wholesale demand for goods, the week shows improvement. Money markets are undisturbed, and a little more active. But among the chief obstacles is the anxiety of operatives to secure better wages, even while many manufacturing works are running without profit and others at the risk of loss. In a number of establishments better wages have been conceded, thus increasing the purchasing power of the people, but strikes have largely overbalanced settlements, several of importance having thrown about 12,000 workers out of employment this week.

"Failures for the first four days of April showed liabilities of $1,188,523, of which $445,840 were of manufacturing, and $742,683 of trading concerns. Failures for the week were 207 in the United States, against 218 last year, and 27 in Canada against 34 last year."

Bradstreet's says:

"The feature in trade circles is found in the prices movement, more particularly those for cattle, dressed beef and petroleum. Drought, low prices and 'hard times' within two years have resulted in a shorter supply of cattle, prospectively 30 per cent. less than last year. Live cattle are $1.00 higher per 100 poun is than last year, and $1 higher than the lowest point this year. Dressed beef is 2¼ cents higher than the average last year, the highest since 1885. The comparative scarcity of high grade cattle is emphasized by the fact that present quotations, when made in previous periods of scarcity, have never failed to bring a supply when one existed.

"Central western cities, notably St. Louis Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Louisville and Detroit, report improvement in business and confidence as to the future. Greatest activity is noticed in dry goods, hats, shoes and leaf tobacco.

"Recent rains have produced a cheerful feeling in the agricultural region tributary to Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth. The consequent improvement is not as great as hoped because of activity in planting. The movement of farm machinery, dry goods, groceries, hardware, paints and oils is most active.

"Among more important southern cities reporting actual gains in the movement of merchandise are Atlanta, Augusta, Savannah and Galveston, but improvement there is slight. The outlook is regarded more cheerfully at New Orleans, where sugar bounty disbursements are expected soon, but at Jacksonville and Birmingham general trade is quiet, and in some lines slow. Nashville and Memphis retain improvement previously recorded. At Chattanooga dry goods and hardware are relatively most active.

TWO BATTLES.

Cuban Rebels Win One, the Government Wins the Other.

Tampa, Fla., April 12.—Late reports from Havana assert that the steamer Manuilita has just arrived from Santiago with more than 300 wounded Spanish soldiers. They were taken to the hospitals there because the hospitals at Santiago are crowded. A letter from Santiago mentions a battle at Trosones, near the Canto river, in which the Spanish general Salceda, with 1,000 men, engaged a band of the revolutionists under Rabi. The Spanish loss was said to be 380, while the Cuban loss was four killed and thirty-nine wounded. The Spanish troops were mostly boys, the letter states, and in the battle pity was taken on many who were caught and their lives were spared.

Havana, April 15.—Gen. La Chambre, who commands the government troops in Santiago province, reports that on April 10 a body of Spanish troops and volunteers attacked a band of insurgents at Palmarito. One of the insurgent leaders was Jose Maceo.

The insurgent chief, Francisco Estrada, has surrendered to the government, and Jose Maceo has fled alone to the woods.

VIOLENT EARTHQUAKES.

Southern Austria, Northern Italy and Sicily Thoroughly Shaken.

Vienna, April 17.—The full extent of the damage done by the earthquakes throughout Austria and in Italy is not likely to be known for some days. The earthquake shocks were generally felt throughout the southern portion of Austria, and were especially violent in the duchy of Carniola and along the Austrian littoral. At Laibach ten persons were severely injured. All the reports received describe the movements of the earth as having been undulating. The duration of the shock was from five to twenty-five seconds. In many places along the lines of the Southern railway rocks were rolled upon the rails, obstructing traffic. In the south the earthquakes were felt as far as Verona, Arco and Meran. North they reached Vienna and East Agram, Fiume and Abbazia.

THE LOST CHICORA.

Wreckage from the Ill-Fated Vessel Comes Ashore.

New Buffalo, Mich., April 16.—Since the wind has shifted Chicora wreckage is coming ashore in vast quantities here. Sunday afternoon a large piece of the roof of the pilot house was found. It had been chopped away from the sides of the pilot house, showing plainly that the crew had made an effort to save the noble craft.

The front flagstaff was found Saturday afternoon and the lid to a sailor's chest was found Sunday morning, also several broken clothes baskets and portions of chairs and stools. Wreckage is found in such large quantities that people with wagons are gathering it up for firewood.

A Miscarriage of Justice.

Topeka, Kan., April 12.—In an interview Chief Justice Horton of the Kansas supreme court explains away the general acceptation that the court had recognized hypnotism as a defensive plea in a murder case. The facts in the case are these: A man named Gray procured a gun and incited a man named McDonald to kill one Patton. Gray made McDonald believe that Patton was traducing the character of Mrs. McDonald. McDonald, who did the killing, was acquitted. Gray was convicted in the lower court and the supreme court affirmed the decision. Judge Horton says: "The McDonald case was not presented to the supreme court. If it had been and the same evidence presented to us the supreme court, had it the power, would have ruled for McDonald's conviction. The acquittal of McDonald seems to have been a miscarriage of justice."

Swept by a Torrent.

Reports up to midnight on the 15th said that the rivers and streams in northern New England were maddened torrents. Great damage has resulted to the lumber interests, farmers and manufacturers. Miles of railroad track were under water and scores of bridges carried away, and vast drives of logs swept down and out to sea. Telegraph poles were down in many valleys. No mails from points beyond 40 miles of Boston, save south, were received in that city. Several New Hampshire, Maine and Vermont cities are miniature Venices. Mills were forced to shut down, business to be suspended generally, and families to remove from their homes in boats to houses on the high land.

QUEER MEXICAN ANIMALS.

Deer That Lope, Squirrels That Live in Holes and Rats in Trees.

We have been for the last week preparing for the journey to Culiancan, state of Sinaloa, which involved much hunting and fishing in order to prepare the necessary subsistence. The forests abound in deer, wild hog, squirrels and rats. The deer are small and quite tame. Their tails are from twelve to eighteen inches in length and white as snow. If frightened they curl their tails up over their backs, as if to make sure that you should not lose sight of them, and lope away; but, unlike the North American deer, they are liable to stop short and turn round to see if you have taken the trouble to follow them. They do not bound five feet into the air when started, and then take another kick and then go up six feet higher, as did the deer to which the early settlers of Ohio were accustomed, but lope gracefully away, making sure of it that if you should lose sight of them the fault is yours.

A native, perhaps not the best authority, assured us that his tongue did not work at random when he said that no person had ever eaten finer flavored meat than that of the Mexican deer. We experienced no difficulty in securing a supply of venison in the valley of the Yaqui, but one day the monotony of deer hunting was broken by a snort near by in a thicket, which caused me to halt and to face the left suddenly, and listen to the beating of my heart. The snort was caused by the forcing of air through the nose of a beast and was upon the instant answered by many similar snorts in various directions near by. Indistinctly seeing a black object move, I fired a bullet into it. It was a lucky shot. The wild boar fell dead.

A moment later we were aware of having been very imprudent. Had the hog been wounded instead of killed the other boars would have charged the enemy, and there would have been no escape for him. They are armed with two pairs of circular tusks, about three inches in length, that come together, passing at the ends and so worn by contact for the distance of an inch that they cut like shears and are as sharp as a knife. The average weight of the boars is about one hundred pounds. Their bristles are about four and one-half inches long, and black. Their sense of smell, sight and hearing is very fine. They can run almost as fast as a deer. Their skin is loose upon their bodies, like that of a deer. Their mode of attack is to cut with their shear-like tusks as they dash past, then to whirl and come again.

Squirrels are abundant in these forests. They are beatifully mottled with white and gray, and, although strongly resembling the gray squirrel in the United States, they never climb trees but burrow in the ground, seeming to have exchanged customs with the Mexican rat, who is not only an excellent climber, but builds his nest of leaves high up in the branches of the trees, from which he can only be dislodged by fire, appearing to regard his nest as the last resort, and from which he departs not until singed. To fire him out, the "mecha" is used, a name given to flint and steel and cotton fuse, and indispensable in the native's outfit. These rats are very numerous, differing from the United States city rat only in being a trifle shorter; but having much larger eyes.

Reptiles and insects are numerous and various. A black bug an inch and a half tall, grown, it seems, for some special purpose not ascertained, has excited my wonder and admiration. It has three pairs of legs, its forelegs being short, its middle legs considerably longer, and its hind legs so long that when it gets up to travel its body is at an angle of seventy-five degrees, head being downward. Its tail is armed with a sharp spike. Why should it travel with its spear-like tail stabbing at the sky and its lips trailing in the dust? We are sure that it is not because it feels humble, for when frightened it stands upon its head and cuts fantastic figures with its tail and heels.

A very active snake, known as the "ratcatcher," thrives in Mexico. It is an expert climber of trees, is about six feet in length and one and one-half inches in diameter at the largest part, the tail tapering to a whiplike point. Small head, light red neck and belly and dark brown back distinguish it from almost any other serpent. It is not poisonous and feeds upon rats and birds. Darting upon a rat, in an instant its body encircles it and crushes it by mere process of tight-lacing, when it proceeds to swallow the unlucky rat or bird, as the case may be, without chewing. Then, it is error to say it smiles, but a more pleased expression of countenance is observed, indicating perfect satisfaction, as it gracefully encircles a tree, ascends to an outstretched limb, extends its body at full length upon it, and for a long time is forgetful, it is hoped, that it is only a ratcatcher.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

That Tired Feeling

Is a certain indication of impure and impoverished blood. If your blood could always be rich and pure, full of the red corpuscles upon which its vitality depends, you would never be Weak, or Nervous! Boils, pimples, scrofula, salt rheum, would never trouble you. But our mode of living, shut in all winter in poorly ventilated homes and shops, depletes the blood and there is loss of appetite and weakness. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the standard remedy for this condition. It purifies, vitalizes and enriches the blood, overcomes that tired feeling, builds up the nerves and gives perfect health. Read this:

"Our daughter, Blanche, when four years of age had a humor break out on her hands and face, which our physician pronounced eczema. If the cold air reached her face or hands they would swell up, look almost purple, and headed blisters would form and break, Discharging a watery fluid, and the burning and itching would drive her nearly wild. Unless we incased her little hands she would tear patches of skin from her face and hands. We tried many doctors and many remedies and at last gave the case up as hopeless. But our daughter Cora tried Hood's Sarsaparilla, to cure a scrofulous lump near the left breast which caused her much pain and after taking 4 bottles it disappeared. Blanche, who is now eleven, had spent seven years of suffering, so I concluded to give her Hood's Sarsaparilla. She took 5 bottles and her face is smooth and soft as a baby's, the color of a rose petal. Her hands are soft and white, where four months ago they were blue and red and calloused nearly like leather. I cannot express my gratitude by pen or mouth. It seems a miracle and our friends are surprised." Mrs. Anna L. Clark, 401 E. 4th St., Duluth, Minn.

THESE ARE NOT LOST.

The look of sympathy, the gentle word,
Spoken so low that only angels heard
The secret act of pure self-sacrifice,
Unseen by men but marked by angels' eyes—
These are not lost.

The happy scenes that gladdened all our youth,
When dreams had less of self and more of truth,
The childhood faith so tranquil and so sweet
Which sat like Mary at the Master's feet—
These are not lost.

The kindly plan devised for others' good,
So seldom guessed, so little understood
The quiet, steadfast love that strove to win
Some wanderer from the way of sin—
These are not lost.

Not lost, O Lord! for in Thy city bright
Our eyes shall see the past by clearer light,
And things long hidden from our gaze below
Thou wilt reveal, and we shall surely know
These are not lost

KATE'S FAIRY CASTLE.

"I DON'T believe in love in a cottage," said Kate Mayo, looking defiantly round. "I mean to marry rich."

"Oh, Kate!" cried Helen Dewey, reproachfully.

Miss Mayo shook the golden locks that hung like sunshine over her pretty forehead, while a mischievous sparkle came into the blue eyes; she rather seemed to enjoy the consternation she had created.

"Well," said Kate, "I mean it. Who wants to be a drudge, in an ill-fitting dress and last year's style bonnet, just because some idiotic young man asks you to be his wife? My taste is for lace and moire and bonnets that look as if they had floated across the sea on a Parisian zephyr! Moreover, I have a fancy for brown stone houses and coupes, and a box at the opera and a maid."

Kate Mayo spoke as if fate were at her own command, as if she were crowned queen of her destiny. And she was, in so far as wit and beauty may constitute the scepter of one's own existence. Tall and gracefully formed as a Greek statue, her loveliness took you as it were by storm. She was fair as the waxen leaf of a white rose, with pure, straight features, cheeks just tinted with the faint delicate pink that comes and goes like a fleeting shadow, and a little ripe mouth that made one think of the crimson sugar hearts that little children delight in. And Kate had been sent up from the old Mayo farm to see what a winter in New York would do for her, in the way of a life establishment; and Kate had some very decided ideas of her own upon the all-important subject.

"My dear," said Aunt Dewey, solemnly, "all this sounds very mercenary."

"I can't help it, aunt," was Kate's rejoinder. "I am mercenary."

"At your age, Kate?"

"What difference does it make?" said the beauty, with a peculiar shrug of her shoulders. "I'm going in for diamonds and a tour to Europe. Sentiment is very well in a novel, but in real life it doesn't work."

Miss Mayo was decidedly a "success" in metropolitan society that winter. It was not entirely her faultless beauty, nor her readiness of repartee, nor yet the bewitching confidence with which she seemed to take the world's favor for granted, but a mixture and mingling of all three—a something which could hardly be expressed, save by the word "fascination." But notwithstanding her triumphs, Kate Mayo had, as yet, made no election in life.

"My dear," said Aunt Dewey, solemnly, "what was the reason you refused Harry Pelham?"

"The reason? Why, he's a custom house clerk, as poor as can be."

"Mr. Ryerson, then?"

"I've no idea of coming to the poor house before my time!"

"Mr. Ryerson is well off, I'm sure."

"The positive degree won't suit me, aunt; I must have the superlative."

"You will die an old maid, Kate."

"Kate! Kate! there is such a thing as going through the woods and picking up a crooked stick. What do you value yourself at, pray?"

"A hundred thousand dollars, at least, and from that up to half a million!" laughed Kate, as she put the last rose into the vase of flowers she was arranging.

"Where will you get such a price as that?"

"Not here just now, to be sure, aunt, but its representative will be here yet."

"Whom do you mean?"

"I mean Mr. Emmett."

Aunt Dewey sat down with uplifted hands and eyes.

"What! the millionaire?"

"Yes, aunt."

"But he is in Europe."

"N'importe—he is coming home soon."

"You have never seen him!"

"I dare say I never shall see him."

"Kate, you are crazy!"

"No, I'm not, aunt; you yourself will own it when you see Mrs. Emmett!"

The audacity of the girl fairly bewildered her sage relative; it was as if a little French grisette had aspired to share the august throne of the Napoleons!

"Well, I never!" gasped Mrs. Dewey.

"But that's no sign you never will, aunt," said Kate.

"But, Kate," suggested little Helen, who had sat by demurely listening, "suppose you fall in love with somebody else?"

"Me fall in love?" said Kate, with a mocking laugh. "Rest assured, Helen, I shall never commit any such absurd piece of folly as that. Haven't I told you that I intend only to marry for money? It may sound a little conceited, but I want a choice setting. Helen, you shall be my bridesmaid when I marry Lawrence Emmett."

Things were at this interesting juncture when one moonlight evening Miss Mayo went up to the park to skate, and came back under the convoy of a tall, handsome young man who had been introduced to her there.

"Did you say his name was St. John?" asked curious Helen, when the cavalier servente had gone. "Oh, Kate, how handsome he is!"

"Nothing of the kind," said Kate, tartly, "only rather pleasant looking."

"But who is he, Kate?"

"Oh, I don't know: a clerk in some bank, I believe."

"Poor fellow!" said Helen, reflectively.

"What do you say that for?" asked Kate, suddenly turning round upon her cousin.

"Because, Kate, if he is poor and obscure, and has come within the magic circle of your fascinations—"

"Nonsense!" said Kate, almost angrily. "Do you suppose every man I look at must of necessity fall in love with me?"

As the winter days went by Kate changed more and more. Sometimes she was strangely soft and lovable; sometimes capricious and given to sudden gusts of tears, like April showers, succeeded by brief sunshine.

"Kate," said Mrs. Dewey, coming one evening into the room where Kate sat, gazing out into the twilight, "have you thought about your dress to-morrow evening?"

"To-morrow evening?"

"Yes; at Mrs. Allaire's. Don't you remember? Mr. Emmett is to be there—your rich husband."

Aunt Dewey spoke almost jocosely. She had come to look upon Kate's castle en Espagne as an actual reality.

"Yes," said Kate, absently, "I remember."

"He saw you at the opera last night and asked who you were."

"Who did?"

"Mr. Emmett."

Kate looked up with a momentary interest.

"Did he? Then perhaps I will wear the blue."

Kate looked lovely as Venus of old in that same blue dress with pearls, and Mr. Emmett, a short, stout man, with a very ruddy face and glassy blue eyes, evidently appreciated it all.

"Oh, Kate!" cried Helen, gleefully, as they were rolling homeward in the carriage; "all the girls are envying you. Mr. Emmett is certainly in love with you."

"He is a clumsy old clown," said the ungrateful Kate.

"But he's so rich."

"Yes," said Kate, "he is rich."

And that was all that was said.

"Kate," said Mrs. Dewey one morning, coming in with a sort of triumphal air, "I've got a grand piece of news for you!"

"And I've got one for you, aunty," said Kate, looking up with eyes that were unwontedly tear-wet.

"Mr. Emmett has called to see me. He requests the privilege of paying his addresses formally to you."

"Tell him he can't have any such privilege."

"Kate!"

"I'm in earnest. Mr. St. John has asked me to be his wife, and I have said—yes!"

"Lawrence St. John—a clerk in a bank, at a salary of $1,500 a year."

"We can live on fifteen hundred dollars a year, aunt, and he is the dearest fellow that ever breathed. As for being a clerk in the bank, I don't care if he was a street sweeper!"

"But, Kate, I thought you were so bent on marrying rich."

"Oh, don't remind me of that! I have been a silly goose, but I have learned my own folly."

"And do you mean to say you will reject Mr. Emmett, a man worth a million of dollars at the very least, in favor of this young St. John?"

"Yes, aunt, I love Mr. St. John."

And in the last words, spoken very quietly, Aunt Dewey learned the folly of further remonstrance. Miss Mayo, with an inconsistency which is not unusual in girls of eighteen, had decided to set all her previous declarations totally at defiance. She had laughed at love all her days. Love was having his revenge at last.

But Mr. Emmett was not to be put off thus. He insisted on a personal interview, not satisfied unless he learned his fate from Miss Mayo's own rosebud lips.

"So you won't have me?" he said, brusquely.

"I'm very much obliged to you, sir," said Kate, falteringly, "but—I—would rather not."

"Like another fellow better, eh?"

"Yes, sir."

"St. John, eh? Penniless chap, with nothing on earth but a handsome face!"

"You are wrong, sir," said Kate, firing up. "He has a noble nature and a loyal soul."

"All humbug!" commented Mr. Emmett. "However, do as you like. I've nothing to say. Only I thought you wanted to marry rich."

"We shall be rich, sir," she said, softly—"rich in love and mutual confidence."

"I suppose, now," said the ruddy-faced old gentleman, "you would not believe me if I told you you were going to be Mrs. Lawrence Emmett after all?"

"No, sir; I should not, most certainly."

"It's the solemn truth, notwithstanding. Lawrence Emmett will be your husband!"

Kate looked at him—was he going crazy?

"He is telling you the truth, Kate," said a gentle voice behind her, and she turned to feel her hand in the clasp of Mr. St. John. "When you are my wife you will be the wife of Lawrence St. John Emmett."

"And my daughter-in-law," chuckled the old gentleman, gleefully. "You little fortune-hunter, you've promised to marry a bank clerk, just because you fell in love with him, and you'll marry the millionaire, after all!"

Kate kept her word, and Helen Dewey was bridesmaid to Mrs. Lawrence Emmett after all.—N. Y. News.

TWO HIDEOUS CRIMES.

Mutilated Bodies of Two Girls Found in a Frisco Church.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 16.—The Emanuel Baptist church at Bartlett street, between Twenty-second and Twenty-third, in this city, has been the scene of two of the most atrocious murders ever committed in the state. Saturday the mutilated body of Minnie Williams was found in the library of the building. Sunday the nude body of Blanche Lamont was found in the tower of the same church. The same hand, the authorities believe, slew both girls, and W. H. T. Durant, the young man suspected of both crimes, is now in custody.

Blanche Lamont and Minnie Williams were members of the Emanuel church and members of the Sunday school class. They were both 21 years old, brunettes and pretty and modest girls. Both had been the recipients of attentions from a young medical student named W. H. T. Durant, who is also the librarian of the church and the secretary of the young people's society of the church.

PRACTICALLY CRUSHED.

The Revolt in Cuba Said to Have Ended in Defeat.

HAVANA, April 17.—Maceo is captured and Cuba's last hope is gone. Crombet has been killed. Without these two leaders all is chaos in the insurgent ranks and liberty's most ardent friends admit that the Cuban cause is lost.

The Spanish authorities are posting bulletins and the loyalists in Havana are celebrating the ending of the revolution. Without Crombet and Maceo there can be no real war. Saturday the Cuban army and the Spanish soldiers met at Palmarito. The rebel forces numbered 2,000 men, while that of the Spaniards was 3,000. A desperate battle followed, and, according to official reports, lasted two hours, at the end of which time the rebels retreated. They were pursued by the Spanish troops and Maceo was captured. His secretary was also taken and all the personal and private papers of Gen. Maceo were confiscated.

PEACE TREATY SIGNED.

End of the Eastern War—Chinese Emperor May Abdicate.

LONDON, April 17.—The Times correspondent in Shanghai says: Li Hung Chang's son-in-law telegraph that the treaty of peace was signed in Shimonoseki Monday, April 16, and that the terms are:

1. Independence of Corea. 2. Japan's retention of the conquered places. 3. Japan's retention of territory east of the Liao river. 4. Permanent cession of Formosa. 5. Indemnity of $100,000,000. 6. An offensive and defensive alliance between China and Japan.

LONDON, April 17.—A dispatch from Shanghai to a news agency here says that a proclamation bearing the emperor's name has been issued, describing the empire as finished and asserting that he is unable longer to govern and that the officials he trusted are corrupt. It is added that the proclamation has caused great excitement and that there are signs of rebellion. The document, however, is said to be the work of secret societies.

ADVISED TO PLANT POTATOES.

Northwestern Farmers Hold a Rally to Consider the Subject.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 13.—Western Minnesota saw a gathering of farmers here such as even the most exciting political campaign could not bring together. At the little town of Dawson, near the western border of the state, about 2,000 people attended the great "potato rally" arranged by the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad.

Two large meetings were held, at each of which W. M. Hopkins, general freight agent of the Minneapolis & St. Louis, and S. H. Hall, the potato expert, addressed the farmers on the need of diversifying their farming operations and the special advantage of the potato as a profitable crop for substitution, in part, far the inevitable but not always successful wheat. Great enthusiasm was manifested.

INCOME TAX.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—A petition for a rehearing of the income tax cases of Charles Pollock vs. the Farmers' Loan and Trust company et al., and Lewis H. Hyde vs. the Continental Trust company of New York, was presented to the supreme court Monday by Mr. W. D. Guthrie, of counsel for the appellants. The court took the papers under advisement.

CHICAGO, April 17.—Siegel, Cooper & Co. have been restrained by the United States circuit court from making any return on the income tax law. This action directly attacks the constitutionality of the tax.

LEAPED TO HIS DEATH.

Young Man Jumps from Brooklyn Bridge and Never Rises.

NEW YORK, April 15.—A Brooklyn bridge policeman saw a man, apparently 19 years old, climb to the center rail and jump into the river Saturday. The man disappeared beneath the surface of the water and never came up. He left behind him a brown coat of tweed material. The man is said to have given his name as James Duffy, of county Cavan, Ireland. He asked a number of men in Park row to go out on the bridge and see him jump, some of whom went and witnessed the fatal plunge.

CHICAGO, April 17.—W. H. Harvey, chairman of the bimetallic executive committee, in a reply to Cleveland's letter, declares that the invitation to speak in Chicago did not come from a committee representing a majority of the business men and citizens, but rather from one representing those that own money and securities payable in money. Mr. Harvey says that the president's statement does not apply to debts; that while money and those debts payable in money have been steadily increasing in exchangeable value with the prosperity of the people, a debt for $1,000 that 1,000 bushels of wheat would have paid ten years ago now requires the farmer to give up 2,000 bushels of wheat in exchange for those dollars with which to pay the same debt. He further says that rising prices cause money to seek investment, and would thus open channels of commerce and trade and give employment to millions now idle.

Col. W. R. Morrison, member of the interstate-commerce commission, wants the term "safe currency" defined. He would like to know if the president means the only safe currency is one based on gold monometallism.

THE LEGISLATURE.

ST. PAUL, April 10.—The senate passed a resolution excluding from the floor of the chamber all persons except those privileged to attend. Gov. Clough sent in a veto of senate file 200, a bill relating to building and loan associations. The following bills were passed: transfering $150,000 from the general revenue fund to the internal improvement fund; relating to the examination and commitment of insane; to regulate the business of storage and warehouse firms; to regulate the construction and management of city and village lockups; to enable foreign guardians to foreclose mortgages by advertisement; authorizing the city of St. Paul to appropriate $3,000 for a library for the new steamship St. Paul. Four bills were referred back to the authors of the bills, upon their own motion. These were the three bills for the establishment of normal schools at Litchfield, Glencoe and Pipestone, and Mr. Schaller's bill for the protection of the propagation of quack grass.

The house voted down Jacobson's bill requiring the filing of chattel mortgages with the town clerk. The bill for a constitutional convention was passed by a vote of 85 ayes to none against. The age of consent bill was referred back to the judiciary committee. Furlong's bill to lay water mains to the state fair grounds was passed by a vote of 59 to 8. Other bills were passed as follows: Relating to farmers' Institutes; to prevent oppressive garnishment; relating to public libraries and reading rooms; to reorganize the State Agricultural society; reducing interest by borrowers of building and loan associations; relating to the incorporation of villages. The bill for a constitutional amendment authorizing the annual transfer of $200,000 from the school fund to the internal improvement fund was lost.

ST. PAUL, April 11.—In the senate the question whether the people of the state shall vote on the proposition of a new constitution was discussed. The debate was free from partisanship and was a conflict of ideas pure and simple. The measure was finally recommended to pass. The vote by which Senator Pottgieser's bill, proposing a constitutional amendment to make the terms of office of probate judges four years, was lost the previous day, was reconsidered and passed. The calendar was taken up before the noon recess. Mr. Miller's bill to establish a normal school at Pipestone was finally brought to a vote and defeated by a vote of 19 ayes and 28 nays.

In the house the majority and minority reports on the Ives impeachment matter were submitted without reading and the reports sent to the printer. The banking bill, which was passed with an amendment, came back from the senate with another amendment, which was agreed to and the bill passed. When Wright's blacklisting bill was reached on the calendar it was at the request of the author referred back to the committee of the whole. Senator Young's bill to forfeit the rights of the Hastings & Dakota railway company passed by a vote of 90 to 1. Mr. John's bill changing the usury laws so that only the interest shall be forfeited, and that the usurer shall be subject to criminal punishment, was passed.

ST. PAUL, April 12.—Senator Howard introduced a joint memorial asking for a liberal appropriation for deep waterways from the west to the east. The governor vetoed the senate bill allowing two or more colleges to consolidate. Dr. Zier's pardon bill, which was defeated, was reconsidered and placed on general orders. The bill to prevent propagation of quack grass came up for passage, but was referred to a special committee. The bill appropriating $50,000 for opening closed waterways tributary to the Red river was passed, also the bill to regulate the receipt, storage and shipment of grains in elevators and storehouses on right-of-way of railroads.

The house will hereafter meet at 9 a. m. The preliminary business was out of the way before 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and the calendar was taken up. There were two bills on the calendar, and these were adopted. They were Miller's bill, fixing the general terms of the district court of the 13th judicial district; the bill of Messrs. Shell and Douglas for the inspection of hay, etc., at St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth. The balance of the day was spent in committee of the whole. In the evening the matter of the impeachment of Judge Ives was considered. After four hours of argument the case was passed for future consideration.

ST. PAUL, April 13.—It was purely a committee day in the senate. The most interesting part of the proceedings was the discussion of the insurance bill, which occupied all the morning. It was considered by sections and finally recommended for passage. Mansfield's liquor bill caused considerable wrangling. It provides that liquor license money received from saloons in rural towns might be expended on roads and bridges instead of being used for school purposes. Dunham's good roads bill, after a sharp fight, was recommended for passage. Ozmun's primary election law, which abolishes primaries in the three large cities of the state, was killed.

In the house the calender was taken up about 11 o'clock in order to get some house bills passed and into the senate. Among the bills passed was the McKenney meat inspection bill. The only votes against it were from Populists. By permission of the governor Mr. Johns introduced a bill to amend laws relating to property exempt from execution. The bill provides that one bicycle shall be exempt from execution. After a sharp fight it was placed at the head of the calendar. The following bills were passed: Relating to limitations; relating to shorthand reporters; to make certain weeds common nuisances. The bill relating to newsboys and restricting their hours was defeated.

ST. PAUL, April 15.—The general appropriation bill has been introduced in the senate and will get into the house tomorrow. It was introduced in the senate late this afternoon by Senator Wyman, and was immediately given its second reading and made a special order for 2:30 Wednesday. The bill calls for an expenditure of $1,925,000, which shows that the finance committee had a well sharpened pruning knife. If all the demands had been listened to, the total would have been in the neighborhood of $4,000,000. As it is, the amount is cut on the amount allowed two years ago of about $100,000. The university appropriation is cut nearly in two, but at that it gets over $200,000. The $60,000 appropriation for books was reduced to $20,000, and the appropriation for a building for the department of engineering was stricken out. Other amounts asked for were cut down to some extent.

The house at a late hour reached a vote on the matter of impeachment of Judge Ives, and by a vote of 80 to 17 decided to adopt the minority report, which recommends that no impeachment proceedings be brought against the judge. Brevig's newspaper bill, whereby subscriptions to newspapers expire when the limit of subscription is reached was defeated. The bill giving the right of civil action against persons selling liquor was passed.

Sunset.

A beauteous sunset! when, with many a hue,
Thy royal purple fades to palest blue,
And crimson bands thy evening skies bestrew,
What scene affords a lovelier sight to view?

Thy gorgeous scarlet hath with pink a place;
The trees appear to lean against thy face,
Like folds of old-time filmy lace,
Festooned with fairy fingers' grace.

Like brilliant banners, fold on fold,
From faintest amethyst to deepest gold,
O reach to Heaven thy shadings fair,
To our beloved who have entered there!

SHERIFF WILKINS FREED.

Years of Slavery and How He Escaped—Health Is Improving—Has Gained Fifteen Pounds in Weight—Talks About His Deliverer Daily.

URBANA, Ohio, April 16, 1895.—(Special).—This town is in quite a boil of excitement since the facts about the improved physical condition of many of our leading citizens became known. Anderson & Cramer, the big wholesale and retail druggists, were called on and frankly admitted that they were the first to start the good work, as Mr. Anderson termed it. "Yes, we introduced No-To-Bac into this town about three years ago. The demand at the start was very light, the folks had no faith in it, but we sold to a few people, and to our great astonishment every one reported a cure. Since that time we have sold hundreds of boxes, and every one under a guarantee to cure or refund the money, and strange as it may seem, we have never had a call to refund money. This is indeed a great record of merit, and it is because of this merit that the big sale has resulted. As every cure brings in at least twenty-five customers, we know that No-To-Bac can be relied upon in every respect, and No-To-Bac not only relieves the nervous irritation and makes the use of tobacco entirely unnecessary, but at the same time builds up and fortifies the general physical condition. I just saw two of our prominent merchants pass down the opposite side of the street; they were cured by No-To-Bac a year ago, and they have not used tobacco since and have been greatly improved in health. We have a great many customers, men who are well advanced in years, who have been cured of the tobacco habit by the use of No-To-Bac, and who continue taking it right along for its tonic effects. As a natural invigorator and stimulant we believe there is no preparation in America to equal it."

"You know R. P. Wilkins, our sheriff, don't you?"

"Yes, of course I do."

"Well, you want to interview him."

Mr. Wilkins was called upon, and said: "Yes, November 4th, last I bought my first box of No-To-Bac from Anderson & Cramer. I had little faith, and to my great surprise, after using part of the third box, I was completely cured and did not have the least desire for tobacco. I had been a perfect slave to tobacco for over twenty-five years; I smoked from twelve to fifteen cigars a day; to-day I feel better, I sleep better, think better, and I have gained fifteen pounds in weight, and there is not a day passes that I do not recommend No-To-Bac to many of the tobacco users who I know are destroying their lives and vitality by the use of the weed."

Further investigation revealed the fact that there are 500 people living in this town and the surrounding country who have been cured by No-To-Bac. If the cures go on at this rate it will not be very long before the tobacco industry is going to be seriously affected. The sale of No-To-Bac has been phenomenal.

The public should be warned, however, against the purchase of any of the many imitations on the market, as the success of No-To-Bac has brought forth a host of counterfeiters and imitators. The genuine No-To-Bac is sold under a guarantee to cure by all druggists, and every tablet has the word No-To-Bac plainly stamped thereon, and in the purchase of the genuine article you run no physical or financial risk.

"I'M sorry, Mr. Timpany," said the leader of the brass band to the bass drummer, "but we shall have to dispense with your services." "Why?" "Why? You ask me why? A man who has grown so fat that he can no longer hit the middle of the drum asks me why?"—N. Y. Journal.

Great Northern Country.

The most complete publication so far issued in the interests of any Western railway is the new and beautifully illustrated book entitled the "Great Northern Country," which attractively and truthfully covers the territory from the Great Lakes to the Pacific ocean, traversed by the Great Northern Railway. The work is really an edition de luxe and is being distributed among libraries, clubs, reading rooms and hotels, rather than for private use. It contains hundreds of fine views of scenery along the line, accompanied by well written descriptive matter, all of which must prove of value to the region so aptly shown up. The variety of useful and handsome printed matter and pictures now being issued by the Great Northern will compare in every particular with that of any road in the land.

On the principal lines of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway passenger trains are electric lighted, steam heated and protected by block signals. With these modern appliances, railway traveling at high speeds has reached a degree of safety heretofore unknown and not attainable on roads where they are not in use. Electric lights and steam heat make it possible to dispense with the oil lamp and the car stove. Block signals have reduced the chances for collisions to the minimum by maintaining an absolute interval of space between trains.

Which kept in order runs smoothly and regularly, so the bowels keep up their action if measures are taken to keep them in good working order. This infers, of course, that they are out of order. The surest recourse then is to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a laxative mild but effective, which is also a remedy for dyspepsia, malaria, rheumatism, nervousness and kidney trouble.

IT is as easy to call back a stone thrown from the hand as to call back the word that is spoken.—Menander.

The Door of Life.

The fear of pain and the dangers of parturition fill many a woman's breast with dismay. There is no reason why childbirth should be fraught with danger and distress. It is a natural function, and should be performed in a natural way without undue suffering. Nature never intended that women should be tortured in this way.

Taken during gestation Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription robs childbirth of its dangers to both mother and child, by preparing the system for delivery, thereby shortening labor, lessening pain and abbreviating the period of confinement.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

DELANO DIARY

—Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—J. W. Lindsley is putting in city water on his premises.

—There is a rumor that the new council thinks of changing electricians; the present one seems to have pleased the people.

—The Oregon Medicine Company left on Tuesday for Cokato where they are to give a two weeks entertainment and supply those desiring them with their medicines.

—I. C. Algiers, assisted his brother-in-law in laying water pipe into his premises and entertained the crowd with desertations on political topics, on Wednesday. He says he will apply for a job on the streets, shoveling, as soon as he gets the trade learned.

—Friday, April 26, has been appointed Arbor Day by Gov. Clough. The graduating class of '95, the first after the burning of the school house, should plant out a tree on the grounds and do their best to make it grow that they may have a reminder for future classes to do likewise.

—Easter services were held in the different churches in the village. Rev. T. Davies preached an interesting sermon at the Presbyterian church in the morning, to a good sized audience. In the evening the M. E church was filled to hear the Easter exercises by the Sunday School.

—From the constant and persistent efforts of the public school people in rehearsing their parts by night and by day it looks as if Delano is going to have a rare treat; and a fine sum for the purpose of purchasing a library for the school to replace the one burned. The cause is a good one.

—Delano seems to have caught onto the Pingree idea and most of the vacant lots about the village furnish a place for some of her most enterprising citizens to work while watching a garden grow, that the hungry may be fed. "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground."

—Street Commissioner Jos. Brenner and Dar Welker wrapped the electric light poles with wire this week to prevent any more of them being gnawed off by horses tied to them. If the Marshal would place all the hungry horses he finds tied out in town too long, in some barn, where they could get hay and feed, and let the owners pay for them, there would soon be fewer poles eaten down and less wire needed, and the horses would enjoy life better.

—The school children enjoy a good joke on one of their instructors, who complained that some one had been killing pigs for several days down under the hill back of the school house, and threatened to have them arrested if they did not move their slaughter business. Some of the youngsters had learned that Mr. Bartlett had killed some there a short time ago, and that Mr. J. E. Brothers who lived near by had a parrot that had been keeping up the business at intervals ever since.

—Last week Thursday at about 2 a. m. there appeared at the depot a young Polish girl with a small bundle, desiring to go to Minneapolis; the night freight went along about that time, but she concluded not to go with it; so waited around the depot till near morning when an irate individual supposed to be her father appeared on the scene and emphatically ordered her back home. It seemed from appearances she was about to leave for the city without the consent of her parents. That, ordinarily would be a wrong thing to do.

—Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—Ennis Brantson, of [illegible] fall, townsman, has left Royalton and moved to Annandale, where he is engaged in the well business.

—E. J. Swedeback, Editor Buckley and Phrona Steffes have joined the bicyclists this week. The rage is contagious. Look out or you will be caught by it.

—Some Delanoites are contemplating on the time when they can have a "yoh" an the streets. It looks now as if most of them can sit on the fence and see the "grader" go by, and draw no salary.

—When a few more Delanoites get city water to sprinkle their lawns with the pump man will find his hours of work materially increasing in number. A fountain in a yard looks like a small affair but a number of them make lots of water. "Many a little makes a mickle," as Poor Richard says.

—Rev. Solomon S. Holscher, formerly pastor of the Presbyterian church at this place has sent some of his former parishioners of this place, cards, on which are printed a picture of the church of which he is now pastor, at Manchester, Iowa. His many friends here are pleased to learn of the good place he has and of the success with which he is meeting in his work for the Master.

—As is usual there are a few who don't like the new grade of streets adopted by the last village council. Some grade should be settled on and followed to the letter and figure as nearly as practicable; so people building can know where to locate their houses and sidewalks. If Third street should be graded and finished up it would add much to the beauty of the village, and to the convenience of people traveling over it.

—C. H. Strobeck, Mayor of Litchfield, who will be remembered as having been a guest of our town on the occasion of the celebration of the completion of our electric light plant and water system, and as having made a rousing speech upon that occasion, has been re-elected Mayor, and the Litchfield papers contain over two columns of a ringing message to the city council. He offered when here, to come and help dedicate our park when we are ready. Let's give him an opportunity soon.

—Fred Strauch, the broom manufacturer, is working up quite a trade in his line. He says advertising pays, as he learned from a recent trip to a neighboring town; on introducing himself the proprietor asked "are you the young broom maker I read about in the GAZETTE?" On being answered in the affirmative the merchant quickly made a purchase of brooms. Mr. S. is making good brooms as several samples in our office and residence testify to; and being an old resident of the county he deserves the patronage of those who wish to keep their houses in order.

—J. A. Burkhardt, telegraph operator for the G. N., almost had a serious accident on Sunday morning; as Albert Lee and himself were riding their bicycles near Mr. Kape's place on the Woodland road, they met Bartek Pogrzeba, who has something of a record for reckless driving, with his team. The wheelmen kept in the rut on one side the traveled road, Mr. Burkhardt in front, expecting the team to give half the road. Mr. Pogrzeba didn't look at it that way and kept straight on, colliding with bicycle No. 1, damaging it considerably and catching the rider's fingers on the wagon wheel and barking a couple of them. Mr. Burkhardt has written him an invitation to come in and settle the damage, and unless he does so promptly threatens to give him a lesson in law on the subject of turning out to give half the road to those he meets.

—Some of the village council suggested that it would be a good thing to fix up the town pump which has been standing useless and broken for so long. A well of water that is capable of supplying water in case of fire is left, for the want of a few dollars repair on the pump, to lay idle. People living in the vicinity of the pump are obliged to carry water from a distance. Travelers through town must pass by dry or hunt another place to drink. The well should be thoroughly cleaned and the pump properly repaired and a cup chained to the pump so that people could get a good pure drink of water in town without troubling anybody. A hose sufficient to reach buildings in the block should be purchased and hung under the band stand to be handy in case of fire, or to use to sprinkle the park, or streets. Some time the water works might fail to supply the needs and in any event the town pump would be handy. It ought not to be abandoned.

—A member of the village council showed his very smallness of character and niggardly disposition when he remarked in the council meeting, Monday evening, while the question of repairing the town pump was under consideration, "Let them that are so anxious to have it fixed, fix it." He did not stop to consider that the town pump furnishes about the only free water in town; where travelers can quench their thirst without bothering anybody. Would he ask them to contribute to the fund? The well is there, the pump is there, and it is folly to abandon them, so long as they are of use to the public. This can be used summer and winter and ought to be. If the same individual was not so anxious to have the village appropriate $150. to build a creamery for the self aggrandizement of one of his financial partners it might look a little better for him. Another member got a little satisfaction when the purchase of a road machine was being talked about by saying that those that wanted a machine ought to pay for it.

This old town pump
Stood many a bump,
Now stands like a stump
On account of a chump.

—The Cemetery Association should get together and accept Joseph Van Eman's resignation, and appoint another before he moves to Buffalo.

—Tim Gleeson now sprinkles his lawn with city water. He seems to enjoy the exercise. So do the neighbors and passers by, watching him.

—E. J. Swedeback has moved into the Galley house, and I. Gutzwiller, Jr. is fixing up his new purchase preparatory to keeping house in the near future.

—Ground never was in finer condition for gardening than at present and most every available patch is being put into some kind of a crop. People seem intent on raising a living someway, even if they have to dig and scratch for it.

—N. Anderson, of Rockford, received a large Monitor breaking plow this week. Several brothers have located on a farm in the west part of town and intend farming on a large scale. They have built themselves a fine large log house and are fixed for business.

—The Eagle seems to have learned to spell "Separator" especially when her copy is reprint from the Annandale Post. But in her item on Arbor Day, when she said "the observance of that occasion has never been marked by any STRICKING ceremonies" she made a decidedly striking blunder; her orthography is not very good any way. She is not a recognizable authority in that line.

—The Village Council met at the Council Room, Monday evening, all members being present. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

The bonds of J. W. Lindsley and C. Gast were read and approved.

Claims were allowed as follows:

|---|---|
| John Brenner, Team $3.00 per day cleaning streets | $10.50 |
| Wm. Eppel, street work | 4.50 |
| J P. Berneck, special police, | 1.50 |
| Jos Brenner, st com and rep sd wk | 8.40 |
| Martin Nelson, night watch and oil | 39.30 |
| Milton Muckey, engineer | 45.00 |
| James Jadwin, street work | 4.95 |
| Geo. Goodrick, special police | 1.50 |
| Total allowed | $116.15 |

Several communications were read offering material and machinery for village uses, and one from the County Auditor asking the board to appoint an Assessor.

On motion C H. Vorse was appointed assessor for the ensuing year; and Joseph Brenner was appointed street commissioner and his bond accepted.

Reports were made that water had been supplied Tim Gleeson and some to Delano Furniture Co.

Applications for village water were made by M. A. O'Hair and I. Gutzwiller.

Petition of Andrew Reider to have the alleys and streets in his new purchase on the West Side vacated was laid over until the meeting June 17.

| | |
|---|---|
| Electric lights | $99.47 |
| Hall rent | 48.00 |
| Great Northern Railway, water | 3.57 |
| Delano Furniture Co. | .50 |
| Total, | $156.54 |

Mr. Chamberlain, representing the Indiana Reversible Grader, was present, also O. J. Roberts, of Rockford, for the Western and Leon Frazee for the Champion; each presented their claims and made prices and a lively time was had for a few minutes cutting prices until finally the Indiana man secured the sale, provided goods prove satisfactory, of his grader and a wheel scraper, the two to cost $208.00 and the freight from Minneapolis, on the scraper. He guarantees the road machine to save from 75 to 90 per cent of labor over the old way.

We understand Miss Minnie Willcutt has obtained a situation as clerk in a Minneapolis store as soon as her term of school is completed.

County Cullings.

This terrible thing, 'tis said, took place,
'Tis a terrible boy; a terrier race,
A boy, a dog, and the Terry-est man,
At Smith Lake.

Martin Bland informs us that the case in court last fall in regard to title for land in which he was concerned, has been decided in his favor.

Several of of the county papers have been commenting rather unfavorably concerning the GAZETTE's artist's work. We can't very well help it if these editors don't appreciate art. Perhaps they may cultivate a taste for pictures later on.

The Annandale Post says: The Kimball creamery is paying 55 cents per hundred pounds for milk, which is equal to thirteen and three fourths cts. per pound for butter," and figures out that taking the increased amount of butter made at the creameries over the old way that farmers realize, where patronizing the creamery, 16½ cts per pound, while others receive but from 7 to 10 cts per pound. This certainly is an inducement for farmers to try the creamery.

John Husser, formerly a resident of Montrose but lately of California, in crossing a stream in a buggy with his wife and two children, was drowned together with his little girl. The buggy was overturned and John struck a rock so that he must have been stunned or otherwise injured so that he was unable to help himself; the boy and Mrs. Husser were rescued by a couple of men, who were working in a field near by. The many friends of the family in this county sympathize with them in their sorrowful loss.

If the democracy of Wright county was called together to consult on the issues of the day and see how they stand on the leading questions it would be a good thing for the party. They have as good a right to assist in shaping party politics as have the voters of any other county. The chairman should arrange for a grand reunion of the battle scarred veterans, and of the rising Democracy of the county sometime soon and let them get acquainted with each other and know how others stand on things in general.

TARIFF IS A TAX.

Minnesota Now Has Two U. S. Senators who are aware of that fact.

VERSES WORTHY OF THE GREAT SUBJECT.

IN NEW YORK PRESS.

The greatest charm of woman is
That she's a woman. There is no art
That overtops the quality of true womanhood.
To be herself is to be all there is of beauty,
Grace and loveliness to man.
Her glory is not in her anatomy.
But in that subtle and celestial mood
That marks her heaven born.
Men paint Madonnas, 'grave De Medicis;
God is her sculptor and dwells within her eyes.

The charms of woman are not inventoried—
So much bust, so proportioned, limb by limb,
Such and such points, as men describe a horse,
But cluster round her being as the bloom
Of flowers, whose color and perfume
Awaken and alert the sense of man.
Nameless the charm, uncatalogued the grace
That makes the magnet of a woman's face.
She smiles upon her infant as the sun
Pours down its warmth upon the earth
She dries its tears as it dries up the rain
And makes the young life fruitful
With her tender looks of love
As sure as nature's is, breeds in him
The homage of a child. He worships, he adores
It is the tribute that he pays
To what in woman is divine.

If it be true in protoplasmic cell
Man had his origin, and woman too,
One being to the other complemented
In due order of developement as nature builds,
Then would it seem the weaker part
Is stronger, for her power is given
To draw men up to Heaven
Or banish them to Hades.
Of all the charms of womankind,
Whether of body or of mind,
The greatest is still undefined,
Unfathomed, secret, deep below
What bard or analyst may know,
We feel the rapture of her smile:
Her voice enchants, her words beguile;
We live beneath her magic spell,
But whence the charm we cannot tell.

F. H. W.

DR. EDWIN PHILLIPS, the well known physician of Minneapolis, has deeded a valuable property to Hamline University, as a permanent endowment fund for the education of worthy young women. This is a generous act and an example that deserves to be followed by others that can afford to do likewise.

THE Duluth News-Tribune waxes eloquent over the subject of its defeat in an effort to get an appropriation for a Normal School. It winds up its article on the subject as follows:

For the friends who so steadfastly stood by Duluth's interests, the people of this part of the state will hold grateful remembrance and a desire to reciprocate. But our sense of dignity and right will hereafter preclude the policy of co-operation where co-operation is not forthcoming.

THE extremely chaotic condition of political affairs continues to exist. There is still no telling which party will advocate a gold standard; which will be for free silver; or which will have a bi-metallic plank. It appears now as if the bi-metallists might thrive best, all things else being equal. But, there are other issues looming up all along the lines; still no tangible planks for a platform at present.

SAN FRANCISCO has a murder trial that threatens to rival Harry Hayward's in notoriety. Two young ladies Miss Marion Williams and Miss Blanche Lamont were found dead in Emanuel church. A young medical student named Theodore Durant has been placed under arrest on the finding of the coroner's jury, for the murder of Miss Williams. Blood was found on the pastor's shoes but they might have been worn by another than the owner, as they were left in the church.

IT beats all how much alarmed some so called American citizens get over the question of this great state having some schools for educating teachers. Is not instructing children a profession of itself? Is it not as essential that teachers should be learned in their business as much as the lawyer, the doctor or the minister? How can a boy or girl turned out as a graduate of an ordinary country or village school know as well how to teach others as they would after a few terms at a school where attention is given to this particular subject?

QUITE a stir has been made among the laymen mostly, by the announcement of Surgeon General Billings that the breath of an individual does not convey germs of disease. That the sputa and the mucus from the nostrils of the consumptive contains the seeds, which, if inhaled by healthy persons, will develop, sometimes, into like diseases as those of the party throwing them off. The breath is supposed to contain the offal of the system, the vitiated air, not fit for human use, seems unfitted for the animal life which is claimed to propagate disease. But those afflicted with consumption or other troubles of a like nature, should be careful to not spit on the floor and other places where the sputa may become dried and float in the air of the room and endanger the health of friends and others that may visit the house.

Foolishness of Swearing.

We noticed a few days ago an article in the St. Paul Morning Call on the subject of swearing. The editor seemed to rather concede that it was necessary to swear and that the best of men frequently indulged in so doing. If the best of that editors acquaintances are in the habit of taking the name of their Maker in vain it must be that he is not acquainted with a good many people in the Capitol City; or people there who profess christianity don't live up to its teachings very well.

In smaller places than St. Paul can be found men, who, after years of intimate acquaintance, their best friends will tell you, never swear. Of course there are, as in larger places, the swearer in all his forms. A few, perhaps, in each village would be classed with the poor fellows in St. Paul that the Call holds up as such illustrious examples of how hard a man can swear.

Just why a man should swear don't seem to be very plain. Some old gray headed sinner swears as he converses with his neighbors, apparently because he has always done so; from force of habit. Some middle aged men seem to think it gives weignt to their arguments; that a few good round oaths, such as shock the average person, is as good as quite a lengthy list of reasons in a discussion on politics, science, business or even religeon. Young men swear because they hear some one else do so. They follow the example of some one they have heard; at first timidly, afterwards, boldly; to show how brave they are; although they read in the commandments, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain: for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain." They seem to take a strange kind of delight in showing to others that they can, and dare to break this commandment; that they can swear if they want to. Boys, even little fellows, copy after larger ones, and some terrible oaths fall from the lips of children so small that strong men tremble to hear them. As for women and girls it is usually enough to insure their being shunned by intelligent and respectable people generally to have it noised abroad that they are given to the habit of swearing.

Swearing is disagreeable to most people. To people who, themselves, occasionally use oaths, the presence of some one who uses a peculiar oath; or who uses swear words quite frequently, soon becomes disgusting. Perhaps the majority of people would prefer to talk to persons who do not swear. If ladies are present no well bred man is expected to vent his feelings in a series of oaths; and he that does so does not deserve the toleration of society at all.

Merchants, clerks, tradesmen, professional men and others having to do with the public sometimes frighten business from their doors by the foolish habit of swearing. People don't always like to be reproving others for what is so apparently foolish, but quietly leave them and go where conversation is carried on in something else than barroom slang. Speaking of barrooms, there are those who sell intoxicating drinks, under a license, according to law, who use far less profanity than many of their customers, or than many who do not drink at all. Men who think a saloonkeeper is certainly doomed to everlasting punishment go among their neighbors shocking them with their vile language and their swearing.

Swearing surely is foolish. It does not strengthen a man's word. It does not explain any points in an argument. It does not make him any better off. It does not make him any more of a gentleman. It don't make him a better citizen. It don't make him more respected. It don't add to his dignity. It don't make his friends like him better. It don't further him on his road to Heaven.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, April 19, 1895.

President Cleveland's Andrew Jackson firmness in standing by his financial views is admired alike by those who agree with those views and those who oppose them. There are timid democrats who say that an expression against the free coinage of silver was not politic, in view of the knowledge that many democrats favor it. Perhaps it wasn't, but Mr. Cleveland has never been a politic man. That is one of the reasons why he has never got along with the trimmers in the democratic party. His tariff reform message of 1887 was not a politic document, but it resulted in uniting the democratic party and in making tariff reformer synonymous with democrat, and is today regarded by every democrat as one of the best things he ever did. Democrats admire courage, and no democrat will think less of Mr. Cleveland for having the courage to stand up for what he believes to be right, regardless of whether it be popular or unpopular with the party at large. He invited a contest within the ranks of the party, and is confident that when all the arguments which can be presented on both sides have been heard that an overwhelming majority of the party will endorse his views. He may be wrong. Other democrats have been wrong; but when he asks that the democrats come together and discuss this question in all its bearings before committing the party he is not unreasonable. A campaign of education is never one sided. Let every democrat hear what both sides have to say in coming discussions of the silver question, weigh the arguments as he would the evidence if he were sitting on a jury, and then decide which will be the best for the country. Up to this time the talking has been done by one side.

Secretary Morton is always interested in everything connected with the food supply of the people; hence it is not surprising that he should be devoting his time and the power of the Department of Agriculture to heading off the extortion of the beef trust. If he had his way, and President Cleveland and the other members of the cabinet agree with him, the tariff of 20 per cent ad valorem on foreign cattle would at once be abolished, but only Congress can do that. As the next best thing Secretary Morton has amended the rules of the department so as to admit Mexican cattle, after they have been inspected by our officials. Speaking of the result of this move Dr. Salmon, chief of the bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture, said: "It is guesswork to make an estimate of how many cattle will be brought from Mexico. There is no census of cattle in North Mexico. We have no figures to go by. Nor have we any accurate news as to what proportion of the cattle there are ready for slaughter. But what is known might encourage a belief that the number of cattle brought in from Mexico during the next month will be heavy. Once before we let down the bars to the incoming of Mexican cattle and within a month 25,000 were brought in. Probably the number will reach 100,000 this time." From the very marked variations in the retail price of beef in the different cities Secretary Morton is inclined to believe that the retailer is squeezing the consumer harder than he himself is being squeezed by the trust. He is now making an investigation of the whole business. He said: "My opinion is that a beef ring exists among the big slaughterers. The difficulty now before us is how to prevent its continuance. If anything is done the papers will have to do it. The Sherman anti-trust law will neither punish nor protect. We've gone all through it with a microscope, and it is clear that it was made to be evaded and gone around. There is nothing left but the whip of public opinion and that must be vigorously wielded by the papers.

Hon. Dorman B. Eaton, of Ohio, who claims to have drafted the civil service law, and who was the first Civil Service Commissioner, is in Washington. He paid the President a high compliment when he said: "For the courage President Cleveland has shown in executing this reform, for his faithful adherance to the law, he is deserving of the highest praise. I am a republican, but on this question as on his brave stand for a sound system of currency, Mr. Cleveland has shown himself such a true patriot that all questions of partisanship are lost sight of, and he deserves just as much credit from republicans as he does from his own followers."

Attorney General Olney has filed a brief with the Supreme Court against any rehearing of the income tax cases which does not include a rehearing on that portion of the tax declared to be unconstitutional by the late decision. If a rehearing is granted by the court it will hardly take place before October.

Miss Gay Gent and the two Marsh girls took in Waverly last week.

Homer Dorman sold a "hoss" last week.

D. R. Thompson, J. Benner and F. H. Johnson did business in the city this week.

Levi Bowen, the newly appointed postmaster at Lake Sarah, has started to build a fine residence this spring, the foundation having been laid.

Will Carney took up his occupation on the section last Monday. How he will be missed at some of the flag stations on the Great Nothing R. R.

After a long illness Mr. Coverdale passed away on Tuesday. The funeral was held on Thursday at the A. C. church, Rev. W. J. Hobbs officiating. The deceased was 81 years old.

Miss C. S. Florida has returned from an extended visit among friends in Chicago.

Miss Georgie Mounts is visiting in the city.

Mrs. Haggerty had a narrow escape a few days since. She got the carpet on fire and the only way she could extinguish the flames was to lie down and roll over them. Ha! Ha!

LONG LAKE.

J. H. Winslow arrived on the 18th from California with a car load of horses, buggies and household goods. Amongst them are two span of flyers, which Mr. W. thinks will go ahead of anything in "these diggin's" for speed.

Clark Christlieb, of Hutchinson, visited his uncle B. F. Christlieb on the 17th.

Prof. Guise, of Long Lake, on Friday evening after closing his school for the week, struck out on his bicycle to make a visit to friends in Eden Prairie, a distance of about 15 miles.

Guise & Carr succeeded in finding water for the Minnetonka Dairy Association (our new creamery) at a depth of 160 feet. Being successful in obtaining water, the Association will go ahead to complete its buildings as fast as possible.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray G Winslow, of Superior, are visiting relatives at this place.

H. H. Archibald is getting along as well as can be expected with his fractured limb.

The GAZETTE Artist thinks it will do him no harm,

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

Hicks, the almanac man, does not seem to bring any rain. We are much in need of a good warm shower to start the grass and liven up things, yet the small grain looks well and the farmers are in hopes they may get a good crop this year, even if it does not bring a good price.

Quite a good many farmers in our town will plant seed for the Minneapolis Seed company.

We have got a craze in this part of the country for bicycles; most everybody thinks they want a wheel.

W. C. Batdorf has moved to Minneapolis. Our best wishes go with him.

The school in Dist. 102 closed last Friday with an entertainment in the evening.

There seems to be quite a demand for milch cows and beef cattle.

It is reported some of Knute Nelson's relatives have found the North Pole with a U. S. Senatorial attachment. I would move that the Arctic exploring expedition and the North Pole be attached to the United States for Senatorial and judicial purposes.

The maple sugar and fishing season is over. There was not much of a run of either one this spring.

Farmers are plowing and getting ready for corn and potatoes.

Maple Plain has been having her ups and downs.

Our genial merchant of Maple Plain, Mr. James Turnam, was married last Wednesday to Miss Mary Kateley. May happiness and prosperity attend them through life.

The gossipers and news peddlers have just informed me that their stock of news is very scarce and they cannot furnish any more unless I pay a premium, for such commodities are equal to a single gold standard.

The health of the country (or rather, people) seems to be improving and everything is on the mend.

The chief politicians and those high in authority who have been praying for better times to break in upon us fear their prayers will not be answered unless our leaders take a firm stand for equal rights and justice.

Some of the Maple Plain people are left orphans. "A voice was heard in Ramah; lamentations and bitter weeping, for they would not be comforted, but they shall come again from the land of the enemy."

Awakened by a Brass Ligament.

The study of etymology causes no end of trouble among that class of school children whose knowledge of English is limited to words which figure in the ordinary street conversation, and many curious results have followed. The custom usually observed by the teachers is to require first a definition of the word, then its derivation and finally a sentence in which the word is properly used. The word "ligament" fell to the lot of a rather diffident boy, recently in the Camac Grammar School at Thirteenth and Norris streets. He defined it properly as "a band," but followed up the correct derivation with the remarkable sentence: "I was awakened last night by hearing a brass ligament going down the street."—Philadelphia Record.

Among Our Exchanges.

Hippophagy has come to stay, apparently. The department of agriculture has issued regulations for the exposure and sale of horseflesh similar to those now in force as to oleomargarine and other imitative butters. Dealers are required to label all horse meat as such and penalties are imposed for selling it as prime beef from cattle. In doing this much the department has done all in its power to prevent people from being imposed upon. It has no right to prohibit the sale of the article, and those who wish to eat it can enjoy that privilege to their hearts content.—Morning Call.

If, as a great many think, all the crimes of man began with childhood, what a tough lot of youngsters could be rounded up any day. We believe that all the chains of misery, degredation and crime that surround man, were forged after he had reached mature years. If the contrary is true, then society is responsible; they should protect the youth. If the parent cannot guide the child in the way of truth, honesty and correct living, it is clearly the right of society to take the child from them and place them under influences that are healthier. The laws define what constitutes good citizenship. They also declare it the duty of society to prevent diseases either of the body or mind; to permit children to grow up in crime is clearly a violation of the law.—Prison Mirror.

BUFFALO GAZETTE

One year for $2.50.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.
Square Type. Conical. Spatulated. Philosophic. Artistic. Feminine.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the nobler sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and you will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of the whole family.

SPAIN is finding Cuba a very expensive luxury, and if Cuba keeps on she will reduce Spain to bankruptcy. It is reported that Spain has already expended $30,000,000 the past year, and the child is not half spanked yet.

TWENTY-SEVEN Japanese newspaper correspondents clubbed together and sent a present of thirty chickens to Li Hung Chang as an evidence of their sympathy when he was shot. If they were plump spring chickens that may account for the peace now prevailing between the warring nations.

POSTMASTER GENERAL BISSELL was the first to leave President Cleveland's cabinet, but he has followed the example of many other cabinet officers. In the first century of our national existence there were 207 cabinet officers appointed and seventy-seven of them resigned before the expiration of their terms of office.

THAT riot in Peking where two American women were assaulted by the soldiers could not have been very serious, since the report says that the two husbands of the women went out and beat the assailants almost to death. So long as American husbands can lick the Chinese army there is no call for interference from our government.

GREAT BRITAIN is now engaged in a war with the Ahkoond of Swat. The Ahkoond attempted to apply the Monroe doctrine and swat the land-grabbers out of his country, but he seems to be getting the worst of it. Uncle Sam has the only simonpure, genuine Monroe doctrine with the name blown in the bottle and warranted to drive off encroachers.

LADIES who object to giving their ages when applying for registration or marriage certificates might take a hint from Nellie Bly. It is stated that in a marriage certificate taken out recently the age of her intended husband was giver as 68, and her own age as "legal." The gentler sex may enjoy a blessed immunity from revelations as to the lapse of time in the word "legal."

THE centennial of the establishment of the public school system in New York was properly observed in all the schools of the Empire state. There is no anniversary more worthy of commemoration. The public schools are the foundations of liberty and intelligent citizenship, and they have grown to be the most important institution in the government of a free and independent people.

TWO SCHOOL houses are to be erected and equipped by the United States government in Alaska. The amount available for the purpose is not large—only $5,000. Nevertheless, it indicates the spirit of the American people. Civilization follows the stars and stripes; and one of the most glorious manifestations is found in what is known throughout a large portion of the United States as "the little red school house." Even the Esquimax of Alaska will enjoy educational advantages.

THE latest issue of the Statesman's Year Book gives some new figures as to the population of China and Japan. Hitherto in comparing the two countries it has been the habit to credit China with 300,000,000 and Japan with 30,000,000. From the latest estimates, however, China proper has 386,000,000 and its dependencies—Manchuria, Mongolia, Thibet, Jungaria and East Turkestan—increase the total to 402,680,000. The official census of Japan made in 1892 fixes the population at 41,089,940. Thus Japan in eight months has whipped a nation ten times as big as itself.

COL. COCKERILL has come to the conclusion that Li Hung Chang is a patriot as well as a statesman. The day after he was shot Col. Cockerill telegraphed to ex-Secretary Foster, who was with the viceroy of China, and asked for some expression regarding the attempt on his life while on a peace mission. The answer was: "The viceroy says that if his blood can aid in bringing peace he gives it cheerfully." China may not be a model of civilization, and may be barbarous as some writers try to make it appear, but the viceroy of China is a good and true model of patriotism.

THE official bulletin of the Johns Hopkins hospital at Baltimore just issued reports the case of a green-haired patient who recently died. The report was made by Dr. Arthur Oppenheimer, who said it was a rare case and of great interest to the fraternity. The patient was a coppersmith, 58 years old. The coloration was caused by fine copper oxide dust lodging on the man's head and not being promptly removed at the end of each day's work. He was suffering from a distressing cough, which resulted in his death. Not only the hair of his head but the hair all over his body was of a pale but distinct green.

LATER NEWS.

Its Work Is Over.

ST. PAUL, April 23.—Although today's was the last session of the house, it did not conclude in amity. The Duluth delegation made one last desperate effort to throw doubt on the legitimacy of S. F. 4, the sleeping car tax bill, which has been amended so as to include mining property. The effort was to amend the journal so as to show that the bill passed after midnight, and thus afford ground for a contest in the courts. The house, however, knowing that the courts would not go back of the journal, refused to correct it, and S. F. 4 will stand, if Gov. Clough signs it.

The house closed the regular business by requesting the attorney general to investigate the land contracts of the St. Paul & Duluth road and prosecute where it was found necessary to do so do collect taxes now being withheld.

Mr. Douglas introduced a resolution highly complimentary to Speaker Van Sant. Mr. Gibbs presented the house and senate group photographs to the speaker. Speaker Van Sant replied in a few worns full of feeling. Then the chief clerk, M. J. Dowling, was presenting with a house group.

In the senate there were the usual pleasant incidents connected with the closing hours. After a vote of thanks to President Day and the secretaries had been voted, a large group picture of the senators, handsomely framed, was brought down the center aisle and presented to President Day on behalf of the senators by Senator Stevens. Senator Barr was elected president pro tem by rising vote.

AN attempt was made to rob the First State bank at Minneota, Minn., the 23d by Frank Chapman and M. J. Cunningham. They entered the bank at noon, closed the doors and demanded money of the assistant cashier. Both of the would-be robbers were drunk and their request was refused. The bank man raised an alarm and a crowd soon congregated and the men were placed under arrest.

THE town of St. Jerome, Canada, was completely flooded the 33d by an ice gorge that forced the water out of the river. There was fully five feet of water in the main streets.

JAMES H. ECKELS, comptroller of the currency, has declined an offer to become financial editor of the "Chicago Times-Herald," at a large salary.

THE postoffice at Nyack, N. Y., was entered by burglars and robbed of nearly $1,500 in money and stamps.

THE SILVER QUESTION.

Free Coinage Proposition Causes a Lively Discussion.

Bryan Wants Cleveland to More Clearly Define His Position—Blackburn Declares Himself—Administration Forces Organize.

OMAHA, Neb., April 20.—Ex-Congressman W. J. Bryan, who was Bland's lieutenant in the last house in the fight for silver, has sent President Cleveland a very curt letter, in regard to the president's letter declining the invitation to speak in Chicago in the interests of sound money. Mr. Bryan says that since Mr. Cleveland secured the repeal of the Sherman law he (Mr. Cleveland) is now the acknowledged leader of the gold standard advocates, both democratic and republican, and that, therefore, the people naturally look to Mr. Cleveland for a plain simple presentation of the argument in favor of sound money, according to his understanding of sound money, or at least an intelligent definition of it.

Mr. Bryan says that Mr. Cleveland makes frequent use of the phrase "sound money" and kindred expressions, but nowhere explains what he means by it. Everybody, Mr. Bryan says, favors "sound money." A plain statement by the president of what he means by those euphonious phrases might dispel the war clouds and make a "line of battle" unnecessary.

The letter goes on to outline the various positions that might be taken by those who favor sound money, and then declares: "Your opponents candidly avow their purpose and clearly outline the legislation which they desire. Is it not fair to ask that you define your policy with as much frankness?" . . . "Is the failure," asks Mr. Bryan, "of the gold standard advocates to define their purpose and defend their financial system due to lack of knowledge of the subject or to an unwillingness to let the people know what they intend?"

"If 'the proprieties' of your 'official place oblige' you 'to forego the enjoyment' which you would derive from the writing of another letter explaining your last letter and defining your position on the financial question please designate some one who has authority to speak for you so that the people may be afforded an intelligent opportunity,' as you suggest, to study and decide this now paramount public question. Yours very truly,

"W. J. BRYAN."

Senator Blackburn's Position.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 23.—Senator Joseph C. Blackburn has thrown down the gauntlet to those who desire to contest his reelection to the United States senate, and boldly invites a canvass upon the currency issue. The senator's position on the silver question has been well known, but as he had refused to express his views through the public press of the state, the impression had gone forth that he was dodging the issue. In an interview here, however, he emphatically expressed his continued devotion to the cause of free coinage of silver.

Honest Money League.

CHICAGO, April 23.—The "Honest Money League of Illinois" was formed at a meeting of citizens at the Palmer house Saturday afternoon in accordance with a resolution that such a meeting be held, adopted by enemies of free silver at the Great Northern hotel recently. The promoters of the new organization are W. T. Baker, Adlai T. Ewing, A. F. Seeberger, J. W. Richards and John Mayo Palmer. Henry S. Robbins was elected president, and the platform of the organization declared to be "unalterably in opposition to the unlimited coinage of silver, without international cooperation, at the ratio of sixteen to one."

The men who attended and took part in the meeting are for the most part prominent in local business and political circles. Among those present were Postmaster Washington Hesing and ex-Corporation Counsel Adolph Kraus. There were about 150 at the meeting, which was called to order by Henry S. Robbins. Mr. Robbins explained the object of the meeting, taking good care to emphasize the fact that this was a democratic movement, pure and simple. He said the purpose of the promoters of the league was to resist the prevailing idea which he admitted was rapidly spreading, that free silver is a good thing for this country. Then Adlai T. Ewing as chairman of the parent meeting read the proposed platform which was unanimously adopted as the constitution. Only democrats can become members and all must subscribe to the declaration already given against free sliver. It is provided that auxiliary leagues be formed in every county of the state.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 23.—In an interview Sunday night Gov. Altgeld denounced the Honest Money league formed at Chicago Saturday. He says:

"They are starting out under false colors and evince an intent to deceive, for they know or ought to know, that the money system they advocate is the most dishonest and damnable that was ever invented, because it doubled the burdens of the entire producing classes: it broke down the purchasing power of the world and left the laborer without bread because there was no market for his products. These gentlemen also know or ought to know that this was done at the instance and for the benefit of the bondholding and salary-drawing officials of Europe and the east, consequently the name 'Honest Money league' must have been adopted because it was calculated to deceive the public."

FOR A LIVELY CAMPAIGN.

Administration Forces Organize to Fight Free Coinage.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—A strong and vigorous fight against the free and unlimited coinage of silver independent of international agreement is to be made by the administration. With that end in view officers in the various executive departments appointed under the present administration are being urged to organize systematically for the purpose of conducting the contest along the lines laid down in the president's message. Many of the higher officials who enjoy reputations at home as stump speakers will probably take to the field early in the summer, and others are even now engaged in writing letters to their local papers or personal friends, impressing upon them the importance of sustaining the administration in the position it has outlined. Federal officers in the several states will be organized as a nucleus about which all who uphold the administration or rather who are opposed to the free and unlimited coinage of silver, will be expected to rally.

There are nearly 200,000 government officers, postmasters, internal revenue officers, customs officers, district attorneys and innumerable contractors scattered throughout the country, and these will be expected to do the aggressive fighting in the field.

Nearly all of the cabinet officers will take the stump for one or more speeches. Secretary Carlisle will certainly make two or more speeches in the Kentucky campaign. Secretary Morton will deliver an address in Chicago and perhaps one in St. Louis. Secretary Herbert and Congressman Clark will probably speak in Alabama. Postmaster General Wilson is being urged to go west and speak in Illinois and Indiana and may find time to do so late in the summer.

The president is represented as being thoroughly in earnest in the proposed crusade against the free and unlimited coinage of silver and will leave no stone unturned to prevent the free silver sentiment from gaining headway and to crush it out if possible. As tariff reform was the test of party fealty in his campaign for the presidential nomination, active support of his demand for the repeal of the Sherman purchasing clause the test of party fealty in 1894, so in 1895 the test of party fealty will be uncompromising opposition to the free and unlimited coinage of silver by the United States independent of international agreement.

Gen. Harrison May Run.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 24.—An Indiana republican who was in Washington during President Harrison's administration and who takes a hand in national politics said Monday that Benjamin Harrison will be the compromise candidate of the opposing currency factions next year. "He is the coming man," said this man. "He will be nominated on a conservative bimetallism platform and will be elected. Of all the republicans spoken of for president he is the only man that comes anywhere near satisfying the gold men in the east and the silver men in the west."

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 24.—In ex-President Harrison's speech at La Junta, which is said to outline his position on the silver question, Gen. Harrison said:

"Now, I say to you to-day what I said when I was president and what I have always believed, that a larger use of silver for money and free coinage of silver upon a basis to be agreed upon, that would maintain its parity with gold, was good for the whole world. I do not believe that we could run free coinage ourselves when the European governments were pursuing the policy they have been pursuing with silver. But, my fellow citizens, there are clear indications now in England and in Germany that they are feeling the effects of a scarcity of gold and its prostrating effects upon the industries."

DURRANT HELD.

The Coroner's Jury Finds Him Guilty of Miss Williams' Murder.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 22.—The coroner's jury investigating the case of the murder of Minnie Williams, one of the two young girls who were killed in Emanuel Baptist church, returned a verdict Friday charging Theodore Durrant with the murder.

Durrant was not present when the jury brought in the verdict. When it was shown him after his return to the city prison his face flushed for the first time since the terrible crime of which he is accused was discovered.

Mrs. Durrant, mother of the accused, says she has evidence for the defense which will go to upset the bearing of the statement of Witness Hill, who testified before the coroner's jury that he had seen a couple answering the description of Durrant and the dead girl standing near the church about 8:30 on the night of the murder and who afterwards entered the churchyard.

Doubt as to the guilt of W. H. T. Durrant, the young medical student who is accused formally of killing Miss Williams and suspected of having slain Miss Lamont, is freely expressed by many, and this doubt, fostered by the friends of the prisoner and those who mistrust circumstantial evidence, is spreading. There has been an undercurrent of opinion among these which was expressed in a statement to the newspapers by the mother of the accused man and which has also been boldly stated in anonymous letters to the coroner.

SENATOR WILSON IS DEAD.

Iowa Statesman Passes Away at His Home in Fairfield.

FAIRFIELD, Ia., April 24.—Ex-United States Senator James F. Wilson died at 9:40 o'clock Monday night, after an illness of some weeks.

[James F. Wilson was a harnessmaker in early life, graduating from the bench to become a lawyer. He was born in Newark, O., October 19, 1828, went to work when 15 years old, but found time during the practice of his trade to give himself an excellent education, being admitted to the bar when 23. He attained some little distinction during his two years before the courts of his native town, at the conclusion of which he moved to Fairfield, Ia. Here he at once attained distinction, becoming a member of the state constitutional convention held in 1856. For the six years following he was a member of the legislature, becoming the presiding officer of the senate during his last term. He did not fill out his full year, being elected to congress in 1861 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Gen. S. R. Curtis. To this position he was reelected, serving from December 2, 1861, to March 3, 1869, as a member of the Thirty-seventh, Thirty-eighth, Thirty-ninth and Fortieth congresses. He was in the judiciary committee during his whole service in the house, serving as its chairman the last six years. In 1882 he was elected to succeed James Wilson McDill as United States senator from Iowa, taking his seat December 4, 1883. In 1888 he was reelected to succeed himself. His term of service expired March 3 of this year. Mr. Wilson was a republican.]

MISS LEITER MARRIED.

Chicago Heiress Becomes the Wife of George M. Curzon, M. P.

WASHINGTON, April 24. — Monday morning at St. John's Episcopal church one of the historic churches of Washington, Hon. George Nathaniel Curzon, M. P., of England, and Miss Mary Victoria Leiter, eldest daughter of the Chicago millionaire, Mr. L. Z. Leiter, were married in the presence of the British ambassador, Mrs. Cleveland and such a distinguished assemblage of cabinet officers, diplomats, governors and bishops as to give the event the character of a public ceremony.

SPRING CLEANING

Is such a trial that men say "Let the house take care of itself." But the conscientious wife feels bound to risk health and strength in this annual struggle with dust and dirt. The consequence of her feverish anxiety over extra work is depletion of the blood, the source of all life and strength, manifested in that weak, tired, nervous condition too prevalent at this season and very dangerous if allowed to continue. What every man and woman needs in the spring is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It keeps the blood vitalized and enriched, and thus sustains the nerves and all the bodily functions.

"I take Hood's Sarsaparilla every spring, and it is the only medicine I use through the year. It enables me to do my house cleaning and farm work all through the summer. It helped me very much for palpitation of the heart. I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the medicine for everyone and all who take it will never be without it. I have also used Hood's Pills and they are the best I ever tried." MRS. F. H. ANDREWS, S. Woodstock, Ct.

FIRST GLIMPSES OF VENICE.

A View of the Streets and Alleys of the City of the Sea.

Coming in the train from Milan we seemed, for the last ten minutes, to be rushing straight into the sea. On each side of us was the water, stretching out vaguely under the pale evening light; nothing but water, and at first not a sign of land ahead. Then a wavering line, with dark ships, and thin shafts of rigging, came out against the horizon, like the first glimpse of an island; the line broadened, lights began to leap, one after another, out of the darkness, and a great warehouse, glowing like a furnace, grew up solidly out of the water. We were in Venice.

I had never been in Venice before, and in the excitement of the moment I resolved that I would find my way to St. Mark's unaided, through the labyrinth of streets and bridges. I had lost my guide book in changing trains at Bale; I did not even know in which direction to start; but I set out confidently, sure that St. Marks would draw me, sooner or later, its own way. I walked fast, turning now to right, now to left, without knowing why; crossing little bridges, with their long, low, comfortable steps, seeing the black flash of a gondola round a sudden corner, under me, and down the vanishing waterway between tall houses, turning down narrow alleys, where two people could only just walk abreast, alleys which broadened all at once into vast empty squares; passing churches, from which came a sound of singing, and magical old houses with balconies, and brilliant-colored shops, where bright crowds were buying and selling, women in vivid shawls, who walked superbly, men in beautiful rags lounging against the wall and lying in doorways. I went on, turning back, trying another alley, and still the endless alleys seemed to reach out before me, and the bright crowds grew thinner and thinner; endless! and was I really going farther and farther away? I began to wonder; till, at last, I turned back from a narrow street I had entered confidently enough, and confessed defeat by asking the way. It is true I confessed defeat; but I was unjust to myself, I was unjust to Venice. Straight on, they told me, up that very turning, and at the end of it, only a few steps. * * * Yes, at the end of it, only a few steps away, I found myself suddenly clear of all that coil of entangling alleys, which had seemed to be tightening around me like a snake; I came out into a clear space, seeing for the first time a clear breadth of sky, and there, against the sky, there, before me, was St. Mark's!—Arthur Symons, in Harper's Magazine.

STEEL TANKS

We furnish steel tanks with covers, all galvanized after completion, in nests of ten, 8 to 12 feet high and 30 to 36 inches in diameter, at 2½c. per gallon. They do not rust, shrink, leak, give taste to water, nor allow foreign substances to get in. They can be put in garret or [illegible] and thus are protected from freezing. They take no setting up, are cheaper than wood. Tank substructures of all sizes made to order. Send for price list and designs for substructure and ornamental water supply.

AERMOTOR CO. CHICAGO.

2½ CTS PER GAL.

Did you ever stop to think how completely the Aermotor Co. made the modern windmill business? How it has monopolized this entire line of manufacture because of its ideas, inventions, designs, qualities and prices, or forced others to be literal and servile imitators? Witness the steel wheel, the back geared pumper, the high geared power mill, the steel towers, fixed and tilting, the galvanizing of work after completion, the grinder centrifugal feed, the improved irrigating and other pumps, the all steel pole saw—one of the most popular things we ever put out—the steel storage and stock tanks. Everything we have touched we have bettered and cheapened. It is the thing we have delighted in and it has paid. We have established a score of branch houses, so as to have all these goods near those who want them. The Aermotor Co. has but one more ambition. It wants to build and fill one more new building. It has 2 acres of land at its present location unoccupied by buildings. It expects to commence in June to cover that 2 acres with a single building, 7 stories high. This will give it 14 more acres of floor space. Then when the public demand requires more goods than can be produced with this added space, it will refuse to extend further, or make any effort. It will have done its share to supply that demand. It will then turn away all new comers, UNTIL THAT TIME IT EXPECTS TO CONTINUE TO SUPPLY THE WORLD WITH THE GREATER PART OF ITS WIND WHEELS, TOWERS, GRINDERS, FEED CUTTERS, PUMPS, STEEL FRAME BUZZ SAWS, STEEL STORAGE AND STOCK TANKS, STEEL SUBSTRUCTURES, ETC., ALL GALVANIZED AFTER COMPLETION. IT WILL CONTINUE TO DEAL MOST LIBERALLY WITH THE PUBLIC, FURNISH REPAIRS AT A LOW PRICE, AND BE THE GREAT MODEL SQUARE-DEALING WIND POWER AND WATER SUPPLY HOUSE OF THE WORLD. AERMOTOR CO., CHICAGO.

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, of ROXBURY, MASS., Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor.) He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

A WORKER.

"Were it not for me,"
Said a chickadee,
"Not a single flower on earth would be,
For under the ground they soundly sleep,
And never venture an upward peep
Till they hear from me,
Chickadee-dee dee!

"I tell Jack Frost when 'tis time to go
And carry away his ice and snow;
And then I hint to the jolly old sun,
A little spring work, sir, should be done!'
And he smiles around
On the frozen ground,
And I keep up my cheery, cheery sound,
Till Echo declares, in glee, in glee;
'Tis he! 'tis he!
The chickadee-dee!'

"And then I waken the birds of spring—
'Ho, ho! 'tis time to be on the wing!'
They trill and twitter and soar aloft,
And I send the winds to whisper soft,
Down by the little flower beds,
Saying: 'Come, show your pretty heads!
The spring is coming, you see, you see!'
For so sings he,
The chickadee-dee.'

"The sun he smiled, and the early flowers
Bloomed to brighten the blithesome hours,
And song birds gathered in bush and tree;
But the wind he laughed right merrily,
As the saucy mite of a snowbird, he Chirped away: 'Do you see, see, see?
I did it all!
Chickadee-dee-dee!'"

OWYHEE JOE'S STORY.

BY ROUNSEVELLE WILDMAN.

It was the beginning of the end. The last tie of the mighty Union Pacific was the first tie in the march of civilization into the great "west."

With the thunder of iron wheels and the reverberent screech of the whistle, the Indian, the buffalo, the desperado fled, the overland coach became a memory and the cowboy changed his buckskin for New York shoddy. Later, as the gigantic Pacific system stretched out its arms to the north and south and absorbed the alkali bottoms of Wyoming, the sage brush plains of Idaho, the pine forests of Oregon, even the lava beds of northern California, the pioneers of '49 and the miners of '63 became a curiosity, and the men who had subdued the wilderness from the back of an untamed mustang were styled "moss backs" by the "tourist coach" emigrants and relegated to the background.

Little more than a decade has passed since the Oregon Short line pushed its way along the great valley of the Snake and laid Idaho tributary to its sovereignty; yet, in so short a time, I became an "old timer," and, as I looked out on the crowd that had taken the places of those who greeted me as a "tenderfoot." I mentally repeated the motto of the new "west:" "Keep up with the band wagon or fall in the rear."

Typical of the Brobdingnagian strides of this new order of things, thirty rotting skeletons cumber a ramshackle row of sheds on the suburbs of Boise. Sun and wind, rain and snow find their way down and through the neglected roof upon their bodies, and as year after year goes by they answer to the age and the elements, and fall away into dust and oblivion.

Yet they deserve a better fate. On their weather-beaten forms are the marks of rifle bullets; within their protecting sides came the best blood of the east, to find new homes and extend the empire of the great republic.

These thirty leather-springed, steel-ribbed overland stages were for years the one connecting link between the hardy miners and pioneers of southern Idaho and "home." Their very sight recalls Indian fights, highway robberies and dare-devil flights. In them lives the essence of the fast dying "Wild West." Their day is past; their past is but a tale; their present is forgotten.

I asked Owyhee Joe about them once. Owyhee Joe had been a famous driver. Wild stories are told of his daring trips up from Winnemucca or out from Boise with a coach well loaded with gold dust, prospectors and government mail. Like Ben Holliday and Yuba Bill, his achievements live in the memory and on the tongues of the oldest inhabitants and grow in luster as the years pass.

It was a hot, sultry afternoon. I had sent in "copy" for the outside page of the Statesman and felt free to lounge back in my chair and listen to Joe's stirring, if at times mendacious, account of an Indian fight he had been in near Kuna, when unaided he had driven off ten Bannocks and saved the gold bricks in the boxes of Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express. I smiled patronizingly when he had concluded. "And how about the time when you were relieved of your bags without even an 'if you please?'" A shade of annoyance and chagrin passed over his bronzed face and he shifted uneasily in his chair. The click—click—click of a job press in the adjoining room sounded a running commentary to our thoughts, while from the opposite corner the splash—splash—splash of an irrigating wheel seemed to be rehearsing its version of the incident that so weighed on the driver's mind. The sun beat down on the tin roof and adobe walls of the old office with a fierce, white intensity that awakened the man from his rumination.

"It was a hotter day nor this out there on the mesa, when that young chap stepped out from behind a little clump of greasewood and as'd me perlite ernuf ter throw up my hands. No argument in the face of that thar shootin' iron, Mister Editor. He took over four thousand clean dust and made for Salt Lake on the back of my bes' leader. Never hearn tell how we caught him? No? Wall, ye see, I took my wheel hoss and made for Boise. Found Bill McConnell, governor and senator since, the same, Col. Robbins, Jim Agnew an' Hank Fisher. We made a bee line 'cross country to head him off. Changed hosses three times. We struck his trail, found whar his hoss had broke down an' he'd stolen another. That stolen hoss meant a necktie party. Sabe?

"In twenty-four hours we came in sight of him. Hoss played out. Game up. Nothin' but sand and sage brush fur miles, except one lone tree. Kinder placed there by Providence, McConnell said. Thar thet young feller set—one leg over the horn of his saddle. Fine looker. Stood six in his stockings. I knew him the minute I sot eyes on him. He knew me, but never twigged. Bill McConnell war ahead, and he opened the meetin' without singin'.

"'Good morning, stranger.'

"'Good morning.'

"'Seen anything of a man about your size straddle of a sorrel mare lookin' a heap like the one you ride?'

"'No, I haven't.'

"'That's a purty good mare o' yourn.'

"'Yes, she was worth a cool five hundred dollars, but she's a little winded now; say, mister, I'll give you five hundred dollars clear for that one o' yourn and stop the deal.' He was making a good bluff, Mister Editor. Hoss stealin' in them days was death on the spot. He knew we war on him. His offer would well pay for the broken-down hoss, and he war a-bankin' that his money would pull him through. But, yer see, he didn't know McConnell. Mac had been cap'n of the vigilants back in '63, up in ther Basin, and had a name ter keep white. He just smiled at the man's innocence. 'That's a straight blind o' your'n, pard, an' it stands us to come in, but we're thar an' hold you over. You look a leetle mite played out, as well as yer mare. If you'll jest get down an' jine our little party, it'll stretch yer legs, an' mebbe ye need stretchin' all over.'

"He got a little white under the gills, but slid down without a word. We followed suit, and Agnew threw over his head a noose, an' passin' the other end over a limb of that lone old tree, nodded that things war ready.

"That young fellow was game ter the last. Never moved a muscle. Seemed kinder like a shame. McConnell went up to him and said:

"'All right.'

"'Have you anything to say why this 'ere little picnic shouldn't proceed?'

"'Nothin'.'

"'Have ye got any word ter leave to yer friends? If ye have, make it short, fur we're goin' to break camp inside er ten minutes.'

"That young feller took his eyes off a bit of sage brush fur the first time and looked us straight in the eyes. His eyes war blue. I took notice of that, an' his face was clean and kind of pure lookin'. He didn't seem to be takin' much interest in what war goin' on 'round him. Kinder had a far-away, talkin'-ter-the-angels look. Made me feel as though I didn't count nohow. Kept thinkin' of something I learnt in Sunday school in Missouri when I warn't bigger nor that basket o' papers. Then he came to, an' drawin' a crumpled letter from his pocket, spoke with a kinder tremble in his voice:

"'Perhaps you are a better scholar nor I be. If you'll jest read that an' be kind enuf to answer it, I'll tell yer what ter say.'

"McConnell had already passed the coil of rope to Jim Agnew and he had drawn it taut. He took the letter, an', as we hung around kinder curious like, he opened it an' read out loud:

"'ETOWAH, Ga., Jan. 18, 1874.—My Dear Son James: For long weary months I have waited for news from you, since your last dear letter to your old mother. God bless you, James, and answer my prayers, that this letter may reach you, thanking you for your ever thoughtful care for me in my old age. But once more to look in your dear face and feel that my baby boy was near me would cheer my old heart more than to possess all the gold in Idaho. When are you coming home? You promised me that in the spring you would come back to me. May the good God watch over and prosper you, and return my dear boy to my old arms before I die. From your loving

"'MOTHER.'"

Joe paused and looked vacantly up at the ceiling. His eye followed the drunken gyrations of the yellow wasp. The heavy rumble of the great cylinder warned me that the outside pages were going to press and that more copy would soon be needed. Still I waited in silence.

"That letter did the business.

"McConnell had had a good edication back in Michigan, and he commenced in a strong, clear voice, but afore the closing words war out, it war all we could do ter hear his voice. Yes, sir, an' my eyes got weaker nor a sick heifer's. Fact! The rope slackened until it fell from the hands of Jim Agnew, and as the breath of the mornin' came a-rushin' through the leaves of that old tree, and long shafts o' sunlight kinder prospected down through the opening boughs, someway, my old throat caved in like an' I went ter thinkin' o' long, sunny days on the banks of the Missouri, of my old dorg, an' uv a little sister with eyes jest like this feller's, an' of my old mammy an' how she taught me to pray. Couldn't help it, Mr. Editor, but borrowin' a hoss an' robbin' a stage didn't seem a big enough thing to string that boy up fur, an' break his old mother's heart. Guess McConnell war thinkin' o' the the same way, fur he kind of reverently like folded up that soiled bit o' paper and handed it to its owner, an' without a word slipped the noose from his neck, an' then in tones as gentle as a mother's asked:

"'War ye goin' home, stranger?'

"'Yes!'

"'Good-by!'

"The boy didn't dare to trust his voice in thanks. I knew how he felt, but he drew from his belt a small bag of twenties an' offered it to Mac.

"'Hoss!'

"'No, take her, an'—good-by.'

"He mounted the mare, while we sot an' watched him out of sight, an' then like a pack o' starved coyotes, turned and silently sneaked for Boise.

"Court was adjourned, verdic' sot aside," he concluded, while I leaned back, my mind filled with the dramatic rehearsal.

"Well, so long, old man; I'm off," and the rough old Jehu shuffled out of the room, all unmindful of either the moral or the artistic points of his story.

Astronomy in the United States.

In speaking of progress in astronomy Prof. J. Norman Lockyer, of London, said the other day: "I am sorry to say that in this work the center of gravity of the activity has left our country and has gone out west. We have to look to our American cousins for a great deal that we want to know in these matters, for the reason that now they not only have the biggest telescopes and most skilled observers, but also they have been wiser than we—they have occupied high points on the earth's surface and thus got rid of the atmospheric difficulties under which we suffer in England an d especially in London."

Rubber Boots for Doggies.

Across the water they sell India rubber boots for pet dogs to wear while taking their daily run in muddy weather. They lace up the side and are pronounced very neat and useful. As their price is two dollars a set, they are easily within the reach of those who, on occasion, pay two hundred dollars for the dog that will wear them. It will strike the person who is not an intense admirer of the toy dogs that the world could get along very well without this addition to their impedimenta, says the New York Times, but since toy dogs stay, they might as well wear rubber boots.

Land Sale.

State Auditor Dunn has received a number of inquiries as to the date for the next sale of agriculture lands, which is usually held in the spring, and is unable to reply definitely as to these inquiires, as nothing can be done until the outcome of the measures now pending in the legislature relating to the state lands shall have been determined. Consequently no announcement of sales will be made until the legislature adjourns. If neither of the pine land bills goes through, the usual six weeks' notice required under the present law will be given. Under the terms of the Staples measure, if it shonld become a law, there would be no sale this year.

ALLISON IS HEARD.

The Iowa Senator Talks of Questions of Finance.

MARSALLTOWN, Ia., April 22.—Senator Allison was banqueted by the Traveling Men's Republican club of this city Friday night, and spoke at length upon the silver question, with special reference to statements made in "Coin's Financial School." The banquet was held at the Pilgrim hotel. President E. M. Wentworth, of the club, presided, and introduced the senator, who said, among other things:

"I have no doubt that finance is a familiar topic to you, and it certainly is to me. I have seen more bills, received more pamphlets, and read more upon this subject during the last year than ever before. You can all see that—to use a familiar expression—there is a screw loose somewhere, for we have seen our country pass in two or two and a half years from a condition of prosperity to one of panic and distress. We are told we have come to this situation solely because of the condition of one of the precious metals, and I realize that there is no more important question than that of the money we use."

He added that gold and silver were precious metals because of their divisibility and their nondestructibility. He referred to the fact that gold and silver were for thousands of years the money of the world, and rapidly sketched the history of the mining of these precious metals and the effect of their output as influenced by wars upon the stock of gold and silver in the world. He continued:

"It is said that in 1829 there was less than $1,000,000,000 of gold in the world. From 1850 to 1875 there was produced in the world of gold within about $200,000,000 of the amount produced from 1493 to 1850. During the 300 years prior to 1850 there was produced about $7,000,000,000 of silver, but during the twenty-five years ending 1875 there was produced nearly three times as much gold as silver.

"It is claimed that in 1873 silver its began downward course and that it was due to the action of the people by their representatives in congress. It was believed by many that this enormous increase in gold would go on from year to year. For fourteen years, during the enormous influx of gold, the gold only passed through our country to those lands where gold and silver were the measure of value. We had then suspended specie payments, and for these fourteen years we were on a paper basis, and therefore it was that it was claimed on account of the enormous production of gold that gold and silver could never again be a measure of value. However, during this time silver and gold marched side by side at a ratio of about 15½ to 1."

The speaker referred at great length to money legislation in European countries. Referring to the cessation of free coinage of silver in the various mints of Europe, he said it was the diffusion of both metals through Europe that kept them at a parity.

"It is said in 1873 we demonetized silver. It is true that at that time we changed the laws of our mints and established gold as a standard of value. I believe now that it was a mistake for Europe and for us to have changed these standards. But for twelve years prior to 1873 we were on a paper basis and it was not looked upon by our people as an important feature. No action of ours in 1873 affected the price of silver or affected the action of Europe in dealing with silver.

"The effect of our action is claimed to have been to reduce the price of all commodities and appreciate gold in the same measure that silver was depreciated. I don't believe it. Since 1873 some prices have been reduced and some advanced. Gold and silver until put in shape of money were commodities and are governed by the laws of supply and demand; and just that thing happened to silver and gold as happened under these laws to other commodities. In every country of Europe in 1873 the mint was open to silver, and in 1877 not a single mint in Europe was open to silver except for fractional coins. We were then upon a paper basis, and could exert no influence upon supply and demand. From that time the supply of silver increased, and with an increased supply and no demand in Europe it was the most natural thing in the world that silver should depreciate."

"The amount of silver in circulation in 1894 in Europe, where a gold standard has taken the place of a double standard, is $1,305,000,000, and there are now in circulation in the United States $625,000,000, while in 1873 we had not a cent. And still they claim we demonetized silver. How can we demonetize silver when we put it in circulation to that extent in twenty-two years, and this silver passes current with gold."

The senator continued that it was necessary to have both metals on a par with each other, and he predicted that an international agreement was surely coming.

LYNCHED IN ALABAMA.

Five Negroes Charged with Murder Die by the Rope.

GREENVILLE, Ala., April 23. Information has been received from Butler Springs of the brutal murder of Watts Murphy. He was a nephew of ex-Gov. Watts, of Alabama. He was murdered last Wednesday by five negroes, who placed his body in brush and set fire to the entire heap, the body being consumed. The young man having been missed from home, search was began to find out his whereabouts, when one of the murderers confessed, implicating four other negroes, all of whom were arrested and heavily guarded.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 23.—A gentleman who arrived at 9 o'clock Sunday night from Greenville, Ala., 40 miles south of here, reports that five negroes were lynched near there Saturday night.

A Greenville dispatch received at midnight confirms the lynching of the five negroes who killed young Watts Murphy. It says, however, that the victims of the mob were three women and two men, whose names were Mary Deane, Martha and Alice Greene, John Rattler and Zeb Calley. A posse of men who had charge of the five prisoners left Butler Springs about 11 o'clock Saturday night to bring them to the jail at Greenville for safe keeping. The route was a lonely one and the trip was necessarily slow. At about 3 o'clock Sunday morning, at a turn of the road, the party was suddenly surrounded by armed men, who seemed to spring from both sides of the road. The posse was covered with Winchesters, and under pain of instant death was halted. Reports say that there were about 100 men in the attacking party, all heavily armed. They made short work of it. Taking the five negroes, they tied their hands and then the shuddering wretches were taken one at a time and were hanged to the limbs of the trees that lined the road.

May Give Up Corn Island.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, via Galveston April 23.—At a cabinet meeting Saturday night it was proposed to cede to Great Britain Corn island as an equivalent for its claim for indemnity. This proposition met with strong opposition from President Zelya and another proposition was made to pay the indemnity by means of a forced loan. Matters remain in statue quo. If it does not get it, it ultimately may be compelled to surrender part of its territory to England in spite of the Monroe doctrine.

British Boat Fired On.

KEY WEST, Fla., April 23.—The master of the British schooner Gertrude, which arrived from Nassau Saturday, reports that a British smack, which plies regularly between Long Key and Nassau, was fired upon by a Spanish gunboat and two of her seamen killed and the schoner taken to Santiago de Cuba by the gunboat. Great excitement exists at Nassau over the affair.

A Death Bed.

You whom I love, till life itself exhaleth
Like the spent perfume of a sun-kissed flower,
You whose cold hand at this last hour availeth
To make me mistress of the mastering hour—

Best hope of life—to teach you how to love me:
Worst pain of death—to know you still heart-free:
For you lose nothing, dear, in losing me.
—Pall Mall Budget.

Wilt Thou Be Long?

Wilt thou be long? The workful day is o'er;
The wind croons softly to the sleeping sea;
At the old spot, upon the lonely shore,
I wait for thee.

Home to his nest the swift gray gull is winging:
Through the still dusk I hear the sailor's song;
Night to the weary rest from toil is bringing—
Wilt thou be long?

Wilt thou be long? The darkness gathers fast;
The daisies fold their fringes on the lea;
Time is so fleeting and youth will not last—
Oh, come to me!

In the clear west a silver star is burning,
But sad misgivings all my bosom throng;
With anxious heart I watch for thy returning—
Wilt thou be long?
—E. Matheson, in Chambers' Journal.

COMPLETELY PARALYZED

Physicians Are Astounded by a Peculiar Case.

A Young Man Stricken with Landry's Paralysis and Yet Recovers.

[From the Times, Philadelphia, Pa.]

Stricken with Landry's Paralysis, and yet cured. That means but little to the average layman but it means a miracle to a physician. Such is the experience of O. E. Dallimore now a resident of Madison, N. J., and a rare experience it is.

"Yes, it is true that I had Landry's Paralysis," said Mr. Dallimore to a reporter, "or else the most celebrated physicians of London were mistaken.

"It was on the 15th of March, this year," he continued, "when I was in New York city, that I first felt the symptoms of my trouble. I experienced difficulty in going up stairs, my legs failing to support me. I consulted a physician who informed me that I had every symptom of Locomotor Ataxia, but as the case developed he pronounced it a case of Landry's Paralysis and knowing the nature of the disease advised me to start for my home and friends. I gave up my work and on April 1st started for London, Ont. A well-known physician was consulted but I grew rapidly worse and on Saturday, April 7, several eminent physicians held a consultation on my case and informed me that I was at death's door, having but three to six days to live, still I lingered on, by this time completely paralyzed, my hands and feet being dead, I could hardly whisper my wants and could only swallow liquids. Oh, the misery of those moments are beyond all description and death would really have been a welcome visitor.

"Now, comes the part that has astounded the physicians. Rev. Mr. Gondy, a clergyman who visited me in my last hours, as he supposed, told me of the marvellous cures of paralysis that had been performed by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I started to take the pills about April 28 and a week after that felt an improvement in my condition. There was a warm, tingling sensation in the limbs that had been entirely dead and I soon began to move my feet and hands, the improvement continued until May 28 when I was taken out of bed for a drive and drove the horse myself. By the beginning of July I was able to walk upstairs alone and paid a visit to Niagara.

"Slowly but surely I gained my old health and strength leaving Ontario for New York on October 11 and be ginning my work again on October 25, 1894. Cured of Landry's Paralysis in eight months." To confirm his story beyond all doubt, Mr. Dallimore made the following affidavit.

Sworn and subscribed before me December 3, 1894. AMOS C. RATHBUN, [SEAL.] Notary Public.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

This Means Business.

On the principal lines of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway passenger trains are electric lighted, steam heated and protected by block signals. With these modern appliances, railway traveling at high speeds has reached a degree of safety heretofore unknown and not attainable on roads where they are not in use. Electric lights and steam heat make it possible to dispense with the oil lamp and the car stove. Block signals have reduced the chances for collisions to the minimum by maintaining an absolute interval of space between trains.

Sounds but a mockery to the dyspeptic. He hears it, of course, but his stomach does not respond to the call. He "goes through the motions" and suffers afterwards for the small amount of victuals he partakes of. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters alters his condition into one of ability to eat plentifully, digest heartily, and assimilate thoroughly. Malaria, rheumatism, constipation and biliousness are conquered by this world-famed medicine.

THERE is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. —Maple syrup made its appearance in our town this week, $1.10 per gal.

—The Delano creamery is rapidly approaching completion. It will be ready for milk soon.

—Del Young struck out Monday morning for Buffalo and vicinity on an egg buying trip.

—A drain was made for the exhaust at the power house this week, doing away with an unsightly mud hole.

—Valentine Eppel has purchased the old mill horse from Superintendent Lindsley and now does his own teaming.

—John B Plattner has moved into his new store, A. L. Meadey has moved into his new building and Sandberg into Olaf Peterson's.

—L. M. Maxfield is playing hermit in the Coffin creamery neighborhood. It seems to agree with him nicely. He spends his Sundays at home in Delano.

—A. W. Wittman says he never knew that rabbits would bite until recently when a young one nipped him on the finger. It won't do so any more; he says the cat got it.

--If the road boss on the district running by the cemetery would see to grading the road by that place so that it would be safe to turn a team around in the road he would oblige many people who pay visits to the last resting place of their friends.

—Presiding Elder Atchinson is expected here on Saturday, May 4, to preach in the evening, on Sunday twice and on Monday and Tuesday evenings, at the M. E. church. He is an able man and deserves good audiences at each service. Come out and hear him.

—We are informed that C. G. Halgren and C. O. Teas, of Watertown, have, with accustomed enterprise and forethought, secured Peter Jannick's Farmer's Brass Band to play on Memorial Day, at Watertown. Where will the Delanoites now get their music; or will they go through the day in silence and seclusion.

—Notices are posted in the Post Office, advising people to send no letters without having their name written on the envelope. Get some envelopes at the GAZETTE office with your name; or blank, for you to write your own name, so when you mail a letter, if it is not delivered to the party you write to it will be returned to you.

—The Junior League had a pleasant social at the home of Leon Frazee on Monday evening. They elected officers for the ensuing term as follows: Pres., Oscar Ball; 1st Vice Pres., Elvie Cameron; 2nd Vice Pres., Bessie Wilder; 3d Vice Pres., Kitty Johnson; 4th Vice Pres., Blanche Ruder; Sec., Paul Kohlbe; Asst. Sec., Ray Borrill; Treas., Glenn Wilder.

—M. A. O'Hair, I. Gutzwiller, Jr., J. W. Lindsley, the I. O. O. F., and others are figuring on putting down artificial stone or tiling pavements. A man was up Saturday from Minneapolis looking up the prospects for that kind of work here and in neighboring towns. He thinks if work enough is guaranteed to pay him to do so he will send an expert workman here, have the raw material shipped and get it manufactured here, adding another industry to our village.

—I. Gutzwiller and C. G. Roosen and M. A. O'Hair now have city water on their premises.

—Wheat has been raising nearly every day for some time and farmers who are done seeding and have a surplus are generally disposing of it at advanced prices.

--We understand that Guy Halgren of Watertown, a recent graduate in Pharmacy, has gone to Henning, Minnesota, to establish himself in the drug business. Success to you Guy.

—Charley Conzet is full of jokes and pranks and is always interested in new schemes. It is said the latest addition to his irons in the fire is the photograph business. For reference enquire of most any of his neighbors.

—The Cemetery Association is to meet at R. M. Walter's office on Saturday evening, May 4, at 7 o'clock sharp. Important business is to be transacted. All interested in fixing up the cemetery are invited to be present.

--Those return envelopes on sale at the GAZETTE office are pronounced quite a convenience. They will insure the return of your letters without having to be opened in case they fail to reach their destination. Call and get some.

—Bishop Dyer has been taking observations and says the drought extends downwards about four or five feet; and it will take a month to wet it up. But the universe is not run by the Bishop and he may be a little mistaken.

--Decoration Day is hastening on and arrangements should be made to visit neighboring burying grounds and deck with flowers the last resting place of those who fought their country's battles. The graves should be straightened up and made to show that the buried ones are not forgotten by friends.

--Prof. Probst had another collision this week. This time his bicycle ran into a hole, became unmanageable, and the rider suddenly kneeled on the hard ground; this part of the gentleman's anatomy being somewhat tender, was considerably bruised and discolored and the Prof. being somewhat lame prefers to travel more slowly and surely, on foot.

—Rev. Cleary, of Minneapolis, will preach on the occasion of the temperance meeting at Watertown on Thursday, May 2, in the morning. He is a fine speaker and should be heard by a good crowd from Delano. The convention will last all day and visitors are promised the first class entertainment which the Watertown people know how to give. This will be a big day for our neighboring village. Let us be neighborly and assist in swelling the numbers of those present on that occasion.

--The High School graduating class have secured Rev. T. Davies to deliver their baccalaureate sermon. They expect to have other able speakers present on the occasion of the commencement exercises, and to have class exercises. The class this year consists of Miss Frances Bauman and Miss Grace O'Hair. They will endeavor to keep up the reputation of the school however, by doing their parts well. May they succeed is the wish of all interested in educational affairs, and that should be every one.

—Potatoes grow well in this vicinity; are about as good a crop as can be raised east of town for some distance. And authorities tell us for the past five years in this state, at the principal shipping points, the price has averaged 51 cts per bushel, on board cars. 150 bushels to the acre is a fair crop and can, it is claimed, be raised for $20, which would leave a handsome profit for this crop. Beans and onions are, usually, good crops to raise, produce well, and nearly always bring good prices; sorghum helps out the eatables in good shape.

—No town in the big woods, perhaps, presents a finer field for good, hard temperance work than does Delano. And none needs some work in this line worse. There are many here who would appreciate it after it was done, and a few would willingly contribute their share toward making a success of any work in this line, and will be pleased to learn that a movement is on foot to secure several speakers from abroad, and, with some from our midst, have a grand temperance meeting in the City Hall in the near future. Success to the enterprise.

—It is a leetle tough on the Eagle's editor after all the blowing and spouting about a Delano Cornet Band being organized, and the pledging of enough money by some of the business men to aid in securing an instructor to have the whole matter flat, so terribly. It is now claimed that no one can be found to take the place of Mr. Everson. It seems as if enough time had been spent mourning that gentleman's departure to have enabled somebody, that is if there is much brass band talent in town, to have acquired enough knowledge of music to make at least a decent appearance in his stead

—Several of our citizens and others who have friends buried in the Delano cemetery have graded, sodded and fixed up their lots nicely. Their example might well be followed by others. Quite a number of the tomb stones have fallen down and need straightening up and some of them resetting. A well is needed to furnish water for the flowers and grass in the cemetery. A row of hitching posts along the road would be cheaper and better than allowing the horses hitched to eat up the fence. The road by the grounds is very rough and uneven, and should be leveled up, even for ordinary travel. It is hard to turn around in the road, especially with a wagon or buggy load of people. These things need looking after.

Some dogs are nice,
If not troubled with a habit;
Worth a good price,
But he, was too fond of rabbit.

--The Kerr house on R. R. Ave. is being put in order and it is expected the owers will again take up their residence among us.

--The Assessor will call on you in a few days to find out what you are worth for taxation. Figure up your assets before he comes around and be ready for him.

--Professor Leavens and some of his school boys were around last evening hunting for a chance to get some soil to plant out some trees on the school grounds

—The highest side of the elevator horse power shed, if in some more favorably located place, would make an excellent billboard for circus and like advertisements.

—A trotting race between Colonel B. and Ned C. is to be one of the attractions on Fair Day. The winner offers to trot against any other good honest old farm horse that may be brought out.

--By this time every spring, lots of young colts were to be seen in years gone by. This year, so far, we have seen but one. At this rate, and especially if people are going to eat up the old ones, horses will soon be among the curiosities.

—A balky horse and driver excited considerable comment yesterday morning as the passenger train from the cities pulled in, near Young Hotel. The horse finally brought up to a hitching post near that hostlery, while the driver returned to the barn.

—A few of our citizens use their water priyileges to sprinkle the streets in front of their business blocks and residences. They come quite handy in dry weather. If all the streets could be sprinkled occasionally it would be a good thing for the village.

--Quite an epedemic of discolored optics has been prevailing here recently. Wash Ruder lays in to an old revolving chair; I. W. McDonald, to dirt; Miss Viola Cunningham says base ball; while Dr. Walter insists it is due to plain, tough, Norway pine.

—The school children have acquired the habit of running down to the Post Office at recess to such an extent as to become a sort of nuisance to those in attendance. One day this week some of them tarried so long there, or on the way, as to be late at school and the Principal forbade any more of that. Good for the Prof.

—The school entertainment at the City Hall last Friday evening rather eclipsed all former efforts in this direction, as was expected, from preparations would be the case. The chorus, "Springtime" was well rendered. The Flag Drill, by a class of girls, was good, Miss Frances Bauman giving the word of command like a veteran of the last war. The violin solo by Mr. Kuchenmeister was encored, Joe acknowledging the honor by a neat little bow. "A Masterpiece of Diplomacy", by Stella Davis and Erma Wilder, as two nervous women, Vernon Wilder as a "peacemaker", George Kurtz and Fay Parslow, two doctors called in to see a sick boy, Joseph Kuchenmeister, a distracted father and husband, Walter Mara and little Tommy Jacobs as the sick boy behind the scenes and in front, was well received. "Return of the Birds" song by girls from the primary room was fine. Mother Goose, Miss Olive Johns, was rendered in good style, and the family did their part toward making the evening's entertainment enjoyable. Freddy Peters cut the blackbird pie and let James Murphy out in full dress to the amusement of the audience. John Gleason, the little man who took a wheelbarrow to bring his wife home upon was splendid; as was Gertie Kohlbe, the wife who kept her parasol in place while the gallant spouse hoisted her up onto the vehicle again after she had tumbled off. Earl Chapman and Puss Sherer as Jack Spratt and wife, licking the platter was quite laughable. Emma Wiese and Walter Buckley did the little man in the pint cup act. Queenie Buckley, as little Miss Muffet, played her part to perfection. Alva Catlin, as Johnny Horner, played well.

The free gymnastics by a class of boys, was excellently performed. The Quartette then rendered "Wanderer's Night Song."

Prof. Leavens made a few remarks, thanking the audience and kind friends for their assistance in getting up and patronizing the entertainment. The last piece, a comedy, "The Eye of Love", was played by Roy Sutton, Roy Wilder, John Catlin, Alva Catlin, Anna Maxfield and Amanda Erickson. Some of the parts are said by many of the audience to have been played quite naturally.

As a whole the entertainment was a grand success and we are told netted about $30 00 toward buying a new library. Several have suggested the propriety of having the entertainment again with several new songs and changes to give those who were not looking for anything so good and failed to attend, a chance to see it and also to help the school library along. It is possible those interested may be prevailed up on to make a second appearance.

Miss Ruth Walker and Miss Joy Kerr drove up from Minneapolis and remained in town Sunday night, on their way to Montrose, to visit their sister, Inez Wright.

School Jottings.

The entertainment is over and with it a great deal of worry and trouble have vanished. It was a success, financially and otherwise.

Roy Sutton had the misfortune to lose his hat, Friday evening, but it was found Saturday.

The majority of the General History class do not seem to be "in fashion" as they know nothing about Napoleon's troubles with Austria.

The seniors have organized and hold offices as follows: Frances Bauman, Imperator Prima Class Scriba, Class Skald, and Class Seer; Grace O'Hair, Imperator Secunda, Class Schatzmeisterin, Class Chronicler and Class Prodigy. Their motto is: "Cogitare bene bene est; agere bene divinum est." Their flower is the Wild Rose and their colors are white and gold. The yell which they have adopted is: Barba, barba, skola rive; Hoorah, Hoorah, '96.

This is Arbor week and we regret that we cannot celebrate it as it should be celebrated. The teachers have been making an effort for some time, to get trees, etc., for the school ground, but as the scholars knew from experience that it would be useless they decined not to plant any trees this year. In the dim future when the soil is improved we may hope to see children sitting under large trees which will then be growing on the school ground.

Bringing home a wife,
The pride of his life.

IN THE NEW YORK PRESS.

The stoutest ship may breast the gale
And still be driven back.
What though to reach the port she fail,
Shall we declare she could not sail
Because she had to tack?

When storms belate and plagues impede,
When aches and ills betide,
Ambition's goal may not be won—
Yet thou hast bravely, nobly done
If thou hast bravely tried.

"He nobly does who nobly dares,"
When trials sore oppress,
Whose perseverance naught can shake,
Though failure follows in his wake,
His failure is success.

The fiercest battles are to fight,
The strongest forts to scale,
Sometimes the bravest heroes fall,
Sometimes the truest lives of all
Are lived by ones who fail.

SEVERAL criminals have recently attributed to hypnotism the crimes they have done. There is the "love of money, the root of all evil" which goes a long way towards "hypnotizing" many to do wrong.

FATHER PHELAN, of St. Louis, is being scored on all hands, by Catholics and Protestants alike, for his denunciation of the Christian Endeavor and Epworth League societies, as organizations of harm and wrong doing.

HYPNOTISM seems to keep to the front. Notwithstanding the exclusion from the University of the new fad, Dean Sudduth is reported to have secured a room in the Pioneer Press building, St. Paul, and a class of a few dentists, doctors and lawyers and delivered a course of lectures on the subject. He is said to be going to Chicago, then to Europe to finish his education on this line. Wonder if he don't hypnotize his hearers to write him up occasionally, and keep him before the public.

IN last Sunday's Pioneer Press we were pleased to see a good cut of our old time friend, J. B. Chaney, now assistant librarian of the State Historical Society; and to read some of his reminiscences of early days in St. Paul and of the changes in the topography of the place. He speaks of 1872, at about that time he worked in a building on Minnesota street, between 3d and 4th, where D. Ramaley was in partnership with him in the printing business. At the same time the writer was sole compositor on the Journal of Commerce, published by F. Carson. Mr. Chaney's historical changes and facts about St. Paul would be interesting to many.

WARS, wars and rumors o wars that fill the metropolitan press of the day from every land. Though at present there seems to be little shooting going on. China and Japan it was supposed, had got through fighting; but now the terms of peace must suit all the friends and neighbors of both nations. Russia, Germany and France want things favorable to China while the United States and Great Britain favor Japan. And while the cry is peace, peace, there is no peace. England is around among the South American countries collecting her debts, with a boat load or so of soldiers and a British flag to fly over ports of entry of their debtors while they take in the "tariff". Norway and Sweden are, according to reports, on the very edge of a big war cloud. Troops have lately been called upon to suppress riots at Marquette, Michigan, among the ore dressers, union and non-union workers. Even "Poor Lo" in Turtle Mountains threatens to exterminate the Pale Face unless things go better. He claims to have sold some timber on the reservation which the government has not yet paid for and can't see why he has not a right to do so. When everybody finds out on which side he is there may be a terrible cannonading for a few days. With the improved methods of exterminating people and destroying property it wouldn't take long to change the map of the world; to wipe out several nations. The many different views people take on many different subjects tends to prevent any very largely concentrated action, so we may, notwithstanding rumors of war, continue to get along without any very serious troubles for years, yet.

SOME republican and a few gold bug democratic papers are trying to read Daniel W. Voorhees into the ground. They abused him for being a free trader, for supporting the Willson bill. Now, because he expresses himself in favor of bimetallism: of having, as we nearly always have had since our existence, gold and silver both for money, hop onto him, red hot, and claim that he is for free silver. Because he expresses himself as favoring enough money for people to do business with; of having 16 to 1 the ratio between silver and gold they try to laugh him to scorn. To knock him out of the ring. Let 'em knock! Let 'em go it to their hearts content! Perhaps they will succeed in advertising his views to the people, so thoroughly, that they, believing with him, that bimetallism is the right thing for the country, will nominate and elect him President of the United States in 1896.

STILLWATER set the example and resurrected the old Curfew bell, and many of the smaller towns are following their example. The proper place for children and older people, at night, is usually at home with their families. Not only boys and girls under 16 years of age are better off there; but many men and women, under the cover of darkness indulge in that which would not bear the light of day. Our State has laws and our villages have ordinances, which, if enforced as they should be, would prevent much wrong doing. Just why an especial law should be made for children to be kept in after nine, don't present itself to most people. Simply because half a dozen young ruffians make night hideous is not sufficient excuse for prohibiting well behaved and orderly children from enjoying outdoor life in the fine summer evenings for a few minutes after nine, if they wish. The proper thing to do is to punish offenders and not innocent people. If a few unruly characters disturb the peace and dignity of the community they should be made to feel the strong arm of the law, whether they be under or over 16 years of age, and whether it be before or after 9 o'clock at night. In most towns the ringleaders of mischief are older than 16; old enough to be foxy and set others on to do damage to property or other mischief and, like the breachy cow in a herd, run, at the sight of danger, leaving others to face the music. A better thing would be to enforce laws already in existence. Oblige old and young to behave themselves, day and night.

THE fight, at the next general election, ever the Anderson R. R. bill, taxing unused R. R. lands the same as other unused lands, will, doubtless, be an exceedingly warm one. The newspapers in the northern part of the state where most of the unused lands are, and where poor settlers are paying big taxes for adjoining lands, while the R. R. lands pay nothing are making desperate efforts to educate the voters throughout the central and southern part of the state as to the situation. They know most about it and how it works, and should be listened to; their side fully understood. The Aitkin Age is working hard for the people. It claims C. K. Davis has given as his opinion, that the taxing of the unused lands will not, in the least, interfere with the gross earnings tax, as it has been collected sor years; but will simply be an additional tax to the amount levied on the unused lands. Several papers in other parts of the state claim that the taxing of the lands will change the whole system of taxing R. R. property; that the gross earnings tax cannot be collected if the land is taxed. It is claimed that the R. R. people will do their best to prevent the endorsing of the law taxing the lands, by the voters in '96; that they will claim that it will rearrange their whole tax system and do away with the gross earnings tax. In case the R. R. companies do make any very energetic fight against the new law, that of itself will be pretty good evidence that they want no change, and they aren't noted for opposing changes where they are to derive any benefit. The matter will bear investigating. Read all you can on both sides of the subject and be ready to vote intelligently, and not as some boss tells you on election day.

Wright County.

Wright county is one of the best, in many ways, of the eighty odd counties of one of the best states in the Union. It contains twenty townships. Has sixteen villages, none of them very large; yet thriving little places where the business of each neighborhood is attended to. Most of the villages are supplied with stores, shops, a postoffice, mill; with doctors, lawyers ministers, good schools, and all that goes to make life pleasant and profitable.

There is a healthy rivalry among the towns for the business of the country surrounding them. Yet each likes to see the other do well. Just as one farmer likes to see others prosper, realizing that the more good farms in his immediate neighborhood, the more valuable will be his own; and in proportion to the division of taxes among many able to pay, the less will be his share. So with the villages, the more wealthy, refined and law abiding, the better name will the county have. The higher place will it take in all that goes to make up a great state.

The people of the entire county are proud of the waterpowers at Rockford, Hanover and Clearwater. They are proud of the lakes at Howard, Waverly, Buffalo and many others, not forgetting that clear and sparkling body of water, abounding in the finest fish in the country, which bears the name of that noble patriot that gave up his life in the cause of American freedom, Pulaski. They are proud of the fine Court House that stands in the beautiful grounds at the county seat, Buffalo. They are proud of the many spires and steeples that mark the houses of worship and point heavenward. Of the schoolhouses in one hundred and ten districts, where children are furnished facilities for acquiring an education that will enable them to look out for themselves in years to come. They are proud of their professional men; of their tradesmen; of their merchants, of their farmers; of their men and women, and especially are they proud of the rising generation; the boys and girls born and raised in this county.

No county has juster reason for pride than has old Wright in itf natural facilities, and in those acquired. In its vast forests, its productive soil and well watered meadows. Its thrifty citizens, and all that goes to make up a first class civilization.

What an incentive to each voter to do his duty; to never fail to exercise the privilege for which our fathers fought. The privilege of casting in our little ballot in the way we wish; of posting ourselves in regard to the leading questions of the day, and of voting our own will in the matter. Of choosing such men to administer the government of our school, town, village, county state or nation as we desire. Of acquainting ourselves with the history and the views of the different individuals, of knowing where they stand, and how far we can trust them to do their duties. Read the newspapers is the best way to post up and to keep posted, that is furnished within the reach of all. Take at least one paper of each party, where you can; or take one good county paper anyway and if you can, a state paper. Keep reading matter you are not ashamed of before your family, at all times. If you do not, the children will borrow some dime novels, or something no better. If you can afford to take a magazine, Demorest's, the Cosmopolitan and others are good. The Scientific American is a splendid publication for a family, comes weekly, at reasonable cost for so fine a paper. What your boys and girls are; what they will be, depends much on what they read. If they know little or nothing of affairs beyond their own homes; or away from the nearest town, don't blame them; nor don't be surprised; unless you have furnished them with facilities for learning of other places. Call at the GAZETTE office and subscribe for some reading matter of which you will be proud, and have your boys and girls so well posted on affairs in general that you will not have to blush for their ignorance of things of which they should be familiar. BUFFALO GAZETTE one dollar per year in advance. Clubbing rates with several first class magazines and papers.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, April 26, 1895.

President Cleveland has a right to feel offended with any democrat who believes that he contemplates or has ever contemplated taking any step that would even seem like an attempt to coerce Federal office-holders into advocating his views of financial matters. No one is surprised that republicans should pretend to believe that the President has such intentions; they have always misrepresented his acts as well as his intentions, but it is certainly surprising that any democrat, in view of Mr. Cleveland's record on the subject of office-holders taking an active part in political matters, should be willing to accept such a story. President Cleveland doesn't differ from other men in wishing to see his views on finance or any other public question adopted by his party, but he has no idea of asking or allowing office-holders to neglect their legitimate duties in order to advocate his own or anybody else's views on finance or any other political subject.

Now that it has been settled that the Supreme Court will hear arguments on the petition for a rehearing of the income tax cases on May 6, and expected that a full bench will sit on that date, everybody is trying to discover some method of ascertaining how Justice Jackson will vote, as his vote is likely to be the deciding one as to a rehearing, and if favorable thereto, as to the constitutionality of the law. Justice Jackson although a democrat, was appointed to the Supreme Court by President Harrison. He was made a U. S. Circuit Judge by President Cleveland during his first term.

So we are to lose our "Teddy" after all. He has not been able to stand the "taffy" lavished upon him by the big New Yorkers, who believe, or have made him believe that they believe him the only man who can make a thorough job of reforming the police force of New York City. Consequently "Teddy", otherwise known as Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, will resign from the U. S. Civil Service Commission and accept the position of Police Commissioner of New York city. It is not surprising that the newspapers of New York city should have been a unit in favoring this change of base on the part of "Teddy". They know that he will keep himself and everybody else connected with the police department of that city in hot water from the time he enters office, and that he will stir up lots of interesting local copy for them. But will he reform the police? That's another question altogether. He may and then again he may not. He has been High Mugky Muck of the U. S. Civil Service Commission during the greater part of two administrations, but if he has been instrumental in bringing about any real reforms in the Government service no one except himself has been able to locate them. But he always shows up well in a newspaper interview, and talks interestingly; hence he has had little difficulty in keeping himself before the public which is always ready to forgive any fad of those who know how to make themselves interesting. Washington regrets the loss of "Teddy" but expects to keep track of him through the New York papers.

President Cleveland might have been excused for smiling and quietly shaking hands with himself when he learned that his "Boy Comptroller" of the Currency—Hon. James H. Eckles—had been offered $10,000 a year to become financial editor of the Chicago Times-Herald, which has recently become the property of Mr. Kohlsaat, and had declined the offer. It was certainly a notable tribute to the sagacity of President Cleveland in selecting Mr. Eckles for the position he has filled so well.

The latest estimate of Treasury officials is that at least 20 per cent of those who are known to be liable to the income tax have failed to make returns, among them some of the richest men in the country, including the Vanderbilts. The delinquents will be proceeded against as soon as possible, but legal resistance is expected from the most of them, as it is known that it was by the advice of their lawyers that many of them failed to make returns.

Senator Voorhees denies that he said, as was recently widely published, that he had information that the Supreme Court would reverse the decision of Judge Woods and release Eugene Debs. What he did say was that he believed the Supreme Court would so decide, his belief being founded on his opinion of the law, and not upon any advance information as to what the court will do.

Secretary Morton is still after the beef trust. He will show up its methods, even if the anti-trust law is n. g.

Hark! Hear the British lion roar.
Up and down, along the shore.
Mosquito, inferior;
Retires, to interior.

McGary's Musings.

INDEPENDENCE, April 30, 1895.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—I have not started out to write neighborhood news nor much of any thing, for I am confused in the head. We read in the Book while Moses was encamped under the mount and while the forked lightnings played the midnight dance around the camp of Israel and the thunders echoed back from Mount Sinai, and while Moses was away interceding for them and receiving the law from God, some of the more officious Israelites, at the midnight hours were making a golden calf, for it seems they wanted no other god but the god of mammon. And so it seems that tradition has followed us on down to this, the twilight of the 19th century, and such officials as John Sherman, Grover Cleveland and the Wall street money mongers say we must have a golden calf to worship; for silver is a spurious metal, and will not answer for money. It served as money in Abraham's time, and served the United States as a legal standard until 1873, when Congress passed through that unrighteous act, the demonitization of silver, which has done its work for generations yet unborn. When you make a single gold standard that establishes a fixed value for all commodities and by that all labor and produce will be governed. It seems that the people ought to see that this is only a trick of the moneyed class to force this injustice upon the people for the sake of their own aggrandizement, yet many of them swallow it whole. Do not even stop to masticate it any. The republican party denies that a man from England was paid big money to get the United States Congress to pass a law demonetizing silver in 1873. But they can never make it satisfactory to the minds of hundreds of thousands of the common people, but what it is true all the same.

The coinage act of 1870 provided for the coinage of both gold and silver. The coinage of the silver dollar was suspended in 1873. The subsidary coin and the trade dollar being all the silver we had and was legal tender in sums of only $5.00 The coinage law of 1890 has never been changed, and, consequently, the silver dollar is a legal tender in the payment of government bonds, as well as the gold dollar. Can you not now see why the bond holders oppose the free coinage of silver? Please show me on the statute books any law authorizing a gold reserve fund. There is none. It is only a pretense to make believe that gold is, and can be, the only legal money. This is deception, villainy and fraud of the worst kind Now the republican party comes up and denies that a man from England was paid big money to come over here and get Congress to pass a law demonetizing silver. They have never been able to disprove it successfully. And even this is no worse than our National Banking laws, which no sane republican would dare deny, but the republicans were the father and god-mother of this most iniquitous act, which gives the banks control of our money; and we have a corporation currency.

After the night is past and daylight has come, it is customary for man to open his eyes and view his surroundings. We must not be blind to party affiliations. Throw off the mask and look things square in the face. Life is short at the farthest, and we cannot afford to enslave our bodies, our minds, our intellects and our appetites for the sake of party power. Let us be men, and to whatever befalls us, through natural law, we will submit. But never bow the knee at the shrine of a money god.

The text I have taken is a deep one and requires a giant mind to go into the depth of its meaning but thought if I could only produce one thread of argument, it might help to keep the wheel of our monetary system in motion. Whatever the government stamps and says is a dollar, surely is a dollar. No matter what John Sherman or Grover Cleveland says. But if a man is wedded to his church, or his party, you have to pound him on the head with a good deal of convincing argument before you can break up the fallow ground of his brain.

I am sick, from head to stomach, of reading so much in the papers, that nothing but a single gold standard and a high protective tariff will save this country from being shipwrecked, or stranded upon the shore of the democratic party. Some of these editors who run our leading daily papers have about as much conception of our finance (unless they talk for money and I suppose many of them do) as the ass that draws the plow share that marketh the course of civilization. We read in the Scripture that God chose the weak things of this world to confound the wise, and I have no doubt that many a plow boy of today knows more about how his country should be governed, than many of the would be wise penny politicians. If all that these fellows put in their papers is intended for political medicine and to purge out the inner man, and to make him a new creature in politics they have mistaken their calling, for it will take more than a quack doctor in politics to save this country from the hard spell of colic it now has.

ROCKFORD RIPPLES.

F. H. Johnson and W. C. Hawk visited Delano last Friday night. On their way home, it being very dark, they got upset in the ditch near Sherry's place. Glad to note they were not injured beyond a few scratches and a badly damaged buggy. They put up for the night and came home in the morning. If F. H. had traveled the road between Rockford and Delano as often as his brother Chester he would have known the ditch was there, "Eb, Chet?"

One young man's name, as it appeared in last week's items, did not just suit him and he was going to do the writer up. He was given an invitation to try.

J. D. Gurney visited the city on Monday.

Florence Murphy is staying a few days at home with her mother, who is sick. Glad to note she is convalescent.

LONG LAKE.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Weeks of Minneapolis visited relatives at Long Lake Sunday.

Warren Wakefield's sheep fold has been visited by wolves of late and Sunday last several persons, men and boys turned out with fire arms, spades and mattocks to investigate the supposed den of the destructive animals. After digging and removing considerable earth the place was thoroughly explored resulting in finding nothing of the wolf kind. It is to be hoped that with these and other demonstrations these enemies of sheep raising have sought other parts.

Mr. and Mrs. Getchell, of Minneapolis, have been visiting their relatives, the Walsfields, in this locality.

The Orono Lodge I. O. O. F. celebrated the 76th anniversary of the organization of that order last week.

The entertainment held at the Town Hall last week proved to be a success. The Wayzata Brass band furnished the music.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.
Square Type.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the ntler sex, every one of whom should subscribe to morest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and u will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put u in the way of saving money by finding in one agazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of e whole family.

A SUBSCRIPTION raised among women named Katharine in England and America has been the means of placing a monumental stone of gray fossil marble over the remains at Petersborough cathedral of Katharine of Aragon, first wife of Henry VIII., and the sublime figure in Shakespeare's drama named after that monarch. HORSE meat as an article of food is not new to the people of Oregon. The old missionaries from 1833 to 1844 used it as a regular diet. In 1843 Mrs. Dr. Whitman writes in her diary: "We have been able to get but little venison for the mission, and to feed our men and our visitors we have bought for food ten wild horses from the Cayuse Indians." The flesh of the wild horse fattened on the rich bunch grass is very different from the flesh of the old, broken-down dray horses used in Europe.

IT is stated that fifty young women have just been graduated from the woman's law class of the University of New York, and received their diplomas. The class is under the direction of the Woman's Educational society. It is not the intention of all these graduates to enter upon the active practice of the profession; most of them have pursued the study chiefly for educational purposes. The purpose of the society directing these legal studies is to give intelligent direction to the efforts of women to influence legislation.

THE latest report by the statistician of the United States department of agriculture gives some interesting information about the corn crop in proportion to the domestic uses for the grain. The number of bushels per capita of population varied from 28 in 1870 to 22 in 1873, rose to 34 in 1885, and sunk to 18 for 1894. The number of bushels of corn to each hog reported to be in the United States at the beginning of the calendar year was 37 in 1871, fell to 30 for 1874, rose to more than 51 for 1876, declined to 27 for 1882, advanced to 42 for 1886, and fell off to 27¼ for three months ago.

ADMIRAL MEADE'S squadron is making a record for itself in southern waters. Attention is called to the fact that the ships in fleet formation were able to maintain a speed of 13 knots an hour. The best that any nation has been able to show heretofore has been 12 knots, and ordinarily the rate has been only 10 knots. The chief difficulty reported by the admiral was the trouble found in reading the flagship signals at the distances it was advisable to keep in order to insure safety. The American navy is all right, and other nations appreciate the fact.

IT seems that the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad managers have not lost faith in artificial rain-making. It is announced that they will fit up six cars with rainmakers' supplies and appliances to be used during the coming summer in demonstrating that rain can be forced from the clouds by the use of chemicals in the arid regions of the west. Last season the company had three cars in the rain-making service, which met with indifferent success. Agents of the agricultural department of Washington will accompany the rainmakers and give the theory a scientific test.

A CLEVER TRICK.

John Bull Outwitted by the Republic of Nicaragua.

Occupation of Corinto by British Forces Proves a Futile Measure by the Simple Means of Closing the Port.

NEW YORK, April 30.—A special to the World from Managua April 28 says: It is stated here that in view of Nicaragua's tactics, the last proposition made by United States Ambassador Bayard to the British government for a fortnight's time for Nicaragua to pay the indemnity in will be accepted.

LONDON, April 30.—A dispatch from Managua gives the following details of the landing of a British force at Corinto: Shortly after 2 o'clock in the morning twenty-two boats filled with marines and seamen were lowered from the warships and immediately after the vessels came around bows on and advanced in a line toward the government pier. Each large launch carried a machine gun forward. There was a great crowd at the pier, but no hostile demonstration was made. The landing party marched without opposition to the custom house and hoisted the British flag thereon.

A part of the marines occupy the principal square of the city. Rear Admiral Stephenson has declared martial law. The landing party was commanded by Capt. French, of the Royal Arthur, who immediately issued a proclamation assuring the citizens that their rights would be respected and that they might pursue their vocations without fear of molestation.

COLON, Colombia, April 30.—The Nicaraguan government, in view of the occupation of Corinto by the British forces under Rear Admiral Stephenson, for the purpose of collecting the customs revenues at that port to satisfy the demands of Great Britain for an indemnity for the expulsion of Consular Agent Hatch and other British subjects from Bluefields, has decreed the closing of the port.

PASO DE CABALLOZ, Nicaragua, April 30.—The plan of Nicaragua to isolate the British at Corinto is being carefully carried out. Orders for goods to be sent to Corinto have been countermanded until the blockade is raised. The threat now is the British will occupy more territory. It is not believed the United States will allow that.

LONDON, May 1.—A Managua dispatch says: At a late hour Monday evening President Zelaya received a telegram from Washington stating that Great Britain would withdraw her ships from Corinto and give Nicaragua fifteen days in which to pay the $75,000 smart money if such a proposition would be accepted by Nicaragua. The dispatch also states that, so far as the remaining conditions in the ultimatum were concerned, they should be so modified as to meet the objections of Nicaragua. It is understood that these propositions are the results of the efforts of the United States to bring about a settlement of the pending difficulty in a manner alike honorable to both countries.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—After several conferences Monday with Secretary Gresham and Secretary Herbert, the secretary of the navy sent dispatches to the commanders of the United States gunboats Alert and the Atlanta, directing them to proceed without delay to San Juan del Sur and Greytown, Nicaragua, respectively.

When Secretary Herbert was asked the significance of these orders he said that they were due to the statement of the newspapers that a revolution was probable in Nicaragua. He wanted it distinctly understood that these vessels are sent to Nicaragua for the purpose of caring for the citizens of the United States and their interests, and not on any business connected with the situation at Corinto.

ONLY A FRIENDLY HINT.

No Menace Contained in the Memoranda Presented.

LONDON, April 27.—The Daily News has this dispatch from Yokohama: The memoranda presented by the Russian, German and French ministers at Tokio represented the cession of Liao Tong to Japan as a constant menace to Peking, calculated to nullify the independence of Corea, therefore the powers, desiring to show their sincere friendship for Japan, advised her to renounce the possession of this territory. The friendliness of this advice was especially emphasized. The note, it was said, was not intended to be an open or covert menace. The impression grows that Japan can rely upon the friendly counsel and good offices of the United States in preventing her being deprived of the fruit of the victory.

SHANGHAI, April 27.—A dispatch received here from Peking says that affairs there are in a critical state. Some of the generals are in favor of continuing the war. The censors object to Viceroy Li Hung Chang and the terms of the treaty of peace between China and Japan, and the officials are claiming that the emperor alone should decide upon the terms. The ratification of the treaty, consequently, is uncertain and if it is not ratified it is feared that there will be trouble with the army.

KILLED HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW.

Ex-City Attorney Luscomb, of Milwaukee, Shoots Emil Sanger.

MILWAUKEE, April 30.—Emil Sanger, a brother of Walter Sanger, the bicyclist, was shot and killed by Robert Luscomb, ex-city attorney, at a late hour Saturday night and Luscomb is in jail. Sanger and Luscomb are brothers-in-law and there has been bad blood in the family for a number of years. Sanger's wife is a sister of Luscomb. Saturday night she sought shelter in Luscomb's house, claiming her husband was ill-treating her. Sanger went to Luscomb's house, sought admission, and Luscomb thereupon shot him through a plate-glass door with a double-barreled shotgun. The charge entered his head, killing him instantly.

INSURGENTS ROUTED.

Spanish Troops and Cuban Rebels in Battle—Losses on Both Sides.

GUANTANAMO, April 30.—It is reported that a column of government troops under Col. Copellos made an attack Monday upon a band of insurgents 700 strong under command of the rebel leader Maceo, killing nine and wounding a large number of the revolutionists. The government forces had two killed and five wounded.

DIRECT TAX.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The text of the opinion of Chief Justice Fuller in the income tax case which was delivered April 8 was made public Wednesday. The opinion is preceded by an elaborate review of the history of the case. The opinion proper is introduced with the statement that "the constitution provides that representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states according to numbers and that no direct tax shall be laid except according to the enumeration provided, and also that all duties, imposts and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States."

Thus in the matter of taxation the constitution recognizes the two great classes of direct and indirect taxation, and lays down two rules by which their imposition must be governed, namely, the rules of apportionment as to direct taxes and the rule of uniformity as to duties, imposts and excises.

By far the greater part of the opinion is devoted to the consideration of the question whether a tax on rents is a direct tax within the meaning of the constitution.

The opinion here reviews numerous decisions under the act of 1861, including the Springer case, which was largely relied upon by counsel for the government in the present case to sustain their contention. Chief Justice Fuller says:

"It is conceded in all these cases, from that of Hilton to that of Springer, that taxes on land are direct taxes and in none of them is it determined that taxes on rents or income derived from land are not taxes on land."

Summing up, the chief justice says, among other things:

"The requirement of the constitution is that no direct tax shall be laid otherwise than by apportionment. The prohibition is not against direct taxes on land, from which the implication is sought to be drawn that indirect taxes on land would be constitutional, but it is against all direct taxes, and it is admitted that a tax on real estate is a direct tax. Unless, therefore, a tax upon rents or incomes issuing out of lands is intrinsically so different from a tax on the land itself that it belongs to a wholly different class of taxes, such taxes must be regarded as falling within the same category as a tax on real estate eo nomine. The name of the tax is unimportant. The real question is, is there any basis upon which to rest the contention that real estate belongs to one of the two great classes of taxes and the rent, or income, which is the incident of its ownership, belongs to the other? We are unable to perceive any ground for the alleged distinction. An annual tax upon the annual value or annual use of real estate appears to us the same in substance as an annual tax on real estate, which would be paid out of the rent or income. This law taxes the income received from land and the growth or produce of the land.

"Nothing can be clearer than that what the constitution intended to guard against was the exercise by the general government of the power of directly taxing persons and property within any state through a majority made up from the other states.

"We are of opinion that the law in question, so far as it levies a tax on the rents or income of real estate, is in violation of the constitution and is invalid."

Comparatively brief space is devoted to the question of a tax on the income derived from municipal bonds. The opinion says:

"The tax on government stock is thought by this court to be a tax on the contract, a tax on the power to borrow money, on the credit of the United States, and consequently to be repugnant to the constitution.

"Applying this language to these municipal securities, it is obvious that taxation on the interest therefrom would operate on the power to borrow before it is exercised and would have a sensible influence on the contract, and that the tax in question is a tax on the power of the states and their instrumentalities to borrow money, and consequently repugnant to the constitution.

WANTS A MIXED DOLLAR.

Plan to Settle the Silver Question by Putting Both Metals in the Same Coin.

DETROIT, Mich., April 30.—The Tribune (rep.) publishes an editorial leader which declares in favor of the solution of the present money question by the creation of a new dollar, to be composed of proportionate parts of gold and silver. The article quotes the declarations of the republican national platforms of 1888 and 1892 in favor of bimetallism, and points out the dangers of a practical silver monometallism through the throwing open of the mines to unlimited coinage. It calls attention to the difficulties and delays which would attend the negotiation of an international compact and questions the successful maintenance of a parity of gold and silver by that means in any event. It calls upon the republican party to fulfill its platform pledges by formulating without delay a practicable scheme for bimetallism, especially in view of the threatened disintegration of parties and the drawing of new party lines, with gold monometallism on one side and silver monometallism on the other.

Bears Caught Napping.

CHICAGO, May 1.—Armour was the name on the lips of the wheat pit throng on the board of trade Monday. It was a name by which to conjure the wheat market and run up the price of the July option until excitement was feverish and disgust general among the short sellers.

Wheat closed strong at 64¼ cents Saturday, and the market opened Monday with all the conditions favorable for a decline. Yet, within half an hour after the opening, July wheat had scored an advance of 1¾ cents over the Saturday price. Wheat opened at 63⅞ cents and sold down to 63½ cents in a few minutes. All the news of the morning was bearish, heavy and general rains being the principal feature. After the first dull spell came the sudden and mysterious jump in the market. Speculators bid 65¾ cents and got little at that figure. Instead, they pondered and speculated over the systematic, unchecked advance in the price of wheat for the last two weeks.

Lead Instead of Gold.

DUBUQUE, Ia., April 30.—A stranger walked into the Iowa trust and savings bank about 11 o'clock Monday morning and broke the window behind which lay the funds for use during the day, with the evident intention of grabbing the money and escaping before the employes had recovered from their surprise. Teller Maurice Brown was standing near, and as the window was broken in he took in the situation and grasped a revolver, shooting the man, the ball taking effect in the robber's head, inflicting a serious but not dangerous wound. The robber is now under arrest.

Fire Losses for a Week.

CHICAGO, April 30.—Fire losses throughout the country for the week ending Saturday amounted to $2,125,425, as compared with $5,115,680 for the week previous. Of this amount $350,000 was of fires where the loss amounted to $100,000 or more and $1,775,425 was for smaller fires.

THE LEVITICAN COLONY.

A Community That Has No Use for Preachers or Politicians.

There is in New Mexico a colony of people formed into a community and known as Shalam. They live very plain lives and take children who have been thrown upon the world, regardless of race or color, and make for them a home.

The colony of Levitica is a branch of the Shalam colony, and its prospects and aims are stated to be as follows:

Levitica is set apart for the occupancy of adults who desire to lead a higher life, and to aid in the support of the colony of children at Shalam. It occupies a tract of land three hundred and sixty-five acres in extent, having thirty houses, established on one-half acre lots, suitable for gardening. The houses are nineteen by forty feet, with rooms ten feet high, floors and ceilings of Texas pine. The houses are leased of the trustee, for life or whatever specified time the lessee remains a member of the colony, terms being that the lessee shall pay one-tenth of all the products of the said land; and in no event shall the rent be less than thirty dollars' value, every year.

Any one who can cultivate or use more than a half acre, it shall be given him. The streets are forty feet in width, with trees planted on each side. There is a pumping plant and reservoir in the colony, covering one acre of land, with a capacity of two million gallons of water for irrigating purposes, which supplies both Shalam and Levitica.

The Leviticans will demonstrate a new order of things—instead of large farms, half cultivated, as at present in the world, there will be small tracts of land bringing forth large increase. No one individual will possess great wealth, but all will have comfortable homes, well provided. This organization will establish a condition of society where poverty and crime can not enter, embodying the principles of co-operation with both communal and private living.

One of the buildings has been fitted up for a temple, and is used for the evening moiz and Sunday service.

As soon as there is a sufficient number of children for the purpose, a kindergarten will be opened, under the direction of a Boston kindergartner, now in the colony.

The religion is the worship of the Creator only. The diet is vegetarian, and abstinence from the use of stimulants and narcotics for stimulating effects, is required. All people are excluded who live by their wits, such as politicians, lawyer, preachers etc. Exorbitant charges by professional men are not allowed, neither are any charges permitted for saying service for the dead, marriages, etc. Any person may join the colony regardless of race or color, by complying with its rules and regulations. Cattle are allowed for milk, but can not be used or sold for food.

The maintenance of the common store or buying and selling goods at primary prices, or first cost, is required. All manufactures or industries are to be co-operative, and the profit divided according to the labor of each. General schools shall be maintained by contributions proportionate with the incomes. All householders shall be entitled to one vote regardless of sex.

All difficulties shall be settled by arbitration. None but members are allowed to dwell on the premises. The system of education will be entirely new, consisting of the objective and manual training, instead of book instruction. Trades and occupations taught irrespective of sex. Levitican towns shall be limited to one thousand inhabitants.

One-tenth of all the productions of Levitica is to go to the support of the children of Shalam perpetually.—Boston Herald.

The Bird's Eye.

A rustic audience in a far western town were enjoying intensely a magic lantern show. In the course of the programme the lecturer announced "A bird's-eye view of Paris." It was pretty and clear, but there was a slight defect in the paper of the photograph above the picture of the beautiful city, which was duly magnified, and assumed a conspicuous place on the canvas. Amidst the perfect quiet of the darkened room, broken here and there by soft sighs of ecstasy, a little voice piped up:

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Consumption kills more people than rifle balls. It is more deadly than any of the much dreaded epidemics. It is a stealthy, gradual, slow disease. It penetrates the whole body. It is in every drop of blood. It seems to work only at the lungs, but the terrible drain and waste go on all over the body. To cure consumption, work on the blood, make it pure, rich and wholesome, build up the wasting tissues, put the body into condition for a fight with the dread disease.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery fights in the right way. It will cure 98 per cent. of all cases if taken during the early stages of the disease. Its first action is to put the stomach, bowels, liver and kidneys into good working order. That makes digestion good and assimilation quick and thorough. It makes sound, healthy flesh. That is half the battle. That makes the "Discovery" good for those who have not consumption, but who are lighter and less robust than they ought to be.

WHY?

Bedlam in the kitchen,
Tables upside down,
Boy who's loudly squalling
With a broken crown;
Clothesline all suspended,
Baby swung thereto;
Some one in the coal-hole,
Trying to squeeze through.

Pussy, badly frightened,
Harnessed to a chair;
Youth with his two trotters
Kicking high in air;
One, astride a broomstick,
Makes a sudden dash;
Mantel clock is wound up
With a lively crash.

Boy, inside the pantry,
Juggling with the plates,
Bridget, in her terror,
Quickly emigrates;
Jackets all in ribbons—
Will the racket cease?—
Looking glass in pieces,
Nothing left in peace.

Headache in the parlor,
Signs of great relief
When the time till slumber
Happens to be brief.
Why this wrath paternal?
This maternal frown?
'Tis, oh, 'tis the circus
That hath come to town!

A RAILWAY KNIGHT.

The Story of a Train Boy's Bravery.

Vacation was over and homeward travel had begun. There was not a single empty seat in any of the four sleepers, and at each stop there were new demands for berths.

Spirited conversations between the Wagner conductor and irate passengers who had failed to bespeak their berths were frequent, and the last berth, the upper one in the rear car, reserved for the conductor himself, had just been given up to a flurried, all important personage who had insisted on his right to a whole section.

So now things began to quiet down. The passengers unbent from their dignity and began to compare vacation notes; the men betook themselves to the smoking department, and the train boy ceased for awhile his journeys through the cars, offering his wares of candy, gum, books and magazines.

Trade this side of Niagara didn't amount to much. He had learned that by experience.

At first magazines sold pretty well—but the real demand did not come till after they had passed Suspension Bridge and the stop at Falls View station was made. Then was the time to offer souvenirs of Niagara for sale.

Indeed Dan knew about how many copies he would sell.

A few months' experience on the train had given him a pretty keen insight into the habits and desires of the passengers.

At a glance he could tell who would and who would not buy of him, and just what women needed a little persuasion and a pleasant smile—to induce a purchase.

In fact Dan's smile was a valuable part of his stock in trade, and he used it to advantage, for it was a pleasant smile—and it made the round, freckled face very winning.

He was sorting over his books now preparatory to one more trip through the cars, before offering peanuts and candy again, when the train drew up at a dingy, dilapidated station. They were stopping for water he knew, and he went to the platform and jumped to the ground.

It was a relief after the rocking train.

Much to his surprise he found the conductor in earnest conversation with two women.

"Oh, but you must take her somehow," he heard the younger of the women exclaim in a distressed voice.

"You see there ain't any other way to send her, and her mother expects her sure, and she'll be at the station to take her off, and she'll be a real good girl and not trouble you a bit, won't you, Bessie?"

Here she pulled forward a little blue-eyed girl and the conductor's eyes rested thoughtfully on her.

Dan drew near—he was interested to know what the conductor would do.

"They'll be most crazy if she don't come," added the other woman. "And it will put them out dreadfully 'cause they've got to start right off for Colorado."

A sharp whistle recalled the conductor, and he put one foot on the steps of the car and stood, watch in hand, ready to give the signal.

"Say, I'll kinder keep an eye on the kid, if that's all you want," Dan said, awkwardly, to the women. "Don't know much 'bout children, but I guess some of the women will tend to her?" He gave an inquiring glance at the conductor.

"All right—I'm willing—jump aboard, will you, we're late now," and the conductor waved his hand.

Dan seized the child and placed her lightly on the platform, and the train began to move. He listened to the parting directions of the two women, and threw back the silver half dollar one of them tried to slip into his hand with a toss of his head, as he shouted: "I ain't no porter, and I'm a-doing this to 'blige you."

Then he held the child tightly whi'e she waved her tiny handkerchief till the station was a mere speck in the distance.

Then he took her into the car and left her to amuse herself with the rolls of lozenges while he made a trip through the other cars. By the time he got back she had made friends with a lady across the aisle, who offered to share her berth with the child, and before the afternoon was over she was playing games all over the car, and to Dan's intense amusement she insisted on eating supper with the man who had made the greatest fuss over his berth, but who, Bessie insisted, looked "just like grandpa."

So Dan kept only a general oversight of the child, and finally when she disappeared behind the heavy curtains of the berth, with a "good night, everybody," that included the whole car, he went back to the day coach and curled up on a hard seat to sleep.

He slept soundly, for the day had been a tiresome one, but after awhile he began to dream. He thought that Bessie had chewed gum till she grew smaller and smaller and finally was nothing but one of the prizes in the bags of popcorn, a little sugar image which he was about to eat when—

Crash!

Dan was awake now. In an instant he was rushing toward the sleeper. Something dreadful had happened!

The train shook and shivered and swayed.

There was a second crash and a tearing sound, and the end of the car was torn off and a cloud of steam rushed in and about him.

The shock threw him to his feet, but he crawled on. There was Bessie, he had promised to take care of her.

What would he say to the mother if she were killed?

Yet it really wasn't his fault.

Would he never get to the end of the car?

It seemed ages before he reached the platform, and his hand grasped the twisted brakes. Overturned on the track before him was the sleeper. The dim gray light of the early morning just showed its outlines. Farther than that he could not see.

He jumped from the platform and landed on the upturned side of the car.

He could hear cries inside and through one of the windows a head was thrust. With his heels he broke the glass of the window nearest him, then he crawled on to the next, and next, breaking each in turn, till finally he reached the fourth.

This was where Bessie was.

Here he crawled in, but there was no one in the berth.

It was lighter now. The sun must have come up very quickly.

Then a smell of smoke revealed the cause. The broken lamp at the end of the car had set the bedding on fire.

The flames were spreading fast.

Through the broken windows people were rushing, men and women, and there were groans and shrieks on all sides.

But he could see nothing of Bessie. Could he have been mistaken in the car!

Suddenly from beneath a pile of clothing he saw a tiny hand thrust out, and he heard a stifled cry.

Eagerly he pushed aside the heavy blankets and pulled the child out. By the light of the flames now rapidly nearing them he could see how white she looked, and her eyes were closed.

Could he be too late?

He tried to climb out of the window, but the seat on which he stood, broken by the crash, fell beneath his weight, and he was thrown back into the car. He struck heavily, and then there was a sharp pain in his head and little Bessie almost fell from his arms.

He seized the broken bell rope that hung from its rings, and, placing the child on his back, bound the cord around and around, thus binding her tightly to him.

Then he tried a second time to gain the window. This time there was a hand held down to help him, and in a moment he felt the soft grass beneath him and there was a sudden movement of the little body pressed close to him.

Then there was a terrible whirring sound in his ears and the blackest night seemed to settle over everything and he became unconscious.

News of the disaster traveled fast, and when the train bearing the wrecked passengers drew into Detroit there were hundreds of anxious friends inquiring for dear ones. Strong men were crying, and faces were white with horror as they listened to the story of the dreadful collision.

In one corner, faint and weary, sat a sad-faced mother, while her husband wandered hither and thither in a vain search for their child.

"A little girl with blue eyes?" repeated one of the passengers after him.

"Let me see, there was one but—here, porter, perhaps you can tell the gentleman," and the passenger hastened away.

"There was one child killed, sir," the porter replied slowly. "I hope it ain't yours, I'm sure. Just step this way please."

He turned to do so with tears blinding his eyes. But a tiny hand caught hold of his coat and a childish voice cried: "Don't run away, papa—ain't you glad to see Bessie?"

"I told the ladies I'd see she got to you safe," Dan explained, as they were being driven to Bessie's home. "And when we was struck I knew there wasn't no one else to look out for her, special, so I made straight for her, and we managed to get out somehow, didn't we Bess?"

Even now his head was dizzy and there were queer pains running through his body.

"Yes," cried Bessie, with a happy laugh, as if recalling some pleasant time. "It was awful funny going to sleep in those funny boxes with curtains, then I woke up and was under a great big heap of blankets. Dan was real good to me, Dan was, and all his lovely candy got burnt up to nothing, and I just think you ought to give him some new, 'cause he took such good care o' me, won't you, papa?"

Her sweet face was upturned and her hand was slipped into Dan's—and he hastily swallowed a big lump in his throat as he muttered:

"I didn't do nothing."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A DYED DOG.

The Victim of a Druggist's Advertising Ingenuity.

Alexandria, Va., once had the gayest dog that ever gnawed a bone.

He belonged to a dry goods merchant, whose special friend was a druggist across the way.

Some new kind of dyes came out, and as both these men were interested in selling the stuff they concluded to fix up a novel and striking advertisement.

So they took the dog, a long-haired flaxen poodle, and dyed him all over in different colors like an Easter egg.

One part of him was a brilliant grass green, and another a flaming yellow; he had a purple tail, red legs, and heavy black eyebrows, painted on, of course.

He was the wildest, woolliest-looking animal you ever set your eyes on, and the first time they turned him loose he scared several darkies nearly to death.

Two or three old topers concluded that they had "got 'em again," when they saw the dog, and signed the pledge.

But the town soon got on to the joke, for tied to his collar was a card, saying that he had been colored with somebody's dyes, and offering a reward for his return to the store; of course, when anybody brought the dog back he was gived a sample package of dye, and it worked well until the dog himself died. —Washington Post.

—Hume, the historian, was said to be the ugliest man of his time. His face was fat, coarse and vulgar, with no striking or pleasing feature.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Counterfeiters.

The central police station in Minneapolis recently very much resembled a United States mint in some respects. Early in the morning the patrol wagon brought in the whole manufacturing plant of Fred Lee and Michael Crowley, the counterfeiters, who were arrested the night before. It is a very complete plant and has a capacity of $11 at each melting of the metal. There was a small gasoline stove, a fire clay pot, a number of bars of lead, two cans of different kinds of oils, which were used in giving a semblance of the genuine money, eleven plaster of Paris moulds, a primitive milling apparatus constructed out of a file, and a very delicate emery wheel.

The moulds are very accurate and were very cleverly constructed. The impression was made in the soft plaster with a genuine dollar, there being two portions to each complete mold for the two sides of the dollar. The molds were baked in an oven on the gasoline stove and after they were completed the spurious metal was run into them. The coins after being cast were milled, rubbed and polished with oils and trimmed and finished up with the emery wheel, making a very good imitation of the real article. A good deal of the money has been passed, it being Crowley's custom to make small purchases with his home manufactured dollars, getting good money in change. He generally operated at some distance from his plant. The false dollars are all dated 1882 and 1889, and the police have a number of them to use as evidence. Letters have been found which show that Crowley is an old hand at the business.

Little Travelers.

Four little strangers arrived in Ely. They were from the Antipodes—the land of gold, cheap wood and the Australian ballot system. They were accompanied by their uncle, R. S. Miller, of Ely, who went to Vancouver, B. C., to meet them almost two weeks ago. They were Marsie Milles, 11 years of age; Carmen, 7 years; David about 5, and Andrew, 3 years and they came a sea voyage of about 7,000 miles all alone, in charge of the stewardess of the Canadian Pacific steamer Warrinoo. They were twenty-three days on the water. The trip from Vancouver was made via Winnipeg, Minneapolis and Duluth. The little ones are the orphan children of a brother of R. S. and T. E. Miller, of Ely, both parents having died about a year or so ago, leaving them all alone in that far off land. The children seem to have enjoyed their long journey.

A New Trial Denied in the Hayward Case.

The supreme court will now pass upon Harry Hayward's fate. It is his last chance, barring death, for escaping the gallows. Judge Smith has filed his formal order denying the motion for a new trial, and the news passed from room to room of the court house with the greatest rapidity. There was little surprise, for the result had been expected. Jailer West took the news to Hayward in his cage. The condemned man showed his teeth pleasantly and laughed.

"That's what I thought," he said. "It will be the same in the supreme court. They are afraid of the public. I suppose the newspapers will remind their readers that there are 13 letters in the signature of the judge, etc. Well, there's lots of time yet, and I will be here when Blixt is convicted—that's one comfort, and he ought to die seven times over for his dirty, brutal deed."

Low Rates.

Applications have been made for reduced rates on account of the following: Annual state encampment, Sons of Veterans and Ladies' Aid society and county G. A. R. reunion, at Glencoe, McLeod county, Minn., June 19-20, with an estimated attendance of 500 to 700; annual convention Minnesota State Epworth League, St. Paul (Red Rock camp grounds), June 13-16, with an estimated attendance of 175; annual meeting Minnesota State Firemen's association at Moorhead, June 11-12, with an estimated attendance of 100 and upwards; thirty-eighth annual council, diocese of Minnesota, Protestant Episcopal church, at Faribault, June 5-7, with an estimated attendance of about 125. In the above events Minnesota lines only are interested, and fare and one-third on the certificate plan.

News in Brief.

Irwin Harrington was commissio ned postmaster at New Hartford.

At Rochester the council has introduced a 9 o'clock curfew ordinance.

T. A. Anderson, of Walnut Grove, Redwood county, was recently killed by gas while digging a well.

Dr. Geo. Lesher, from a Montana Indian reservation, has become agency physician at Red Lake, exchanging with Dr. Davidson.

Sixty names were secured yesterday at Mankato for forming a young men's commercial club, and the organization will be perfected with fully 100 members. Much interest is displayed in it.

Since the raising of the saloon license at Amboy to $1,000, the town has been running dry, the keepers having closed their doors.

Never in the history of Polk county, has so little wheat been sown as this year. Flax, oats and barley take the place of that cereal to a great extent.

Canby is badly scared over nearly a dozen cases of diphtheria. The town is under a strict quarantine. Seven deaths have occurred.

Minnesota has 226 banks—state and national—with total resources of $95,274,503.53.

Geo. A. Crosby, a prominent real estate man of Duluth, saw what appeared to be an empty bottle lying on the pavement in front of the Commercial bank. He picked it up in order to keep it from injuring any one. He was about to throw it away, when it exploded with a loud report. Several pieces of glass went into one of his eyes, but a doctor managed to get them out. There was nothing to indicate the nature of the contents.

The health authorities of St. Paul killed 136 hogs suffering from hog cholera. They were shipped in from the far west.

Mankato claims 11,000 inhabitants, an assessed valuation of several million dollars, and has over 300 business houses.

J. Fletcher Williams, a well-known pioneer resident of St. Paul, for years secretary of the State Historical society and one of the promoters and organizers of that valuable association for the preservation of the state documents, etc., was ordered committed to the state hospital for the insane at Rochester.

A DYKE BURSTS.

The Consequent Rush of Waters Wipes Out Many Villages.

EPINAL, France, April 30.—The great dike at Bonzey, in the Epinal district in the department of the Vosges, burst at 5 o'clock Saturday morning. The cubic volume of the dike is 8,000,000 meters (8,745,000 yards). The great rush of waters completely obliterated several hamlets and caused a frightful loss of life.

Enormous damage has been done in the surrounding country. The railways in all directions are interrupted and a large number of villages are entirely flooded. In some places the force of the torrent let loose by the break in the dyke was so great that entire houses were swept away and large trees were torn up by the roots.

The reservoir was situated close to the village of Bousey and was connected with the Canal de l'Est. The breach caused by the rush of water is over 300 feet broad.

In a single commune, that of Uxegeny, 7 kilometers (4⅓ miles) from the scene of the disaster proper, twenty-three persons were drowned. At Nomexy eight bodies have been found. Wherever the water flowed it destroyed everything in its path. The steep, vertical banks of the Canal de l'Est burst at Bonzey and emptied a reach of water 11 kilometers (6 4-5 miles) long into the Aviere valley, through which the flood followed to Nomexy, where it flowed into the River Moselle. At Darnieuilles all the houses were destroyed and few were spared at Aux Iorges. Hundreds of families have been rendered homeless and many who were asleep at the time lost even their clothes.

At Demevre twenty-five of the inhabitants were drowned. At Oncourt one person was drowned. Seventeen persons are still missing at Uxegeny, where sixteen houses are in ruins. It is now believed a total of over 200 lives were lost. The damage done by the flood it is believed will amount to $10,000,000.

PARIS, April 30.—M. Leygnes, minister of the interior, who has gone to the scene of the disaster at Bouzy, near Epinal, has distributed pecuniary and other relief to 1,040 victims of the flood caused by the bursting of the dam. La Liberte has a dispatch from Epinal stating that 110 dead bodies have been recovered and the military who are at work upon the scene of the flood are busy digging trenches for the purpose of burying the carcasses of the thousands of cattle that were drowned. It is asserted that the heavy frosts which prevailed in that section during the latter part of the winter and early spring were the primary cause of the disaster, through throwing the masonry of the dam out of plumb.

A HERO'S BIRTHDAY.

Tender Tributes Paid to the Memory of Gen. Grant.

GALENA, Ill., April 30.—The people of this city, which was the home of Gen. Grant, celebrated Saturday the 75th anniversary of the illustrious commander's birth. The feature of the festivities was the presentation to the city by Judge C. C. Kohlsaat, of Chicago, on behalf of his brother, H. H.

GEN. GRANT.

Kohlsaat, of a magnificent painting entitled "Peace in Union," by Thomas Nast. The painting, which is 9x12 feet, illustrating the scene of Lee's surrender and contains the portraits of many famous war generals of both armies. Mayor Birmingham accepted the gift on behalf of the citizens. The painting will hang in Grant memorial hall in the public library building.

CHICAGO, April 30.—Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant, the widow of the warrior, statesman, diplomat and citizen, came into a draped box at the Auditorium Saturday night. The vast audience, which had come to do honor to the dead hero, arose and, with one accord, filled the air with waving handkerchiefs and applause which refused to be silent. Mrs. Grant bowed, wiped her eyes and, from the enthusiasm of the reception, the thousands sank into silence and a thoughtful worship at the shrine which the day had erected.

McCreary's Views.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 26.—Congressman McCreary in an interview said he was unalterably opposed to the free coinage of silver. His declaration was evoked by the free silver stand taken by Senator Blackburn. The congressman says in the course of a long prepared statement of his position and vote in congress: "I favor an international agreement, consistent with sound business methods, but to throw open the mints of this country to the world is simply preposterous." The senatorial race is given a new interest by the views of the aspirants for and against silver. The fight will be made on those lines.

Schweinfurth in Court.

ROCKFORD, Ill., April 30.—George Jacob Schweinfurth and all of the "angels" from his "heaven" were present in court Monday morning when their case was called. After a legal argument over pleadings to the indictments, the defendants were allowed until Wednesday to enter them. New bail bonds were signed by the Weldons, on whose farm the "heaven" is located. The case will probably come to trial next week.

A MONTREAL HOLOCAUST.

Hundreds of People Caught in a Burning Factory.

MONTREAL, Can., April 27.—W. C. McDonald's extensive tobacco factory in Ontario street was partially destroyed by fire Thursday evening. Blanch and Victoria Thibeadeau were killed and thirty-three others, of whom most were girls, were badly injured. Fifteen of those hurt, it is thought, will die.

The loss will reach $500,000, on which there is no insurance. There was not a fire-escape on the outside nor any appliances on the inside of the building for fighting the fire. Even the windows were guarded by heavy iron screens, presumably to prevent theft. The fire started at 5 o'clock in the drying-room, and for awhile smoldered. Then suddenly the flames burst through and a panic ensued.

There were 900 employes in the building, which had no fire escapes and only two staircases in the interior. All the windows were barred with heavy iron lattice work, a precaution taken to keep employes from throwing tobacco to their friends. Frantic with fear, the women, of whom there were fully 500 penned up on the top stairs, screamed for help, half choked by the greasy black smoke.

The dense crowd prayed and shouted as it swayed to and fro in its excitement and horror, and relatives and friends of the people made piteous appeals to save their loved ones. Some of the girls managed to tear one of the iron lattices from a window. Then the real tragedy of the night began.

Blanche Thibeadeau, aged 18, crazed with fear, jumped first and was battered into a shapeless mass. A cry of horror went up, but it was only a beginning. Before tender hands could lift the remains into an ambulance others had attempted the terrible leap, following the first like frightened sheep. Out they came, one after another, till twenty inanimate bodies littered the sidewalk and were carried away to the various hospitals among the lamentations of the crowd. Three priests, their soutanes trailing in the mud, were kneeling on the ground praying for the souls of the unfortunates. Ambulances could not attend to them all and cabs were pressed into service. Six were conveyed to the General, seven to the Notre Dame and nine to the Royal Victoria hospital.

Three firemen were on the roof and could not get down. For fully twenty minutes their lives were in jeopardy and they prayed and yelled by turns to be saved. Then sufficient length of ladders were secured to bring them down. They were terribly burned. In the meantime the firemen had managed to break some more lattices and were carrying crying women in long processions down the ladders. Another fireman was still on the roof and the scene with the flames around him, his hands raised in prayer, reminded one of the terrible disaster at the world's fair. Finally he was also taken down, but he was terribly burned. His name was Max Borel. Another fireman, Pat Croun, fell from a ladder and had both legs broken. Two others also lost their footing and fell, breaking several ribs.

At a late hour it is said at least six girls are missing and there is little doubt their charred and crushed bodies are in the ruins.

RETURNING CONFIDENCE.

Industries Gaining Steadily Without Sign of Hesitation.

NEW YORK, April 29.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

"Neither the rising in speculative markets nor the steady gain in industries has ceased, and it is wholesome that there are fewer signs of hesitation in the productive industries than in speculative prices. Wages strikes grow more numerous and cause some trouble, and retail demand lags behind wholesale sales and jobbing purchases behind production in some branches, but through many conflicting reports the fact shines out that the industries are gaining, not with a rush and a whirl, but more safely. It is less clear that railroads are increasing their earnings, or that over production of cotton will be cured by the advance of 1⅜ cents in price, or that cornering short sellers of wheat will help to market the large surplus. But revival of activity in all these directions, if possible, excessive in some, helps confidence to take the throne so long held by distrust. Recovery is not often mathematically equitable. When the load of depression is lifted, and men find that better things have come to stay, there must be many contradictory changes. Quite a number of works have advanced wages during the week, but strikes to compel an advance, possible for some but not for others, have grown much more numerous. Some shops are closing for want of orders, but a larger number are resuming work. Prices of shoes and cotton goods are rising; wool and woolens are lower. It would be a distinctly unnatural movement, inviting only distrust, if it were sympathetic and with equal step in all branches.

"Doubt whether hides and whether leather would be held at higher prices hindered shoe manufacturers for a time, but now jobbers want to give more orders than manufacturers care to take, who have their leather yet to buy. The hindrance is the advance in hides and leather, for while 7½ and 10 cents more is paid for shoes, the present cost of leather makes many 10 to 18 cents dearer, and 8 cents paid for western hides is said to mean higher prices yet for some kinds of leather.

"Cotton mills are getting more money for goods and have quite generally advanced wages. The consumption is large, and advances seem to be warranted.

"Iron production, stimulated because ore, coke and oil were to be dearer, is retarded by shrinking demand for products, for on the whole, new business is said to be smaller than in February or March. The structural demand far buildings throughout the country was never better.

"Wool has sold at the lowest prices on record this week, 16 cents for Ohio XX and 9 cents for year's Texas, and offers to clear off stock before new supplies came forward tempt manufacturers to purchase beyond present needs.

"Higher prices for wheat, nearly 3 cents above last week's, tend to check Atlantic exports, which, flour included, were only 1,868,873 bushels for the week, against 2,820,445 last year, though for the previous two weeks about equal to last year's.

"Bank exchanges in April, thus far, average daily 11.6 per cent. more than last year, but 16.3 per cent. less than in 1893. Money is coming hither from the interior and a larger demand for commercial loans appears, especially from manufacturing towns in New England and from importers.

"Failures for eighteen days in April showed liabilities of $5,075,592, of which $2,632,770 were of manufacturing, and $3,588,821 of trading concerns. The failures for the week have been 230 in the United States, against 179 last year, and 37 in Canada against 26 last year."

IS YOUR BLOOD PURE?

Not One in a Thousand can say "Yes."

The human body is fertile soil for disease germs, but the man whose blood is pure has nothing to fear, because pure, rich blood will keep all the functions of the system in perfect working order. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies, vitalizes and enriches the blood, and in this way is a defense against disease.

Blood Poisoned.

"When I was 18 a bad fever sore came on my right leg. After a time it healed, but 21 years later, last winter, it broke out again terribly sore, and many said it would never heal up. My son read so much about Hood's Sarsaparilla he urged me to try it. I did so, and to my great joy in a short time the sores ceased to discharge, and shortly after began to heal. After taking five bottles the poison was eradicated and the sore entirely healed. I now feel as well as ever and enjoy renewed strength and vigor." FRANK O. PIERCE, South Londonderry, Vt.

Running Sores.

"I have been troubled with running sores on my hip for years. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla in September, and have not been troubled with running sores since January. I never felt better in my life. I weighed 93 pounds when I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and I now weigh 132 pounds." HOWARD DARBY, Salineville, Ohio.

N. B. If you decide to take Hood's do not be induced to buy any other.

DIET FOR THE SICK.

Foods That Are Strengthening to the Weak Stomach.

Milk is a diet in universal favor, and should never be forgotten as a food at once highly nutritive and easy of digestion. Some persons who, while well, are unable to take milk, have no such difficulty while sick. There are few patients who can not take milk either hot, cold, cooked, raw, with Vichy, or with lime water.

In diseases of the kidneys milk is always a valuable article of diet. Sometimes it is better taken skimmed, or after the extraction of the butter it contains, in the form of buttermilk.

In spite of some adverse criticism, beef tea holds its place as a stimulant and nutrient for the sick. Unfortunately it is seldom properly made. The beef should first be finely ground, then placed to simmer where it will not approach the boiling point too closely, until the raw beef color has changed to a delicate pink with a brown exterior. This process should occupy about twenty minutes. The beef should not be cooked to a gray color, which color indicates a coagulation of some of the soluble and nutritious albumens.

Good beef, finely ground, is itself almost the essence of nutrition, and in cases of chronic wasting diseases, it is as a rule digestible by the weakened stomach, and is in the highest degree nourishing to the wasted tissues.

Ground meat may be gently pressed into cakes which, when carefully boiled, make a most palatable article of diet for the sick. Even in fevers a small quantity of finely ground beef is often tolerated, and is enjoyed more than clear beef tea.

The stimulating value of hot water is to be utilized with the sick whenever possible. Hot water promotes secretion better than cold, and is at all times a stimulant of no mean value. The Chinese are said to have numerous hot water shops in many of their cities, where this beverage is sold to an appreciative public. It would be well if such a beverage were to become popular with us.

Dry bread, at least two days old, is more easily digested, and more nutritious, than almost any other article of food, because it consists largely of starch. Rice and tapioca thoroughly boiled closely follow in ease of digestion and nutritive value.

Sugar, except in very small quantities, makes poor food for the sick on account of its proneness to fermentation. Fruits, with few exception, contain large percentages of sugar and of fruit acids, which latter, except in specific cases, are distinctly detrimental.

Fruits and thoroughly-cooked vegetables are allowable only in convalescence, and then only in limited quantities.—Youth's Companion.

DELANO DIARY

—The grading machine is looked for soon, when it is expected that the village streets will be put into first class condition at once. This is a thing long needed and if the grader will do it, hurrah for the grader.

—People who were growing nervous on account of the long dry spell, and who had begun to predict a drought, received a sedative on Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday in the form of genuine April showers, which had the effect, also, to serve as a stimulent to their lagging energies, as well as to that of vegetation.

—Arbor Day was duly observed by the Public School. Four trees were procured and transplanted to the school grounds; several loads of black dirt being hauled from the new extension of Elm street to furnish them substance to gain a foothold in the gravely knoll. Several flower beds were made and planted with a choice collection of flowers.

—Perhaps if the grader is as good a thing as many seem to think it is, after it has been used for a week or so to finish up our streets, it can be hired out to adjoining road districts, to grade up some of the highways leading into town. Several of them are much in need of grading, and nothing adds more to the success of a town than first class roads leading into it from every direction.

—J. D. Young says in former years while plowing and making garden, potato bugs were found in great numbers. But this year he is nearly through putting in his garden, including about an acre of sweet corn, and, as yet, he has not seen a single potato bug. He says he thinks last year's dry, hot weather was too much for them and that they starved and died out. If this great pest is gone perhaps potatoes will be more plentiful this year than for some time past. J. W. Dannier says he noticed a few bugs on his place a few days ago. Perhaps they have not come out of winter quarters yet.

—A business train stopped in town a few minutes on Tuesday evening while Superintendent Winter, Gen'l Pass. Agt. Whitney, Mr. Footner and others viewed our R. R. bridges. It is to be hoped they made the discovery that the bridge over the road on the west side needed some attention. That it is not a safe place for teams to drive under. We presume that an accident occurring on account of the limited space through which to drive would have to be settled by the company, as much as if it should happen on a level crossing. Anyway the piling should be removed from the middle of the road.

—Complaints have been made recently that bad names have been called and insulting language used to some helpless old men, on the streets. This is wrong. People of civilized countries are supposed to have respect for those older than themselves. Many pay deference to their parents and to other aged people; and it shows good judgment to respect the experience of others, especially those grown gray on this earth. It is more humane to treat them with respect than to taunt them and poke fun at them, in their years of age, and helpnessness. Few people, and usually those way down in the scale of human depravity enjoy sport of that kind. How long would an ordinary boy, to say nothing of a stalwart youth sit by and see his father, or his grandfather used as a clown by a lot of ruffians on the street? People in Delano don't like such things. There are laws enough against such abusive language and there is talk of exercising them.

—Rev. Atchinson will be here from Saturday till Wednesday morning, and every night.

—Constable J. P. Berneck returned this morning from Minneapolis where he had taken Urbon Kornek and Peter Graala, who were arrested for breaking into a car at Wayzata. They were to have a hearing today.

—The Epworth League elected officers last evening as follows: President, Mrs. Frazee; 1st Vice Pres., Mrs. Green; 2nd, Mrs. Wilder; 3d, Chas. S Hawker; 4th, Viola Cunningham; Sec., T. J. Catlin; Treasurer, Alva Catlin.

—The M. E. S. S officers elected for the ensuing year, are: Supt., Chas. S. Hawker; Asst. Supt., T. J. Catlin; Secretary, John Catlin; Treas., Mrs. Green; Librarian, Vinnie Chance; Organist, Viola Cunningham. A full corps of teachers were also chosen.

—Beginning May 5, morning train east will leave Delano about 7:50 a. m., running from Willmar to St. Paul. The evening train west leaves Delano about 7:40, running from St. Paul to Willmar. Other trains remain as they now run except that they run through to Fargo.

—Chief of Police Webber, of St. Cloud, came over and took John Kohnke, to that place on a charge of making a fraudulent contract with some man there and obtaining $280. M. A. O'Hair accompanied them as attorney for the defendant. This morning's Globe says Kohnke's bail was fixed at $500.

—Rev. Davies requests us to announce that the Minneapolis Presbytery meets at Delano next Monday. The proceedings are open to the public. A sermon will be preached at 2 p. m. by Rev. Dr. Harsha, and evening services will be held at 7:30, at which Rev. D. S. McCaslin, D. D., of the Bethlehem church, of Minneapolis, and Rev. T. T. Cresswell, of Shiloh church, will speak.

—Some of those young men who have recently indulged in sport making with a poor old man, who has become so addicted to the intoxicating cup as to have become an object of pity, can reap a valuable lesson from his helplessness. If they will but stop and think, that but a few years has passed since he could "drink or let it alone." And that in a few years more, unless the brakes are applied, quite vigorously, they, themselves, will be the laughing stock and source of fun for boys, as thoughtless as they are now. Brace up boys, and have respect for gray hairs, if you dont for that that causes them to trail in the mud.

—C. M. Conzet requests us to publish the following as the way he desired the item concerning last Saturday's race to appear: it seems we got it badly mixed up last week.

"The trotting race next Saturday, the 27th, between Col. C. and Ned B will likely be very interesting, as they are half brothers and both good colts. But still after the race you will find plenty people say 'I wish I had my old Charley horse here or old Kate or some other good old farm horse.' To these persons we wish to say, bring them with you as you can consider yourself challenged by either of the two colts. The nicest way to prove the pudding is to eat it."

County Cullings.

Commoner. There are men from Missouri and other southern states now in Minnesota buying potatoes. In some places they have paid as high as 80 cents per bushel and glad to get them at that. Potatoes at that price, yes, or half that price, are a paying product.

Herald. The State will not even send lunatics to Wright county, deposit a dollar in our banks or recognize us in any way. It's about time to join Duluth and secede or give the Democrats a show in State offices.

Tribune. Bicycle riding is not a fad that will flourish for a while and then drop out of sight. It has come to stay.

Times. Senator C. K. Davis is being seriously discussed for the presidency of the United States by the leading men and influential newspapers in many parts of the country.

George Denison's house at Maple Lake is reported to have burned, his father and mother perishing in the flames.

Rev. A. W. Wright is to deliver a lecture on the battles of Donelson and Shiloh at the City Hall, in Waverly, Friday evening, May 10, for the benefit of the new Presbyterian church at that place. The speaker is able; the subject interesting; the cause worthy, and all that can should turn out and patronize the effort.

From the Waverly Tribune we learn several deaths occurred in that vicinity recently. Miss Bridget Muldoon died of consumption, May 1, aged 23. John Edward Johnson aged 20, of Woodland, died April 22. James Franey, of Woodland, aged 55, of heart disease, April 22.

Watertown's Temperance Wave.

Such a temperance tidal wave as that which struck our neighboring village of Watertown on Thursday has seldom been seen in these big woods. The occasion was the convention of the Father Matthew Temperance Association, of the 6th district.

The weather was threatening in the morning and deterred a good many who had a distance to travel from venturing out. Yet the large Catholic church was crowded and much pleased with an able sermon on temperance by Rev Jos. Stritch, of Glencoe, who, instead of Rev. Cleary, of Minneapolis, who did not come, consented to deliver the sermon. Rev. Stritch took for his text, "Let us make man in our image." We would gladly publish the full sermon if we had it, but our readers will have to be content with a few points as we selected as they fell from the able and earnest speaker's lips. The destiny of man, what is it? First the home. The home, he said, should be as nearly perfect as it could be made; then multiply the good homes and we have a good community, good town, and a good country. The great evil of society, destroying, almost defacing God's image in man, is drunkenness. Picture the family governed by the drunkard. The living armed devil walking among men. When he comes home and the little child runs to meet him she hears no longer the pleasant good evening; but fearful curses fall on her ear. Picture the drunkard as he reels from the saloon with dim, red eyes, and staggering gait. Picture the temperance man as he moves about with clear eye, and unclouded brain. I will not. I leave it for you. Which is the builder up of society?

What are we to do with the monster that is wrecking our homes. First form a society. Political parties I will not discuss. But take away intemperance. A God of justice shall wreak his vengeance on the drunkard. The drunken father will be called to account, not only for himself, but for the desolate home, the heart-broken wife, who he had promised to protect, the sons and daughters, brought up in ignorance and degradation. Five sober men in a town can do good. Wear your temperance badge. Everybody respects a temperance man. The soldier of our country wears the insignia of his business. Life saving services, where are found men engaged in saving lives, find many badges of honor.

There is no grander apostolate among laymen than the apostolate of temperance. I congratulate the splendid society here. The temperance society should become the Salvation Army of the Catholic church. When you go home tell your friends about this meeting. Ask them to wear the badge.

After the sermon mass was said by Rev. M. Cawley.

The entire audience were invited to the City Hall. Following the Brass Band they proceeded to that edifice where one of the grand dinners for which Watertown has become famous was served. A business and social meeting was to be held in the afternoon. A grand good time was had, and it is to be hoped these tidal waves will continue to come, with repeated frequency and in different localities, until the whole country is inundated.

Besides these mentioned there were present from abroad Rev. McDouitt, Manannah; Rev. P. I. McCabe, Darwin; Rev. P. I. O'Connor, DeGraff, and numerous laymen and visitors.

The Republican believes the enactment into law of the bill to tax railroad lands will benefit this portion of the state by reason of the fact that it will either force the railroads to pay taxes or dispose of their holdings. At present most of these lands are held for speculative purposes and at prices which preclude their purchase by people who desire to locate among us. In case the measure receives the endorsement of the people the result will be that the price of lands in question will be lowered, thereby creating an inducement for the settling up of the country.--Aitkin Republican.

Should Be Repudiated.

The attack made by Rev. Father Phelan, of St. Louis, editor of the Western Watchman, on the members of the Christian Endeavor Societies of the United States, as the same is reported in press telegrams, was an unwarranted, uncalled for and outrageous one. It seems incomprehensible that any sane person should indulge in such a base slander of hundreds of thousands of good and pure young men and women. If our recollection serves us right, this same Father Phelan is a fanatical writer, one who has attacked prelates of the church he pretends to represent. We do not think he is at present an active member of the Catholic priesthood. If he is he deserves to be suspended until he makes suitable and complete retraction of his vile and wicked calumnies. Neither the Catholic hierarchy, nor the Catholic people of this country, can afford for a moment to tolerate, without emphatic protest, the attacks of this vile man upon honorable men and women! It is such fellows as this who lead to A. P. Aism. He is worse than an A. P. A.--St. Cloud Times.

LATE LITERARY NEWS.

Rudyard Kipling to Return to India.

Rudyard Kipling will shortly return to India where he will prepare for the Cosmopolitan, twelve articles to appear in the American and English editions of that magazine. India is one of the most interesting of countries, and Mr. Kipling is able to write of it as no one else. His work will be looked forward to with world-wide expectation.

Perhaps the most beautiful series of pictures ever presented of the Rocky mountains will be found in a collection of fourteen original paintings by Thomas Moran for the May Cosmopolitan. To those who have been in the Rockies, this issue of the Cosmopolitan will be a souvenir worthy of preservation. This number of the Cosmopolitan contains fifty-two original drawings, by Thomas Moran, Oliver Herford, Dan Beard, H. M. Eaton, F. G. Attwood, F. O. Small, F. Lix. J. H. Dolph, and Rosina Emmet Sherwood, besides six reproductions of famous recent works of art and forty other illustrations—ninety-eight in all. Though the Cosmopolitan sells for but fifteen cents, probably no magazine in the world will present for May so great a number of illustrations specially designed for its pages by famous illustrators. The fiction in this number is by F. Hopkinson Smith, Gustav Kobbe, W. Clark Russell, Edgar W. Nye and T. C. Crawford.

REVENGE.

Revenge is a naked sword—
It has neither hilt nor guard,
Wouldst thou wield this brand of the Lord;
Is thy grasp, then, firm and hard.

But the closer thy clutch of the blade
The deadlier blow thou wouldst deal,
Deeper wound in thy hand is made—
It is thy blood reddens the steel.

And when thou hast dealt the blow—
When the blade from thy hand is flown—
Instead of the heart of the foe
Thou mayst find it sheathed in thine own.

TARIFF IS A TAX.

Minnesota Now Has Two U. S. Senators who are aware of that fact.

THE author of The Star Spangled Banner is to have a monument erected to his memory by contributions from patriotic citizens, throughout the land. It will surely be an imposing testimonial, as it deserves to be.

AGENTS are abroad in the land endeavoring to sell this, that and the other thing, on the now famous installment plan. They tell you it only takes 3 or 5 or 10 cts per day. You think this is not much. But suppose you buy 5 different articles and agree to pay the small sum of 5 cents per day for each. You have agreed to pay 25 cts. per day. For seven days in the week this goes on, 7 quarters make $1 75 per week; or for four weeks $7.00. How much will you have left to live on. Where will you get your money to meet these 5 cts per day bills? Be sure you need a thing and count the cost and see that you can pay for it before you make a contract.

A STRIKE among Chicago steel workers is going on. An attempt is being made to bring the A. R. U. with President Debs into it. A demand is made for an eight hour day and a fifty cents per day increase of wages. A fight between police and strikers occurred May 8, according to telegraph reports resulting in the wounding of several officers and some of the strikers; one of the latter is expected to die. It does seem as if some way might be devised to prevent such occurrences. The laborers can't afford to lie idle nor be shot down and lost to their families. Neither does it look as if the capitalists can make anything by having their shops idle and in some cases their property destroyed.

SOME of the politicians have started a cry for a composite dollar; a dollar made of gold and silver both in the same piece. This alloy is known as electrum and has been used before. It looks very possible on its face, but what real difference can it make to effect our financial situation favorably? What difference can it make whether a dollar is made of gold, silver or both? Isn't the stamp of our country what makes it lawful legal tender? Isn't a paper dollar with the stamp on just as readily taken, anywhere, in the country as either of the metal dollars? Can any good come to poor people from a change of the money to anything different from what we have got used to? Want it cost the government a pile of money to make the change? Hadn't we better keep gold and silver, both as we have them in circulation now?

PRESIDING ELDER ATCHINSON made a telling hit against church people using tobacco one evening during his recent visit to Delano. He related a story of a Sunday School Superintendent, who held in his hand a plug of tobacco and soliloquized as follows:

Joe, who is master, you or that plug of tobacco?

I don't know. I guess it is. It generally gets away with me. I have tried many times to quit it; but have always failed.

Does it do you any good?

I don't know that it does. No.

Is it offensive to other people?

My wife says it is. Yes.

Isn't it selfish for a man to do a thing that is offensive to those who love him best?

Yes. I think it is.

As a Superintendent of a Sunday School does it effect your Christian influence? Do not some of the ladies object to their boys going to your S. S. on that account?

Yes, I believe they do.

Has any Christian a right to have tobacco for his master; to use what is no good to him; to do that that is offensive to others; to be selfish; to injure his Christian influnce?

Would Jesus do so?

Good Roads

We are in receipt of a circular letter from Albert A. Pope the veteran good roads man, of Boston, Mass., giving some statements concerning the plans adopted by that state, which seems to be taking the lead in this very important matter. And certainly among the most important matters of today is the facility for rapid, safe and pleasant getting about among our neighbors, far and near. $300,000 was appropriated by the legislature of Mass., and placed in the hands of a commission, for use. Most of it has been pretty evenly divided among fourteen counties as a starter. With a view to finishing up some roads as an example, to those in neighborhoods which is likely to be followed in the building of county, town and other roads. The plan is to build a section at a time of roads connecting the great centers of trade.

Ten thousand dollars has been appropriated by Congress, in response to a petition, for the purpose of making a careful investigation into the condition of roads, throughout the country. Each state should do its share in aiding this enterprise. And each town and road district should strive to put the roads under its jurisdiction in the best possible condition for travel, both for profit and pleasure. Good roads from a farm to the nearest towns and markets enhance the value of the farm very much. No one wants to buy a farm, be it the finest in the country, if he is obliged to haul its bountiful products to market over rough and muddy roads, if he can purchase one nearly as good where fine highways, a pleasure instead of a pain to travel over, lead to neighboring villages.

More than a score of states have already passed new road laws. Let the good work go on.

Presbytery of Minneapolis.

Last Monday was a red-letter day in the history of the Protestant religion in Delano when the Presbytery of Minneapolis came and held their monthly meeting here. The following ministers were present: Revs. Professor Lawrence D. Hay, D. D., Minneapolis, Moderator; W. M. Campbell, Long Lake; D. E. Wells, Franklin Avenue Church, Minneapolis, Slated clerk; A. W. Wright, Prof. Wm. M. Kincaid, Wm. H. Hartzell; D. S. McCaslin, D. D., Bethlehem church, Minneapolis; A. K. Harsha, D. D., Highland Park; H. A. Noyes, Buffalo; L. P. Paulsen, 1st Norwegian church, Minneapolis, Tabor Davies, M. A., Delano; J. S. McCormack, Howard Lake; Thaddeus T. Cresswell, Shiloh church, Minneapolis, Frank M. Snead, First church Minneapolis; Charles Thayer, Ph. D., Mankato Presbytery; also about a dozen elders representing various churches and a goodly contingent of visitors from Maple Plain and Rockford. These with a number of faithful Delano people filled the little church. The morning session began at 10 o'clock and was occupied in hearing statistical reports of the various churches, with an interesting discussion on revivals. At 12 o'clock there was an adjournment for lunch which was sumptuously provided by the ladies of the Delano church and friends under the able management of Mrs Shaw. Fully 60 people sat down in relays at the long tables in the parsonage and were skillfully waited upon by members of the Y. P. S. C. E. and other volunteers.

The afternoon session was opened at 2 o'clock with devotional exercises followed by a powerful sermon by Dr. Harsha, the retiring moderator on a deeper consecration of our lives to the service of Christ. The Presbytery then proceeded to the ordination of Rev. T. Davies, first requiring him to complete his examination in Hebrew by causing him to read and translate a portion of the original Scriptures to the audience, which he did to their satisfaction. The constitutional questions were then put to the candidate and answered after which he was ordained to the Gospel ministry by the laying on of hands of the brethren and prayer by the moderator. Rev. F. W. Snead then charged the newly-ordained minister giving him some excellent advice as to his office. Various matters of business were disposed of and the ministers left for Minneapolis on the afternoon train.

At 7:30 a popular service was held in which Revs. D. S. McCaslin, D. D. and T. T. Cresswell earnestly urged the people to give themselves to the service of the Master.

C. T. A. Convention.

Through the kindness of our friend, F. A. Barth, of Watertown, we are enabled to give a more extended account of the proceedings of the Sixth District Convention held at Watertown, last week.

The second annual C. T. A. convention of the 6th Dist. of the Archdiosen Union of St. Paul, held at Watertown, Minn., May 2, 1895, was a grand success and a notable gathering which was amply testified to by the immense crowd that came to witness the ceremonies at the church in the morning and the entertainment in the evening. That the local C. T. A. society, the Watertown parish and the people in general did themselves proud goes without saying. The following is a short outline of the day's doings:

At the church Solemn High Mass began at 11 a. m. with Rev. Father Cawley as celebrant; Rev. Father McDavitt as deacon; Rev. Father O'Connor as sub-deacon and Rev. Father Stritch as master of ceremonies. The singing of the choir was especially grand. The church was nicely decorated and the altars looked beautiful with their many natural flowers. The sermon was delivered by Rev. Father Stritch, of Glencoe, and was pronounced by all who heard it a masterpiece of eloquence and logic. After Mass a procession was formed headed by the Farmers' Band, of Franklin Town with visiting delegates and members of the local society with badges, banner and American flag at the head. They marched from the church to the City Hall where the ladies of the parish had provided a sumptuous dinner at which about 700 people were fed. After dinner was over the Convention was called to order by President J. H. Smith, of the Archdioscen Union. After a few well chosen remarks by the chairman the different committees were appointed and after that a short address was delivered by Mr. Thomas Hughes, of Darwin. Then Miss Maggie Hughes, of Darwin read an able paper on "Women in the Cause of Total Abstinence," which was well received and ably discussed by the different priests and lay-delegates present, after which Mr. Joseph Connelly, of Watertown, read an able paper on "Labor with Total Abstinence," which was also well received by the convention and ably discussed by the priests and lay delegates present, after which the committee on Resolutions gave their report, which is too lengthy to give here. Then the convention voted thanks to the local society for the royal manner in which the visiting delegates had been treated. The work of the convention being completed all adjourned to the dining room down stairs and had a lunch and at 8 p. m. the evening's entertainment consisting of speeches, singing and music commenced. Mr. F. A. Barth presided at the evening's entertainment. Rev. Father Cawley, the pastor of the Watertown parish and spiritual director of the local society, made a short address of welcome to the delegates and J. H. Smith, Union President, made the address of the evening, which was well received and highly complimented. About 15 musical numbers consisting of violin solos by Mr. Kempskie, of Waconia, and temperance, comic and sentimental songs by local talent, which space forbids us to mention separately, were all well rendered, it being about 10:30 when the vast audience was dismissed, all well pleased with the day's work and all admitting that a great deal of good would result from such a popular and enthusiastic total abstinence gathering as they had witnessed.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, May 3, 1895.

"No entangling foreign alliances," is the good old Jeffersonian motto that President Cleveland has adopted for his administration, and although a few loud-mouthed jingoists are struggling hard to make it appear otherwise, there is little doubt that the majority of the voters of this country believe in that motto. It has governed the administration all through the wrangle between Great Britain and Nicaragua, and, notwithstanding many previous reports to the contrary and the shrewd diplomatic efforts of interested countries, it is and will continue to be the governing spirit of this country's acts in connection with the new complications between Japan and Russia. President Cleveland is always ready and willing to use all the influnce at his disposal to bring about a peaceful settlement of disputes between nations, but when asked to assume a position that would in effect, if not actually, be taking sides in the disputes he invariably declines, and thereby proves himself a true friend to the real interests of the United States.

The idea is prevalent that when President Cleveland fills the vacancy in the Civil Service Commission caused by the resignation of Mr. Roosevelt ("our Teddy") he will also appoint a successor to Commissioner Lyman, whose resignation has, it is reported, been asked for. Mr. Roosevelt's successor will be a democrat, but if Mr. Lyman goes out his successor will be a republican. It has for a long time been the opinion of many people, including members of the Congressional committee which investigated the late Frank Hatton's charges against the Civil Service Commission that Lyman ought to go, but somehow he has managed to hold through it all.

Secretary Herbert has decided not to attend the celebration of the opening of the Baltic Sea Canal, which is to occur at Kiel, Germany, on June 19. He received a special invitation to attend from the German government, and for a time thought he would be able to do so, but a closer study of the official programme he has mapped out convinced him that he could not go. He abandoned the idea with reluctance.

Assistant Secretary McAdoo is again on duty at the Navy department, having this week returned from his five week's cruise with Admiral Meade's squadron. He is enthusiastic over the behavior of men and ships on the cruise, and says he learned and unlearned much that will be useful to him and beneficial to the government in administering his official business. He is greatly pleased at the result of the experiment made by the department on this cruise, of sending coal for the ships direct from the United States in order to head off the extortion of the coal dealers in West Indian and Central American ports. The experiment was a success. Mr. McAdoo says: "There was considerable opposition and somewhat of an organized effort made to prevent the securing of labor for taking the coal from the American schooners to the ships; but this effort failed. In one instance the local coal dealers employed all the labor in the market, paying the men to remain idle. But laborers were procured from the interior. The result of this very wise action on the part of the department—which will save annually a great deal of money—is that the local dealers in nearly all West Indian and Central American ports have made overtures to furnish coal at a reasonable increase over its market value in the United States. Not only will this keep the price down for the Navy, but it will open the market for the American article at ports where only English coal is now found, as the dealers know that they cannot compete in prices and continue to sell English coal.

The marriage in Washington, last Tuesday, of Senator Murphy's eldest daughter to ex-Mayor Hugh Grant, of New York city, is regarded by those who keep track of the side currents in politics as being much more than a mere society event. It means, they think, the uniting of two men's interests who will in all probability have a hand in directing the course of the democratic party of the Empire state for some time to to come.

Come Joe, can you tell us true
Whose master, the plug or you?

Secretary Gresham is again unwell and his friends are growing uneasy about his health He has President Cleveland's habit of doing more work at times than he ought to, and his duties have been especially harassing of late, causing him to overtax his strength before he had entirely recovered from his recent illness.

ROCKFORD RIPPLES.

With so many local showers small grain is doing nicely. Corn will all be planted this week.

Glad to note our sick patients, C. Farnham and A. Sitsloff are rapidly recovering.

D. R. Thompson, F. H. Johnson, W. Jacobs and A. Klatte visited the Flour City this week.

Mrs K. C. Bucklin and Miss Irving went to Minneapolis as delegates of the Eastern Star Lodge from Rockford to the Grand Chapter of the Eastern Star.

Mr. Enderlee, our new depot agent, has taken charge he comes here from Eden Valley.

Wm. Gent received a large consignment of bee boxes today. He has now 30 swarms of bees. He has put up a high board fence along the road to keep the bees from going out in the road. Billy expects to live on sweets pretty soon.

Johnny Murphy has the "mumps."

John Young, section foreman on the G. N. at Sherman, S. D., son-in-law of M. Karney, visited Mr. Karney and family last Sunday.

Among Our Exchanges.

A good many people see "signs of returning prosperity." It isn't the signs so much as the reality that we need. The signs have been with us all through the past two years of depression.—Sherburne County Star-News.

The Mankato papers disparage Kasota stone, and yet the very paper which indulges in the criticism will build a new home with stone purchased from C. W. Babcock and the same is now being cut in Kasota.—St. Peter Herald.

Russia may be able to whip Japan, but when the latter's big brothers, John Bull and Brother Jonathan, step in a different aspect may be given to the affair. The Muscovites will act wisely if they move slowly in this matter.—Morning Call.

Printer's Ink puts the case for advertising thus: "Advertising costs money, and so do railroad fares. But it is cheaper to ride a thousand miles than it is to walk that distance, so also it is cheaper to advertise than to circularize."—Evening Tribune.

Commoner. The manager of the Oregon Indian Medicine Co., paid Cokato a high compliment for the orderly audiences they had here. At Delano, he said, the wild and woolly element was always on hand, with lungs in good repair and a disposition to run things.

St. Peter: The number of deaths at the hospital from tuberculosis is surprising. Scarcely a week passes but that two or three deaths are reported from that disease. We are informed that tuberculosis is a disease native to cattle, is very infectious, and people take it from cattle very readily, and it spreads rapidly, causing death in nearly every instance.—Pioneer Press.

Editor Johnson of the St. Peter Herald says: "A good deal of this world's courage is carried around in pint flasks." If the courage stayed in the flasks it would not harm or protect anybody, but it finds its way into pint stomachs having overflow pipes that never allow them to get full, and yet this is a paradox, because we have seen a good many act as though full and Brother Johnson has too.—Moorhead News.

There is scarcely a rod of tillable land in the suburbs of Omaha that is not being cultivated this year. The city authorities had all vacant lots plowed and they furnish it with seed free to deserving poor people who are willing to work. They gave notice that those who failed to take advantage of this offer to grow something for their own sustenance need not apply for aid next winter.—Weeping Water, (Neb.) Republican.

Pansies for Thoughts.

The pansy is a lover of shade, and, like the iris, it takes on a depth and richness of color that one would hardly think it possible to obtain without the assistance of sunshine. In a shade the flowers will not only be much larger than those grown under full exposure to the sun, but they will last longer. But do not make the mistake of planting this flower in a place where the air is not free to come and go at will. In such a place, especially if there is much shade the plants often fail to do well. The pansy will stand severely cold weather quite satisfactorily, but a close covering of litter or snow, will do it great injury, and quite often kill it. It smothers if it cannot have all the fresh air it wants in winter, and it will not do well in summer unless it has a free sweep of air about the bed in which it grows.—From "Plants for Shady Places Out of Doors" in Demorest's Magazine for May.

The Star Spangled Banner's Author.

Many interesting things about Francis Scott Key—The author of the Star Spangled Banner—are contained in a pamphlet, which may be obtained free from the Key Monument Association of Frederick City, Maryland, by sending one 2 cent stamp for postage. This Association is raising funds for a suitable monument to the poet, and they suggest, that in schools and everywhere upon or before Flag Day (June 14th), this subject be suitably recognized. Contributions, however small, are asked for. Every one who loves the flag ought to have some small share in building this monument. The Governor of Maryland has strongly endorsed the movement. The names of all contributors will be preserved in the crypt of the monument, and published (without amount) in the history of the monument when completed.

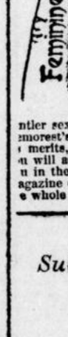
WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.
Square Type. Conical. Spatulate. Artistic. Philosophic. Feminine.



The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription: it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the ntler sex, every one of whom should subscribe to morest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put in the way of saving money by finding in one agazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of whole family.

IT is now decided that the reason women do not think before they speak is that they can't think quick enough.

BILL COOK, the noted desperado, who is under a forty-five year sentence, has been put at work making shirts in the Albany penitentiary.

A NEBRASKA boy hanged himself for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not that mode of executing the death penalty was painful. The coroner is of the opinion that in this particular case it was.

UNDER a law recently passed by the New York legislature and signed by the governor, all cities in that state of 50,000 inhabitants or over are compelled to establish and maintain free public bath houses.

IT seems that many people in San Francisco save up their dead all the week in order to have the funeral on Sunday, and a ministers' meeting was held the other day in order to protest against the practice.

A DOMINICAN friar, Father Calendolid is credited with the invention of an electrical typesetting machine which has five times the speed of the boasted typesetting machines of the present. Is there no limit to the possibilities of printing?

THE inequalities of the law are a proverb. It cost the state of Kentucky lately no less than $114 to secure the extradition from Ohio of a man who had stolen a two-dollar hog. Ohio, which gained the hog and got rid of the thief, paid nothing.

THE French language is said to be losing ground, so far as the number speaking it is concerned, as compared with the English and German. The use of English especially is spreading all over the world, and it bids fair to become the universal language.

THE duchess of Marlborough, who was formerly a New York widow has, it is stated, settled $30,000 a year upon another titled Englishman to whom she is engaged to be married. Foreign titled husbands come high, but some American women seem bound to have them.

A WEAK-MINDED youth in Cleveland shot the girl he was in love with and then turned the weapon upon himself —another case of murder and suicide, and all for love. If this thing keeps on the girls will be afraid to meet young men except in the presence of third parties.

A CALIFORNIA preacher assailed a woman in one of his prayers in his church. When called to answer in court he made the plea that it was addressed to the Deity, and therefore permissible. The court held that when spoken in the presence of an earthly audience it was not.

GEN. ALEXANDER McCOOK, the last of the "fighting McCooks," has been placed on the army retired list, and for the first time in nearly half a century there is not a single member of the family on the active roll of the army. Few families have produced so many good soldiers, and it is a noteworthy fact that the father and nine sons were all fighting for the country at one time. Four of the sons attained the rank of general, and all did gallant service for the cause of the union.

HAVING a little money, and feeling your blood course with a speculative hop, skip and jump, reflect upon the ratio in which capital invested at six per cent. and forgotten silently magnifies itself. On the books of a dry goods firm lately failing in New York was the record of an Englishman who lent the firm $25,000 in 1847. Each year he drew out $1,000, but the rest he left to grow beneath the fructifying touch of compound interest. In forty-eight years the books show this investor entitled to a credit of $154,000.

THE government secret service officials have been informed that Canadian counterfeiters have been selling United States stamps in Chicago. Of course they are disposed of at a discount, and therefore the purchasers display criminality or utter imbecility. Genuine postage stamps can always be disposed of at par, unless the seller has goon reasons for wishing to keep the transaction quiet. When they are offered at less than their face value, it is very strong evidence that they are either bogus or have been come by dishonestly.

PATRIOTIC American girls have placed a tablet at the spot where Gen. Montgomery fell at Quebec, and a movement is on foot to erect an appropriate monument. The idea of thus commemorating the ill-fated revolutionary expedition in which Montgomery and many of his men perished is very proper, but the most notable circumstance is the fact that the Canadian officials have given permission for the erection of the tablet. So graceful an expression of courtesy and friendship on the part of the Canadians will be fully appreciated on this side of the border.

IF the new woman who follows the fashion of the day could hear the contemptuous chuckle of the man milliners and manufacturers who cause the fashions to change in order that they may reap the benefit of them, if they could hear the esteem in which their intelligence is held by those who traffic upon the conviction that a woman is fool enough to wear anything that fashion demands, there would be less "hoss fly" bonnets, balloon sleeves and other idiotic contrivances to conceal the forms of our beautiful sisters.

THE New York Press says the bicycle and the trolley cars and the hard times have played such havoc with the horse industry that at a sale of blooded horses recently at Madison Square garden horses with first-class pedigrees and of perfect beauty and style, which two years ago would have sold for $1,500 each, went for from $150 to $100. Dora Thorne, whose sire, Egthorne, had a record of 2:12½, sold at this sale for $175, though as a yearling she had brought $500. Horses which used to fetch $300 sell now at about $50, and hack horses sell now as low as $10, and even $5.

Everything Goes Down in Its Path—From Seventy-Five to One Hundred Lives Estimated to Have Been Lost.

SIOUX CITY, May 6.—The lowest estimate at first placed as to the loss of life in the terrific cyclone that just passed over this part of Iowa Friday afternoon was fifty-two, but some even asserted that it must have reached 200 or 300.

The storm originated about 1½ miles southwest of Sioux Center, passing through Sioux Center, Perkins and Sibley. Sixteen are known to have perished at Sioux Center. The number of killed at Doon is stated as ten, and four or five deaths occurred at Sibley. At Perkins the loss of life was very large, perhaps not less than thirty or forty. This, it was estimated, with those who must have perished on the farms about the country, must bring the number to seventy-five or 100.

Four schoolhouses near Sioux Center while school was in progress were destroyed. At each from three to ten children were killed or injured. Many of the children were carried from a quarter to half a mile before they were dropped.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., May 6.—A cyclone dropped down into West Sioux Falls about 4 o'clock on Friday afternoon and did $50,000 damage to property. The third story of a large brick block was torn off and several people narrowly escaped being badly injured. Probably 100 houses, barns, windmills and trees and chimneys were scattered over the path of the storm.

There was a regular cloudburst 20 miles north and an immense rise in the river is looked for. The Sioux at Dell Rapids is running over the Milwaukee tracks, and Skunk creek is also high and flooding farms in its course.

REDFIELD, S. D., May 6.—Spink county was visited by a heavy drenching rain Friday afternoon, accompanied by a high wind, lightning and big hail. Citizens here viewed for some time, north of here, the formation of a cyclonic funnel-shaped cloud, which indicated trouble.

Returns are coming in showing that within 10 miles north of Redfield a regular cyclone traversed toward Ashton, where it did much damage. The opera house building, formerly the courthouse, was blown out of shape. The steeple of the Congregational church was blown down, many houses unroofed and barns destroyed. The main street of the city is strewn with debris of demolished buildings. Many farmhouses, barns, granaries and cutbuildings along the track of the cyclone north of here are destroyed.

CHICAGO, May 6.—Five persons were killed by lightning at various points in Wisconsin and Iowa Friday. These victims were as follows. At Kalona, Ia., Joseph Shetller; at Kelnerville, Wis., John Anderla; at Neillsville, Wis., Mrs. Joseph Sutherland; at Lodi, Wis., Joseph Chinp; at Seymour, Wis., John Kitchenmeisler.

SIOUX CENTER, Ia., May 7.—Revised lists of the people killed by the great Iowa cyclone of Friday give the following as known to be dead, with the estimate from various sources that from 55 to 300 will be the total number of fatalities when the lists are complete:

Child of Lunis Verhof, killed near Sioux Center; child of Maurice Coombs, killed near Sioux Center; Miss Tillie Haggie, killed near Sioux Center; Jacob Jansen, killed near Sioux Center; Alice Koster, killed near Sioux Center; Mrs. John Koster, killed near Sioux Center; Annie Marsden, school teacher near Sioux Center, lived formerly at Boscobel, Wis.; George Marsden, school teacher near Sioux Center; Mrs. Anna Postman, killed near Sioux Center; A. M. Perry, killed at Hawarden; Rudolph Schwerdfinger, killed by lightning near Southland; Mrs. John Waterman, killed near Sibley; Mrs. K. Waner and babe; babes of Mrs. Wyried and W. Viesnia, A. Barblin, Mrs. L. E. Ost, Mrs. J. Post, Mrs. F. S. Feldcamp, Mrs. Charles Waldron, Henry Smith, B. L. Smith, Mrs. L. Marette and babe, L. D. Everetts, John Frize and H. Deboor, all killed near Sioux Center; Mrs. M. Blackburn and Mrs. Herman Belknap, killed near Sibley; Peter Skinner, killed at Laurens; Everett Arnold, killed at Creston.

The damage to property will not be as great as was first feared. Corn was not planted, and although some small grain was above ground it had not advanced far enough to suffer severely.

This community is thrown into great grief over the disaster. The council held a special meeting Saturday morning, presided over by Mayor Robey. It was decided that it would be necessary to raise $12,000 to relieve the distress.

CHICAGO, May 7.—Telegraphic reports have been received of great damage to buildings and crops in many sections of Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri and South Dakota. The loss of live stock, crops and other property will aggregate an enormous sum. Several persons are reported injured.

Income Tax Case Reopened.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Associate Justice Jackson, looking worn and haggard, took his seat Monday and the supreme court at 1 o'clock began hearing the arguments in the reopened income-tax case. Judge Jackson has greatly changed since he was in Washington last, and his friends fear that he has overtaxed his strength in making the long journey to the capital, apprehensions in which his family and relatives share, for he stood the journey poorly. Nevertheless the "game" old jurist came bravely to the front and announces his determination to "sit it out" if it kills him.

N. P. Clarke & Co., of Minneapolis, Assign

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 8.—The firm of N. P. Clarke & Co., of St. Cloud and Minneapolis, who made an assignment at St. Cloud late Saturday night, have as yet not filed their assignment papers in Minneapolis. No statement of the affairs of the company has been given but those in a position to know say that the liabilities will range between $500,000 and $700,000. It is thought that the assets will be more than sufficient to pay all liabilities in full. The failure is laid to the mismanagement of Mr. Clarke's nephew, who has been in active charge of the business. Before the panic of 1893 Clarke was worth $2,500,000.

Sky Black with Smoke.

BRADFORD, Pa., May 6.—The most destructive forest fires known in this section for years have raged for the last week.

Everything in the woods is as dry as tinder, and the leaves and underbrush furnish abundant fuel for the blaze. The flames are going up the hillside at a rapid rate, destroying everything in their path. The sky is black with a stifling smoke and the flames shoot up as high as the top of the trees.

GEN. JOHN C. NEWTON.

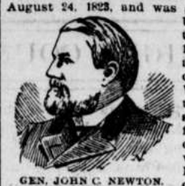
Death of the Distinguished Engineer—Brief Sketch of His Career.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Gen. John Newton, president of the Panama Railroad company, died Wednesday.



GEN. JOHN C. NEWTON.

Gen. Newton was born in Norfolk, Va., on August 24, 1823, and was graduated from the United States military academy in 1842. He served as assistant professor of engineering at West Point and then in the construction of various fortifications and other engineering works along the Atlantic and gulf seacoasts until 1860, except during 1858, when he was chief engineer of the Utah expedition. On July 1, 1856, he attained the rank of captain.

At the beginning of the civil war he was chief engineer of the department of Pennsylvania, and then held a similar appointment in the department of the Shenandoah, and from August, 1861, till March, 1862, was assistant engineer in the construction of the defenses of Washington, D. C. He was made brigadier general of volunteers on September 23, 1861, and had charge of a brigade in the defense of the capital. He served throughout the peninsular and Pennsylvania campaigns, and took an active part in the invasion of Georgia that culminated in the capture of Atlanta in September, 1864. Subsequently he had command of the various districts in Florida until he was mustered out of volunteer service in January, 1866, after receiving on March 13, 1865, the brevet of major general in the volunteer army, and those of brigadier general and major general in the regular army.

Gen. Newton received his regular promotion as lieutenant colonel of engineers on December 28, 1865, and in April, 1866, was made superintending engineer of the construction of the defenses on the Long Island side of the Narrows entrance to New York harbor; also of the improvements of the Hudson river and of the fort at Sandy Hook, N. J. He was also a member of the board of engineers to carry out in detail the modification of the defenses in the vicinity of New York. These and other similar engineering duties, principally in connection with the harbor of New York, occupied his attention until his retirement on August 27, 1886.

His well-known achievement of this kind was the removal of obstructions in Hell Gate channel, the important waterway between Long Island sound and East river. These, known as Hallett's Reef and Flood Rock, were duly mined and exploded on September 24, 1876, and on October 10, 1885. All of the problems that were involved in the preliminary steps of this great work were completely and conscientiously studied, and the accuracy of his solution was shown in the exact correspondence of results with the objects that he sought. The proposed enlargement of Harlem river, the improvements of Hudson river from Troy to New York and of the channel between New Jersey and Staten Island and of harbors on Lake Champlain were likewise under his charge.

He was advanced to the rank of colonelon June 30, 1879, and to chief of engineers, with rank of brigadier general, on March 6, 1884. The office of commissioner of public works in New York city was filled by him for some time under the administration of Mayor Grace.

In 1891 Gen. Newton was placed in charge of the great Illinois drainage canal. He was nearly 70 years of age then, but was still the personification of vital energy and rugged strength.

JAPAN YIELDS.

She Renounces Her Claim to the Peninsula of Liau Tung.

PARIS, May 8.—The Japanese minister here has informed the minister of foreign affairs, M. Hanotaux, that, accepting the friendly advice of France, Russia and Germany, Japan has renounced its claim to the permanent possession of the Liao Tung peninsula, including Port Arthur.

BERLIN, May 8.—The Japanese government has informed the government of Germany that, in accordance with the advice of the powers, Japan has relinquished her claim to Liau Tong peninsula under the treaty of Shimonoseki.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 8.—The Journal de St. Petersburg says that Japan, in conformity with the advice of Russia, France and Germany, renounces her claims to the possession of Feng Tien.

CHE FOO, May 8.—The warships of several of the powers are rapidly assembling here. The situation is regarded as alarming. Already eight Russian warships, including three torpedo boats, have gathered here and more are expected. In addition British, French, American and German warships have arrived here.

LONDON, May 8.—The Morning Post commends Japan for yielding to the demands of the three powers and condemns Russia, Germany and France for acting in their own interests and ignoring China.

The Daily News says: The coalition has made a deplorable mistake in coercing Japan, but it is enough for us to know that we did not share the mistake.

PARIS, May 8.—The Debats says: Japan will not abandon her claims for recompense for the surrender of the Liao Tung peninsula. Immediately after the ratifications shall be exchanged, negotiations will be opened with China. Japan will determine the nature of such recompense, and the powers probably will support her in return for her yielding now.

BLIXT PLEADS GUILTY.

Murderer of Catherine Ging Sentenced to Life Imprisonment.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 7.—Claus Blixt, who is awaiting trial for the murder of Catherine Ging, pleads guilty. The prisoner was brought before Judge Pond Saturday morning and changed his plea of "not guilty" to "guilty." But a short time was taken for the proceeding, as Blixt had evinced his desire to change his plea and his willingness to do so before May 14, the date regularly set for his trial. Blixt was then sentenced to imprisonment for life.

Accused of Crime.

TOPEKA, Kan., May 8.—S. W. Chase, warden of the penitentiary, on Monday swore out a warrant for the arrest of Gov. E. N. Morrill, charging him with obtaining money under false pretenses. Mr. Chase charges that from December 15, 1894, to January 14, the date of his inauguration, Gov. Morrill maintained a suite of private rooms and kept three clerks busy sorting over the applications of officeseekers and answering private correspondence, and that after he became governor he signed vouchers for these expenses and paid them out of the executive contingent fund.

Insurrection in Nicaragua.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, May 8.—Fighting has begun in Granada, Nicaragua. Disorder is reported from Leon also. Word comes from there that the followers of Ortiz, Zerula and Macherro have united to make war on Zelaya. The Hondurian troops concentrated at Cape Gracias will remain there, as it is feared that the threatened outbreak on the Mosquito reservation may extend here. The troops at Amalpa will be distributed along the coast. Gen. Bonilla will take 5,000 men and go to President Zelaya's aid if requested.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Spring is the season for cleansing and renewing the blood. During the winter it has crept sluggishly through the veins, gathering impurities from indoor air, from fatty substances in the food, and from many other sources.

The great blood purifying medicine especially prepared to do this work is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It will give to the blood purity, richness and vitality and these will bring health and vigor, strong nerves, a good appetite, refreshing sleep, and powers of endurance.

Cleanse your blood by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, a renovating preparation especially prepared to make pure blood, then you may enjoy the season of flowers and birds and out door pleasures, for you will be healthy, strong and well. Get only Hood's.

"I cannot speak too highly of Hood's Sarsaparilla, as it has worked wonders in my case. I am 74 years of age and have been afflicted with salt rheum on my hands for a great many years. I tried many things to cure them but failed. My hands would crack open and bleed profusely, and the pain was terrible to bear. Since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla the flesh has healed and the skin is as smooth as any farmer's. I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as a reliable medicine and always speak in its favor." LLOYD B. ## THE ROSE JAR.

I remember in my childhood, in a quaint, old-fashioned room,
A rose-jar, flushed with crimson, like the colors of the dawn;
It stood upon a little shelf, filled to odorous brim,
With roses that had blossomed in the summers past and gone.

Oh, what a charm swept o'er me, when sometimes sitting there,
I held the jar in careful hands, and breathed its fragrant scent;
I heard the bees go humming, and I felt the breezes blow,
I saw the river flowing where the drooping willow bent.

Sweet friend, you say the roses that bloomed for you are dead,
You only have the withered leaves to hold within your heart;
The summer's warmth has gone, and the golden sunshine fled,
And the snows of cruel winter, their blasting chill impart.

I only know that now and then, your heart has stood ajar,
And thoughts like perfume sweet and rare across your soul have swept;
Dear thoughts, like summer blossoms, swift thoughts, like eager birds,
Shy thoughts, like blue-eyed violets, where summer showers have wept.

Then keep the withered rose-leaves, preserve them in your heart,
Their perfume blesses other lives with thoughts of summer hours;
And friend, dear friend, though winter snow lies white and chill to-day,
Yet, after winter comes the May, and springtime brings the flowers.

—Gussie P. Dubois, in Chicago Interior.

CAUGHT BY A CLAM.

BY CHARLES STUART PRATT.

"One does not usually regard the clam as a dangerous animal," remarked my friend, Jack Ballantine, as he shook a silver pepper-box over a plate of the delectable Little Neck bivalves, "yet the narrowest escape of my life was from a clam."

Jack Ballantine was an old schoolmate. I remembered him as the adventurous spirit among the boys, but had not seen him since we graduated from the Latin high school, a dozen years before, till that very day.

Coming down town to business in the morning, I had met him face to face by the frog pond, and we had engaged to dine together and bring our life-stories up to date.

"Not being a dyspeptic, or otherwise impaired in your body," said I, smiling across to his sturdy bronzed face, "your terrible clam could hardly have been of the Little Neck sort."

"Hardly," replied Ballantine, with a laugh. "The clam that captured me would have made a meal for a regular fairy-tale giant. It weighed probably twenty pounds, and its tremendous shells four or five hundred pounds more."

"You must mean the giant clam of East Indian waters?" observed I, inquiringly. "I believe the single shells of that great bivalve are sometimes used for holy-water fonts in Catholic churches."

"Yes, and in the islands of Oceana for babies' bathtubs," said Ballantine. "The particular tridacna gigas in question, however, with which I had a brief but fearful acquaintance, was alive, and a dozen fathoms deep in tropic waters—in the Torres strait, between Queensland and New Guinea."

So, while we waited the next course, Ballantine began the story of his extraordinary adventure.

"I believe you went to your uncle in London, after our Latin school acquaintance," remarked I. "You wrote me on arriving there, but not afterward."

"Yes. Uncle Ballantine had mining and pearling interests in Queensland, and I went out almost immediately after reaching London. I was located at Cooktown, on the northeast coast."

"The region and the life were full of interest to me, and I soon became familiar with mining on land and pearling at sea. We had quite a fleet of luggers—vessels of five to twenty tons, two short masts, and manned with crews of half a dozen natives, Kanakas, Japs, Chinese, or Malays, maybe.

"One of our captains was an old Nantucket whaler, and I now and then went out to the fishing grounds with him.

"On one of these pearling trips we went up the coast, around Cape York, into Torres strait. It was there I had my narrow escape from a clam.

"Almost at the start we struck rich bottom, and our diver was bringing up three or four hundred pairs of shells a day—worth about that number of dollars. By the end of the month we had a cargo of eight or ten tons. Of course the mother-of-pearl lining of the shells is the bread and butter of the business. The round pearls of the jeweler are the cake (or perhaps I should say the pie, being in New England.)

"I always did have an irresistible desire to get at the inside of things, and 'see the wheels go round,' and I had long wanted, for once at least, to touch deep-sea bottom, and behold the marvels of which I had heard.

"The captin tried to dissuade me. He had been a diver himself, and knew from personal encounter the dangers of the descent. But as usual, I had my own way, though it was nigh to being for the last time.

"At last the face glass was set in place, and I stepped over the side of the lugger. I slipped off the wet lower round and sank, sank, down, down, down, into the depths of waters.

"That sudden delirious descent was measured by seconds, yet I lived an age of vision and sensation, as a drowning man does—all the nightmare imaginings the captain's black tales and warnings had projected into my dreams of the night before seemed about to be realized in double terror—then, in a flash, all mental distress was blotted out by overpowering physical sensations, suffocating pressure, to which Poe's inquisition chamber were paradise.

"I struggled spasmodically, I believe I shrieked. Then with a clash the agony ceased, and my lead-weighted feet pressed the air within my armor, and went bounding over the sea bottom like an India rubber tennis ball.

"In the midst of this exhilarating spurt I pulled up suddenly.

"As if it had instantly materialized from the sea water, I was face to face with a gigantic shark. I quickly remembered, however, that while naked native divers are occasionally devoured by these demons of the deep, they never attack the armored diver.

"Indeed! I fancy now that the shark was quite as startled as the diver, for after a second he wheeled and glided off to one side.

"As I started on once more I was stopped a second time, not by an obstacle before, but by a sharp pull on the air pipe behind my helmet, which jerked me over sprawling on my back.

"My first thought was that the shark had attacked me in the rear, but on scrambling to my feet and facing about I saw that the air-pipe, which, in my first sudden stop, had probably slackened till it lay on the bottom, was apparently caught against some protruding object.

"I hastened back to release it, when, to my surprise, I found it held fast between the shells of a giant clam.

"I gave the stout wire-lined tubing a twitch, then a strong pull, bracing my feet against the great bivalve. Then I clutched the rims of the shell and strove to separate them.

But the vise-like jaws were relentless. As easily I might have rended a granite ledge at some seam in its center.

"Then I turned to the life-line to signal the tender in the boat. As I did so I saw that it, too, had become slack, and was tangled in a branching coral. I dashed forward to disengage it, but before I reached it I was again twitched backward by the air-pipe.

"Then, for the first time, I realized the full significance of the situation. My air supply was stopped, communication with the upper world cut off, and I, Jack Ballantine, in all the vigor of young manhood, chained to my death at the bottom of Torres strait.

"And now a sudden sense of suffocation warned me that my struggle was limited to seconds.

"In a flash of memory I recalled the tale of one like disaster, where the diver cut his air-tube with a dash freed his life-line, and was drawn up half dead. But I had no knife; in that sudden backward fall I had lost hold of it.

"Then, as I lifted my eyes in a last despairing search for succor, I beheld, resting in the branching coral before me—and to this day I marvel at the miracle of it—an iron bar, pointed at one end—a veritable crowbar.

"In an instant I was prying at the jaws of the giant clam, with the leverage of the bar and the strength of desperation. For a suffocating moment the struggle was unavailing, then one rim split away and the pipe was free.

"I turned toward the life-line, staggered and fell across it, insensible!

"I suppose the weight of my falling body gave the line the one jerk which was the signal to the tender to 'pull up.' Anyway, the tender got the signal, and the next I knew I was lying on the deck of the lugger, the old Nantucketer on his knees at my side, and all the scared crew standing about."

"Truly a most extraordinary tale, as well as a terrible experience," I exclaimed, as Ballantine ended his story, and the waiter brought on the dessert. "That crowbar, for instance, is a strain on an everyday businessman's credulity," and I looked past my friend's face to the bronze face of Franklin across the street.

"And yet it is only another instance of truth stranger than fiction," asserted Ballantine. "Why, the first time the old Nantucketer I have mentioned went down, on recovering from the daze of sudden descent, he saw in a crotch of the coral before him a bottle of pale ale, and if a beer, why not a crowbar?"—Boston Globe.

THE OTHER WAY.

Where the Dude Football Player Went Under.

The shades of night were falling in their usual way. One by one the electric lights came out and went out, two and three at a time. The streets of Big Boom City were deserted.

Everybody was down at Ante Ike's saloon.

The benches along the walls of the room were covered with men.

That crowd was broke.

Any man that had money or had a friend that had money was at the bar drinking.

It was Killer Bill's time to set 'em up.

No one ever refused him.

Along time ago six or seven men tried it. That was the way Big Boom City's graveyard got a start.

"What'll yer 'ave?" Bill asked.

"Whisky!"

"Whisky!"

"Whisky!"

"Whisky!"

"Whisky!"

"Whisky!"

"Me, too," said Bill.

Ante Ike put the bottle and glasses on the bar.

Suddenly the door opened and a young man entered. He was certainly from some other diggings. His hat was a silk hat. His shoes were patent leather. There was a long line drawn down each leg of his trousers, which looked as though it had been made by folding the pants tightly right there. His coat had two long tails to it. He even wore a necktie.

He entered with an easy air.

His long training at Yarvard enabled him to enter a barroom with that.

"Hello!" remarked Killer Bill.

"I beg pardon," said the young man, as he held a green carnation to his well-cut nose.

"Hello! Ain't yer got no ears?"

"If you mean that word for a salutation," said the young man, "good evening."

"'Ave er drink," said Bill.

"With pleasure. I shall take creme de menthe."

The stillness in the room was very loud.

"What!" exclaimed Bill.

"Creme de menthe."

"Nobody don't drink that stuff out here. Barkeep fill 'im up er straight."

"Pardon me, I do not care to indulge."

The young man started for the door.

Bill got before him and reached for him.

With an awful suddenness the air was filled with arms, legs, heads and other things.

The very building rocked.

Then a man got kicked out through the front door.

"If any other man ever refuses ter drink with me," said Bill, after he had put his whisky away, "I shall git vexed and hurt 'im."—N. Y. World.

—It is estimated that of the total sum raised for the support of the Protestant churches of this country, over one-third is now procured by the efforts or labors of women.

ANOTHER MURDER.

H. W. Thomas Found Dead in the Streets of Minneapolis.

Fritz Williams Arrested and Confesses He Did the Deed—From All Accounts Jealousy Led to the Killing.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 7.—Another dastardly crime has been added to the long list which marks the criminal records of Minneapolis. H. W. Thomas, superintendent of the Soo telegraph system, was found murdered shortly after 1 o'clock Monday morning at the corner of Thirty-second street and Chicago avenue. The body was discovered by two young men named Ward Housel and W. H. Dickinson, who reside in the vicinity. They were on their way home, and when passing the corner of Thirty-second street and Chicago avenue, saw the body of a man lying in the gutter. They approached and discovered a large pool of blood in which the man's head was lying. A bullet hole in the face indicated that a crime had been committed, and they gave the alarm at the Fifth precinct station. Coroner Kistler was at once summoned and the body was removed to the county morgue. A Windsor hotel check gave a clue to the identity of the man, and about two hours after the discovery of the body it was learned that the deceased was Supt. Thomas, of the Soo.

It was learned that the murdered man had been visiting at the residence of Mr. Berglund, 3209 Chicago avenue. He was a particular friend of the family and had gone to the house early in the afternoon, staid to supper and left at 10 minutes of 11. He had gone to the residence with Mr. and Mrs. Webster, of Oak Lake, with whom he had taken dinner. Mr. Webster is a son-in-law of Mr. Berglund, and is receiving teller at the Western Union telegraph office. Mr. Thomas appeared to be in unusually bright spirits during the day and he bade the family of Mr. Berglund a cheerful good night on his departure. He had not been gone more than three minutes when Mrs. Berglund and her daughter heard a muffled report, but paid no attention to it. It was of such a subdued nature that at first they thought an electric light globe had exploded in some part of the house and no further attention was paid to the matter. Not for a moment did they suppose that the sound they had heard was the death knell of an intimate friend of the family. The family then retired and knew nothing of the horrible affair till several hours later, when officers visited the house in an endeavor to obtain a clue to the assassin who had committed the crime.

At this time the authorities received certain information which they considered would warrant the apprehension of Fritz Williams, a son-in-law of Mr. Berglund, who has not been living with his wife for several months past.

At a quarter of 5 in the morning, Lieut. Thomas Coskran and Police Officer Fox went to the residence of Mrs. Williams, on Park avenue between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, and took into custody her son Fritz, the husband of Mr. Berglund's daughter. Mrs. Williams answered the door call and immediately aroused her son, who was sleeping on a cot on the ground floor. While he was somewhat surprised that he was wanted, still he did not express the astonishment that would naturally be expected from a man placed in his position. He was taken to the Fifth precinct lockup, but was shortly after removed to the Central station. He was warned that anything he might say would be used against him.

When Williams was first subjected to the sweating process he denied all knowledge of the crime but shortly after when closely questioned by Supt. Smith, Detectives Doyle and Howard, admitted his guilt and said he had committed the murder.

He told his story in a straight forward manner. Said he was crazed with jealously but knew exactly what he was doing. The separation from his wife had been preying on his mind and when he learned that she had returned from Grand Forks and that Thomas was calling on her, it aroused all his passion and caused him to commit the terrible crime.

He said that he believed his wife and Thomas had been intimate and that "she was not using him right."

Williams is confined in one of the upper cells of the Central police station and will see no one but members of his family and his attorney Mr. Ered Cook.

A peculiar circumstance in connection with the crime is that yesterday, when he took a fellow creature's life, marks the twenty-first anniversary of Williams' birth.

An Indian's Mistake.

They say that two Indians belonging to one of the large American shows of life in the wild west while visiting London were much interested in the sights to be seen in the London streets. Day after day they walk up and down the most crowded streets and gaze on the people and into the shop windows like a pair of children at the circus. One day they stopped before the show window of a wig maker and stared at the many varieties of wigs on exhibition there until their eyes nearly fell out. Finally one of them nudged the other, and with a shake of his head remarked, "Ugh! mighty brave man' Big fighter; much scalp!"

MARSHAL CANROBERT left property in England of the value of £9,000, requiring the probate of his will in that country.

CHIEF CLARENCE of the Mosquito reservation is still at Kingston, Jamaica, under British protection, and is allowed $22 a day for living expenses.

DARWIN was a great smoker, and though he read everything the papers had to say against the cigarette, he was rarely seen without one in his fingers or his lips.

E. CLARK, JR., who recently resigned his position as general freight agent of the New York Central railroad, had been forty-seven consecutive years in the service of the company.

KATE FIELD'S health has become so precarious that she has been forced to suspend her paper, Kate Field's Washington, until she shall have recovered. The sympathy of many thousands of admirers of this bright woman will go out to her in her troubles.

"WHERE was Magna Charta signed?" asked a teacher in a south of London board school. "Please, sir, at the bottom."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Shot by an Officer.

Wm. Moore, aged 19 years, was shot through the back by Officer Hoban while he was burglarizing the residence of F. B. Lewis in Minneapolis.

Some 10 days previous Lewis had moved out of his residence, since which time the house has been standing vacant. One afternoon the house was entered through the back door by thieves, who tore up all the lead pipe in the house, doing some $300 damage to the building and leaving the pipe packed up in sacks to be carried away during the night. Officer Hoban had been detailed to watch the house. On the night of the shooting Moore and two companions entered the house and soon appeared with the plunder. As they started down the alley the officer called upon them to stop, and at the same time grabbed Jack Foley by the collar. Moore and the third man of the gang started on a run. Moore dodged around the other corner of the outhouse, and was about six feet away, when Officer Hoban reached around, and in the darkness pointed his revolver point blank at the fleeing man and fired. Young Moore fell, mortally wounded, but the third man escaped in the darkness and the police were unable to obtain any trace of him.

John Fletcher Williams.

John Fletcher Williams, formerly secretary of the Minnesota Historical society, died the 29th at Rochester of softening of the brain.

Deceased was a descendant in the seventh generation of John Williams, who emigrated from Glamorganshire, Wales, about the year 1644. He was born at Cincinnati in 1834, and graduated from the Ohio Wesleyan University in 1852. Three years later he came to St. Paul, where he resided until shortly before his death.

For 12 years he was employed as a reporter for various daily papers in St. Paul, entering first the employment of the Daily Minnesotian, which suspended publication in 1861. In 1867 he was elected secretary and librarian of the Minnesota Historical society, and since that time his life has been devoted to collecting and preserving matters of interest concerning the early history of this and other states.

The University.

At the meeting of the board of regents of the State University, the resignation of Dean Sudduth from the college of dentistry was received and accepted and Thomas E. Weeks, D. D. S., was appointed dean of the school of dentistry. Resignations were accepted from John E. Sawyer, from the Homeopathic College of Physicans and Surgeons, and of Charles L. Green, of the College of Medicine and Surgery.

The board appointed Thomas J. Gray, professor of history and methodology of medicine in the College of Homeopathic Medicine and Surgery. R. R. Rasmussen professor of clinical obstetrics in the same institution, and A. D. Gaines, of Alexandria, instructor in the school of agriculture.

The board will ask the United States government to detail Lieut. H. A. Leouhaeuser, of the Twenty-fifth United States infantry, to service at the university, upon the retirement of Lieut. Morgan.

Joseph Mattocks found five pocketbooks in the toilet room at the court house at Hastings, besides a certificate of $175, one note for $100 and another for $158.50, the property of parties who had their pockets picked during the bridge celebration.

Sherwood,s store at Pleasant Grove was broken into and about $75 in goods taken.

V. A. Bell's harness shop at Minnesota Lake was damage $1,000 by fire.

The White Earth and Leech Lake maple sugar harvest this season was almost a total failure, the lack of snow and the absence of the usual spring frost having caused a too early cessation of the sap flow.

John Mitchell and Jacob Paff, of Amboy, have commenced suit against the Millers National Insurance Company for loss on a mill, which burned July 4th last at Amboy. The mill was valued at $15,000, with $10,000 insurance. A few days prior to the fire Mr. Mitchell foreclosed a mortgage on the property for $8,000, and the company claims this was done without their knowledge or consent.

Through his own cupidity and the crude scheme of a swindler who gave his name of Frank Cooper, Peter Gondringer, of Avon, Stearns county, is out about $280, and the old folks at home have a mortgage on their farm for that amount.

The report of the Red Wing water plant shows that during the year 52,240,616 gallons of water were pumped; there are 315 consumers, of whom eighty-four use meters.

B. N. Peterson was arrested at Cokato on an indictment found against him for the illegal sale of liquors. He gave bonds and will stand trial.

A court of the Independent Order of Foresters has been organized at Plainview.

Grand Meadow has been infested with the original package liquor system for the past year, and the village instituted a suit against the proprietor, J. L. Bostwick. The case has been bitterly fought, and was decided recently. Bostwick, finding the evidence overwhelming, pleaded guilty to five cases, paid a fine of $240 and costs and agreed to quit.

At Cloquet some one filled the plank side walks with boot caulk so as to puncture the pneumatic tires of bicycle riders.

Fred M. Folsom, on whose affidavit the Hayward defense sought a new trial, has been arrested on a charge of passing a worthless check.

A large barn owned by D. O'Brien, of Faribault, was totally destroyed by fire. Four horses and one cow were burned. The loss is about $1,200.

Two dozen fair young damsels at Winona have signed an agreement to wear bloomer costumes when riding their bicycles this summer.

Boyhood's Dream—Manhood's Delusion.

In the spring the small boy's fancy lightly turns to ponds and brooks,
With about a quart of angle-worms and a nickel's worth of hooks,
Also a ton of patience and of faith an ample store,
To withdraw the wary bullhead from his covert to the shore.
And that fancy never leaves us as we stand beside life's sea
With painted bobs seducing great results that ne'er can be
To discover late at sundown we have not attained our wish,
But have traded off two pounds of worms to get one pound of fish.

—A. T. Worden, in Judge.

La Grippe.

My desk and my paper, my pen and my ink
Are ready for business; but where is my "think?"
Whenever a blossoming thought I would nip,
My head begins humming the lay of La Grippe.

I've earnestly sought how I best might evade
The loathsome embrace of that wicked jade;
Am told many ways how to give her the slip,
But none have yet saved me from Mme. La Grippe.

One told me to stick out my tongue, which I did,
When on it a teaspoon of sulphur was slid,
Expecting, I think, that the madame would skip,
So much 't would remind her of home, poor La Grippe!

Another assured me quinine was the best
To quiet the groaning and give friends a rest;
Another that whisky was just the right whip
To use in a conflict with Mme. La Grippe.

Oh, fudge, I can't write, and it's no use to try!
A buzz in my head and a flood in my eye!
And here's a big sneeze getting ready to—to—
Oh! put in a word there to rhyme with La—La Grippe!

A WAR ECHO.

Every Honorable Veteran Deserves His Pension.

And the Lone Limb Is Not the Only Reason for a Government Reward Either.

[From Journal, Lewiston, Me.]

Samuel R. Jordan has just given the Journal an account of his life, which in view of his extremely hard lot for the past few years will be read with interest.

"I am 48 years old and have always lived in New Portland. I enlisted in the army in 1862 as a private in Company A, 28th Me. Volunteers. My army experience injured my health to some extent, although I worked at blacksmithing some part of the time, when suddenly, several years ago, I was prostrated with what able physicians pronounced Locomotor Ataxia. At first I could get around somewhat yet the disease progressed quite rapidly until I had hardly any feeling in my legs and feet, they felt like sticks of wood and I grew so much worse that I could not move for three years without help, as my neighbors and friends could testify. I employed several physicians in my vicinity, and elsewhere, and they all told me that medicines would not help me, that they could do nothing to effect a cure and that in time I should become entirely helpless. I became discouraged. I was a great care to my wife and friends. Shortly after I met an old army comrade, Mr. All. Parlin, a resident of Madison, Maine, and he incidentally mentioned how he had tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for a severe case of rheumatism and a spinal and malarial trouble, that he had suffered with consequent of his army life, and had been greatly benefited by their use. By his earnest recommendation I was induced to try the pills. After taking them for a time I began to feel prickly sensations in my legs and a return of strength so I could move them a little. After a few weeks I began to feel a marked improvement in my condition. I soon was enabled to walk around a little with the help of crutches. After taking for some time I can now walk without crutches, my general health is much improved and I have regained my old-timed vigor. I can walk about and enjoy life once more, for which I feel very thankful, and this happy result is due to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are not a patent medicine in the sense that name implies. They were first compounded as a prescription and used as such in general practice by an eminent physician. So great was their efficacy that it was deemed wise to place them within the reach of all. They are now manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and are sold in boxes (never in loose form by the dozen or hundred, and the public are cautioned against numerous imitations sold in this shape) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company.

RATS AND MOTHS.

Rules for Warfare Upon Them During Spring House-Cleaning.

In the spring there is a wholesale resurrection of domesticated insects that fill a house-keeper's mind with forebodings.

Furnace fires have not only kept the family warm all winter, but also innumerable cozy mice nests, the larvæ of moths and the irrepressible cockroach. At the first warm, sunshiny day every one of these small abominations are up and doing unless a strong hand of resistance is put forth at their first active demonstration.

This is accomplished by using naphtha and benzine liberally on mattresses, pillows, etc., that are sunning in the back yard.

Where a movable wooden washstand becomes infected with croton bugs or cockroaches there is a sovereign cure in washing it out with hot suds, leaving it open to dry in strong sunlight and then soaking every joint of the wood with pure ammonia. To guard against any return to the old haunts cut a few squares of stiff brown wrapping paper, paint them lightly with mucilage, dust over heavily with borax and lay squares in the drawers and cabinet.

For moths there has at last been found a present preventive. If a florist can not supply one with sprays of dried English lavender the corner apothecary will be sure to keep it in packages; when on closet shelves, in drawers and trunks it will defend one's woolen things against the most aggressive onslaughts of the enemy.

As one by one the draperies come down dust, sun and fold them up with squares of tar moth paper and directly the furnace fire is put out send for an expert rat catcher to examine the walls and cellar for those most offensive of parasites, mice that breed vermin of all kinds. If it is a country house order him to send ferrets through the walls, but in the city insist on traps and forbid any use of poison, else the creatures will die in the walls and render the house unlivable. After three days' experiment he should have coaxed every mouse from its nest and the five or six dollars he asks for his work is well invested. Where a rat catcher can not be had buy a half dozen round tin spring traps and set them all every night for a week in every suspected spot, baiting each time with a different dainty and scalding the traps to clean them in the morning.—Boston Herald.

At Times It Does Not Do to Boast of All Her Accomplishments.

"John," she said, thoughtfully, "of course it is well to be proud of your daughter's success at the seminary, but—but"—

"But, what, my dear?" he asked.

"Well, it seems to me that you are a trifle thoughtless at times."

"I don't quite understand you," he said.

"It's all right to speak of her standing in her class," she explained, "and it is all right to be proud of her social accomplishments. Talk of her taste if you wish to, her cooking and her singing lessons, her vivacity, her knowledge of modern languages and her sunny disposition, but—but—"

"Well, what is it? Where have I made any mistake?"

"Why, it's about time to find a husband for her, and I would suggest, John, that you say nothing about her gymnasium work or the fact that she played center rush on the seminary football team. I have noticed that that has a tendency to discourage young men."—Chicago Post.

WEAK WOMEN.

On first introducing this world-famed medicine to the afflicted, and for many years thereafter, it was sold under a Positive Guarantee of giving entire satisfaction in every case for which it is recommended. So uniformly successful did it prove in curing the diseases, derangements and weaknesses of women that claims for the return of money paid for it were exceedingly rare. Since its manufacturers can now point to thousands of noted cures effected by it in every part of the land, they believe its vast record a sufficient guarantee of its great value as a curative agent, therefore, they now rest its claims to the confidence of the afflicted solely upon that record. ## DELANO DIARY

—The grader has done some good work on R. R. Ave. and River Street. But Joe says it makes the road boss sweat.

—Persons desirous of learning how to easily and cheaply put a new window into a building can learn by inquiring of W. D. Freeman.

—Peter Yannick's Farmers' Brass Band furnished the music for the Temperance Convention at Watertown on Thursday, last week.

—W. L. Haggerty, Rockford's genial station agent for so long, and well and favorably known here, has been promoted to the Paynesville station. He has moved his family there.

—Owing to the absence of Rev. J. W. Powell, who has gone to Blue Earth City for a visit, there will be no morning service at the M. E. church. Sunday School and League meetings at the regular hours.

—While working in the garden we found a fine, large cut worm, in good working condition; but have seen no potato bugs yet. If both will keep out of our garden we will consider ourselves highly favored.

—Quite a disturbance of the usual quiet on a prominent corner, near the town pump took place sometime after breakfast time on Monday. Cries of Oh, don't! Murder! Ma! Ma! rent the air. Police were called for but none showed up. Mud rattled against the windows; water was freely circulated. Men were seen crowding out of an upstairs window. Doctors, lawyers, and other prominent citizens were seen trying to investigate the matter. The village attorney and deputy coroner were on hand. On investigation it turned out that a young man had been out late and some of his associates who had been fortunate enough to be up first were trying to get him out of bed.

—The Eagle accuses the GAZETTE of not knowing what it is talking about, when it says the Delano Brass Band is defunct, notwithstanding the subscription by generous citizens. The band lacks not money so much as vertebral column. Money can't make music nor furnish harmony to the Delano Brass Band. They seem to lack executive ability since Billings left. But it seems as if there is enough wealth, wind, brass, players, etc., if they only had Bohn. If all Delano's musical ability could but be harmonized the sweetest melody would float out from the grand band stand as of yore. Boys get the sharps ground down, get the flats keyed up and come together before our national birthday.

—The millenium seems approaching judging from the action of some of Delano's religeous people and their preachers during the past week. On Saturday night Presiding Elder Atchinson arrived in town purposing to hold a four days meeting. On Sunday he preached, earnestly, both morning and evening; and on Monday gave way for the Presbyterians to hold their Presbytery which had also been announced. He earnestly asked his hearers to attend the services at the Presbyterian church: and was himself present there. The Presbyterian brethren made him a corresponding member of Presbytery. And in the evening both Methodist and Presbyterian ministers in the same church, with a splendid audience of several denominations held a regular Salvation Army revival service, sans the banjo accompaniment: in the Presbyterian church. Methodists expressed themselves as well pleased with the meeting and Presbyterians appeared to enjoy it. So let it be.

—"Nox em all" box of writing paper and envelopes at the GAZETTE office for 10 cts.

—Don't forget to be at the City Hall promptly at 8 P. M., Saturday May 18, if you wish to have Memorial Day kept as it should be in Delano.

—Mrs. F. H. Lindsley boasts of the largest tomato plants in town. She planted the seed in February, and the plants are now budding for blossoms.

—Envelopes with return blanks printed on, end in any quantity you desire, at GAZETTE office. Try a nickel's worth, and you will want more of the same sort.

—Boys are beginning to go in swimming earlier this year than common. The weather seems as well adapted to such sports now as is usual a month later in the season.

—The hog ordinance don't seem to cut much of a figure with the present council, and sensitive olfactories can obtain a "whiff" almost any time. What has become of the committee on alleys?

—Plum, and other fruit trees and shrubbery are setting out to bear an uncommonly large crop this year. All nature seems bent on outdoing itself to assist in aiding mankind over the hard times that has fallen upon the land.

—Delano is coming to the front in great shape. With electric lights and waterworks and road grader, putting streets in city shape and a prospect, in the near future of stone pavements. Who says Delano can't claim metropolitan airs?

—If the new grading machine could be drawn through a few of the alleys in town a few times it might add much to the appearance and convenience for travel, as well as something to the drainage, thereby adding to the already healthy reputation our village has attained.

—The Epworth League will have a special programme on Sunday evening at 7:00 p. m. to celebrate their sixth anniversary. After the regular study of the lesson there will be songs, readings, recitations, etc, by the two Leagues. Everybody is invited to attend.

—The Epworth League, which has undertaken to raise one hundred dollars during the summer, for the M. E. church, to apply on the debt, will have a dinner, on the European plan, pay for what you get, five cents a dish, and five cents for coffee, and doughnuts on Fair Day. Patronize them.

—On the occasion of a recent electric storm, at night, A. W. Wittman claims that the electric lights went out, that the electric bells were rung, and that things had the semblance of being run by spirits, spooks, or some such merry makers at his residence on North Third Street. The Prof. keeps sober, too.

—A few days ago a young man came into the GAZETTE office and excitedly exclaimed that a man was pedding stationery about town "selling a box of paper and envelopes for 10 cts. Why he never heard of such a thing before." He was still more surprised when the proprietor of the GAZETTE assured him that that was the regular price for some in stock, and that was all he pretended to ask for one grade. Try a box of "Nox 'em all" for 10 cts.

—Delano has several business houses that don't advertise. That is to speak of. They seem content to do business on the quiet plan. Kind of to themselves like. However you will find some few advertisemenes in the newspapers. Those whose names appear in the GAZETTE call on, especially, and see if they are not up to the times in goods and prices. People who advertise are apt to be prepared to meet their customers with what they want.

—It's not safe for burglars to try to work their trade on M. D's., as John Johnson is reported to have recently learned while engaged in carrying off Dr. Whittemore's loose change, at Elk River. John had succeeded in extracting the few hard earned dimes from the pants pocket of the owner who was quietly sleeping. Mrs. W. gave the alarm whereupon the doctor, being used to turning out nights, and not being obliged to stop and rub his eyes, proceeded promptly to business. After a very severe course of the Doctor's massage treatment, heroically administered, the night patient was turned over to the tender mercies of Justice Williams, who bound him over to appear at the next term of District Court. Sheriff Brown chaperoned him to St. Cloud, to live at the county's expense until Court convenes. And the Doctor is taking his pay in congratulations and advertising.

—The Delano Cemetery Association held the meeting called for Saturday night, at Dr. Walter's office. Present William Lewis, T. J. Catlin, and R. M. Walter, three members of the board. The absence of people haying lots in the cemetery don't speak very flatteringly of the interest taken in keeping up the grounds. Discussions were had by those present concerning the grading and leveling of the road opposite the cemetery. Also, about having some hitching posts placed along the outside of the fence, and a rail along the east side of the road opposite for hitching teams. It was found that a few lots are still unpaid for and as it is necessary to have money for improvements the Secretary was authorized to notify delinquents and collect the amounts due the association. The stakes have rotted off and most of them need to be replaced by new ones and it is proposed to attend to this as soon as possible.

Dr. Niven, May 21 and 22.

—C. H. Green & Co. keep abreast of the times. Strawberries already.

—The Delano Furniture Co. are handling a fine lot of carpets. Call and examine samples.

—Yesterday's storm furnished Len Dedrick with a flash of light for an instant, also Prof. Wittman.

—C. M. Conzet celebrated his 38th birthday yesterday. His father and mother from Greenwood were up to assist him in doing justice to the occasion.

—Gardening is mostly over until the weeds get started well. Horse fanciers have taken their colts to pasture and things are assuming their accustomed summer quiet.

—The Marble Theatre Company is to be here Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Billy has been here before. He "as an hie like a hegal" and needs no recommendations.

—Greenwood's Rip Van Winkle made his appearance on our streets yesterday. He was heard to remark among other funny things, that some men live like hogs, neither smoking, chewing, nor drinking whisky.

—If Rev. Tabor Davies follows the advice given him on the day of his ordination our Presbyterian brethren will doubtless have good sermons hereafter. He was told a story of a newly wedded man who, among other necessaries of life, secured a good cow. But, not being acquainted with the dairy business asked information from a friend. He was told that he should be very careful about milking the cow, and take only so much milk each time as was necessary for the family use; so that it would last longer. Rev. Davies is to milk the cow dry each time. To tell all he knows on the subject in hand. If he lives up to his instructions he will make a good minister.

—People's pedal propellers as they plod from the town pump to the GAZETT office are liable to become moist. One distinguished lady from the region of the Po, after succeeding in effecting a landing on the sidewalk, and while seriously contemplating the time she would have restoring her foot gear to its normal condition inquired who was responsible for the absence of the crossing. Some by-stander, for a joke, pointed to Constable J. P. Berneck; the woman pounced at Joe as if to give him a thrashing. Mr. B. is not on the street committee. If he was he would surely, after the episode mentioned, see to it that the ladies could get about town without soiling their shoes.

—A terrific clap of thunder reverberated through our village at the noon hour yesterday. It was the general opinion that it must have struck something. On going down River street soon after we learned that the object struck was a cluster of trees on the West Side; hither we journeyed to examine. We found six good sized soft maples, all growing from one stump, had received the shock near their tops, bits of bark were knocked off until near the bottom where strips were pealed off and the fluid found its way to the ground from every side of the roots; in its passage splitting a board pig trough which had been leaning among the trees. August Berneck says it is as close call as he wants.

Delano's Decoration Day.

Saturday, May 18, has been named as the day when those interested in perpetuating the names of the dead soldiers, who served their country in its hour of need, shall meet to make arrangements for decorating their graves with flowers; this season furnished in such profusion. In order to have things well arranged and to move off with the procession with which those accustomed to army life are familiar it is necessary that all should do their duty. That each one do his part, and promptly respond where duty calls. Let all desirous of observing Memorial Day in Delano make it a point to ask others, and themselves be present at the City Hall, promptly at 8 p. m., on Saturday, May 18, to appoint proper committees and arrange for the day's programme.

County Cullings.

District court convenes at Buffalo, Monday, June 3. Judge Seagrave Smith to preside.

We don't wish to discourage the enterprising Waverly Tribune poetical critic, but must, in justice to Maud Muller, the Judge, John G. Whittier, and others having an interest in poetry say, we much prefer the old style to the recent Tribune version.

"For of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these: "It might have been!"
sounds more like poetry. And suits us.

The rates for valuing personal property for taxation, as fixed at the late meeting of Wright county assessors don't seem to strike people as being very satisfactory. But some basis to work on has to be established and perhaps it will work as well as any. A good deal depends on the honesty of those assessed as well as on the assessors.

In reference to the failure of Governor Clough to sign the bill which put the employees of our railroad and warehouse commision under civil service regulations the Wright County Times says: "The Governor has woefully mistaken public sentiment, and the reasons he gives for the veto are too puerile and foolish not to be seen through even by a child."

Some of our county contemporaries are having a little sport out of our illustrations. All right, boys, go in. We made 'em for the amusement and instruction of our readers. Glad to hear that you have come so near to figuring out what they were intended to represent; especially proud of your ability to scan the poetry as well as the pictures. If you continue to improve, doubtless, as the illustrations improve in appearance, you will learn to appreciate things artistic; and be able to derive the full benefit of our etchings.

We have not yet received a notice of the grand democratic gathering of Wright county, to help mould the next platform. We are among those who believe the voters should aid in making their own platforms. That the people know better what they want than a gang of politicians, who want office, do; and the best way to make their votes count is to have a voice in the making of the platform. To hold meetings in each county and voting precinct, and express their sentiments. But not tie up delegates to vote straight for one man or measure.

Billy Marble.

The Marble Theatre Company will give one of their entertainments in the City Hall, Delano, Monday, Tuesday & Wednesday May 13, 14 and 15. Mr. and Mrs. Marble are both with the company. With an entire new cast of characters their plays will be interesting and entertaining. Jack of Diamonds will be the opening piece. Tickets at Wittman's drug store, 25 and 35 cts.

TARIFF IS A TAX.

Minnesota Now Has Two U. S. Senators who are aware of that fact.

WONDER why the republican papers don't attribute the raise in wages to the Wilson bill. They try to lay most everything else onto that.

EX-SENATOR EATON, in his Journal, in criticising friend McGary's views on free silver seems to think nobody can honestly favor such a thing. Senator, you should not deprive others of the right to their views. He also complains that silver mine owners have vast wealth, and free silver would enrich them more. Is not that all right from the Senator's point of reasoning? He advocates protective tariff, which enriches the manufacturers, and argues that what enriches them will enrich the laborers. Why not apply the same rule to the silver question? If the government could rake in the difference between the value of the silver in a dollar and a silver dollar, instead of allowing the individual to do so, perhaps it would be better.

THE dailies are citing that Carnegie's laborers have had their wages advanced, unasked. And claim that the company knows what it is about, and can afford to raise wages; also, that there is no more certain indication of good times coming than this. If Carnegie can afford to raise wages, others will soon find out they can do the same; and with the present outlook for an abundance of farm products to dispose of, people in Minnesota may begin to take a more hopeful view of things. We have been, for a couple of years, passing through one of the most trying ordeals that our country has seen for years, and the smallest ray of light is thankfully received. Among the first to reduce wages and make retrenchment when hard times had their advent among us was Carnegies. Their predictions then proved correct. Perhaps their wisdom in raising wages now will soon be as apparent.

The Money Question. What Is It?

Some of our would-be financiers are making quite a disturbance about the money question. They seem to think there is some great thing the matter with our money. That unless the wrong is righted; and that soon, our country will surely be wrecked; will be irretrievably lost; financially ruined. But just what the wrong is don't seem very clear to the average reader. He reads one paper and thinks he has it solved. He reads another and concludes it is clearer on the subject, and changes his mind entirely. Even in the same paper are found articles claiming the trouble to be of several different origins, and to be several entirely different things.

Papers are made by men. They can be no nearer right, except where they study the matter, and form their own conclusions, more thoroughly than those having less facilities to do so can as regards history of financial affairs than the men who read them.

As for the workings of our money system one man can see about as far as another into how it goes. Each knows that it matters not whether his dollar be the governments stamp upon gold, silver or paper; so long as he has one dollar of any kind, every fellow he meets is after it. Whether it be the laborer at his daily toil, the rich man in his carriage, the tax gatherer, or what not, they will readily, even greedily, take his money. He has no trouble to get rid of it. The only difficulty is to get enough dollars of any kind and to keep them.

Some tell us that we must base our money on gold. What's the use. Several times our country has run, it was claimed, prosperously, while ordinary people did not see gold money for years. In the sixties when one gold dollar was sold for two dollars and eighty or eighty five cents of paper, and the gold was seldom seen, people claimed times were prosperous. Business went on. We lived through it. Specie payment was resumed, and though some claimed that when this was done the country would certainly collapse, they were soon proven poor prophets. In 1830, Thomas H. Benton tells us, that gold currency was "then, and for twenty years extinct in the United States." This being the case, it seems the country did not perish from the map of the world. We are here yet, and today, although suffering from such a stringency of money matters we have gold, silver and paper in circulation. And everybody is trying to get all he can of each; and he is not at all particular which of the three he gets, so he gets it.

Gold, silver and paper; each has its uses for money. So long as one can be exchanged for another it matters not which we have. If we wish to journey far and have a large amount to carry, we prefer paper. If we have little, we prefer silver. If we are to remain at home and keep in the house a large amount, gold is preferred as taking smaller compass than silver and being less destructible than paper. But for every day business no objection is made to either.

We are told that a silver dollar is worth only about half a dollar, really; yet the man that tells you that receives it just as readily as he can, if you wish to pay him a dollar you owe him, or to buy something he has to sell.

If there is anything wrong with the money it seems as if it was about time somebody had discovered a plan to enlighten the masses as to what it is. That some kind of unanimity might be had. But so long as one says we must have a gold standard; another a silver standard; another a paper dollar, the government stamp making it money; and still others wishing for bimetallism, two standards, gold or silver, with paper redeemable in either, how can people be expected to be satisfied.

Every man must do a little figuring for himself on this question. He must look at it and satisfy his own conscience, and vote accordingly.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, May 10, 1895.

Secretary Carlisle has long since ceased to notice published misrepresentations concerning himself or the Treasury department, but he had to smile when the story reached Washington that the populists were making campaign material out of the alleged alarm of Treasury officials at the purchase of gold bullion from western miners by the syndicate which purchased the last issue of bonds. This silly story went on to say that it was the purpose of the syndicate to make a corner in gold and after the price has been forced up to make a raid on the gold in the Treasury and force another big issue of bonds to replenish it. There never was a more ridiculous story concocted upon a basis partially true. It has been well known that the syndicate mentioned has been buying gold from western miners for the last two months, but it has also been equally well known that it was bought in order that the syndicate might live up to its contract with the government, which called for the turning of so much gold into the Treasury within a certain period. There has been no alarm on the part of the Treasury officials simply because there has been nothing to be alarmed about. The reason why the gold was bought from the western miners was that the premium at which it could be bought was less than it cost to ship it from Europe, thus making its purchase over here profitable to the syndicate. The contract with the syndicate stipulates that one half the gold paid into the Treasury for the bonds shall come from Europe and the contract has up to this time been kept to the letter. The last payments will not be due until next October.

Ex-Senator Butler, of South Carolina, who made many warm friends during his eighteen years service in the Senate, left Washington, with his family, this week, for his home. He says he is now out of politics and does not again expect to take an active part, but those who know him best say it will be simply an impossibility to keep him quiet when there is fighting going on.

Many shrewd observers believe that with more prosperous times there will come a radical change in the sentiments of a majority of those who now advocate the free coinage of silver because they believe almost any change must be for the better. For instance, two democrats from widely separated states—Judge Montgomery, of Mich., and Judge Berry of Ga.,—who happened to be in Washington this week, thus diagnosed the silver case in their respective states; Judge Montgomery—"I think the Republicans of Michigan are fully as much divided on the silver question as the democrats. Some of the most influential men in the republican party out there are thoroughly imbued with the free silver sentiment. My own belief is that we have seen the maximum agitation on that subject. I do not think it will be a factor in the Presidential election next year, and do not expect either of the great parties to make any declaration as to silver coinage, affirmatively or negatively." Judge Berry says: "It looks to me as though a great portion of the southern people had gone crazy on silver. I guess they will get over it in time and will wake up some day to a realization of the folly of such a policy. Of all the people in the U. S. the southerners ought to stand most inflexibly in favor of a sound currency. They don't mine an ounce of silver and their chief product, cotton, is valued on a gold basis on the other side of the Atlantic. At present the silverites are howling with the same fervor that the disciples of the old greenback doctrine displayed, but a year from now under the quieting influence of better times their ardor may be abated and the movement may die out as completely as the flat money craze did."

The completed model of the equestrian statue of Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock was exhibited today to a number of prominent people in the studio of Mr. H. J. Ellicott, the sculptor selected by the Commission charged by Congress with the duty of superintending the making and erection of the statue. The model made an excellent impression on those who saw it, the likeness in face and figure of Gen. Hancock being specially commented upon.

President Cleveland is uncertain as to when he will leave Washington for the summer. He would like to go to Gray Gables when Mrs. Cleveland and the children go, which will be in the neighborhood of the first of June but it will depend entirely upon circumstances whether he does.

Secretory Gresham has so far recovered from his recent illness that he is going away for a short rest. Things in his department are all in good shape notwithstanding the predictions of republicans of the serious trouble which was certain to result from some of the recent complications with foreign governments.

McGary's Musings.

Mr. Editor, I have not started out to ride a bicycle, a Texas broncho nor a cyclone but a hobby, the easiest thing to ride in the world. It is always ready and at your door groomed and fed for the race and will carry you farther in a day than anything run by steam or electricity. I have taken one on trial from the republican party, called high protective tariff, and should the hobby prove as good as recommended will take stock in the same. Major McKinley is the largest share holder and therefore has a controlling interest. But think in June or July, 1896 he could be bought out for 10 cents on the dollar.

The republicans have set up in their complaint that the passing of the Wilson tariff bill by the democrats was done with intent to do them great bodily harm, and that killing the McKinley tariff bill, which was a republican measure, destroyed trade and commerce and also paralyzed the whole country. They also claim that the killing of the McKinley tariff bill fostered crime and riots, defiled the jury box, and robbed the widow of her mite, and that the democratic party and the Wilson tariff bill are responsible for all sin and iniquity, from Adam down to the present time. Yes, there is nothing like a hobby. A fellow who is in possession of one of these is always happy. It does not cost anything to keep one and you can take a ride any time. If I was a republican, versed in politics and understood the working of political intrigue, as many of them claim to understand, I would be ashamed to keep bobbing up every few days about high protective tariff, when there is nothing in it. For the present the question is practically dead and it will take more than a Major McKinley to cause its resurrection. Mr. McKinley will not get the Presidential chair on that issue. The farmer, the working man and the poor in the camp of Israel are now claiming their share of the money of this country as well as the manufacturers and trusts and combines. And the money question must and will come to the front, in fact it is here now and is here to stay until after the campaign of 1896. I know the moneyed class and many leading papers of the country are trying to crowd the money question into the background, but on this they will not win. That question is with the people to stay until after the next Presidential election or until it is settled by legislation or international agreement. The ultimatum in politics must now be money. High protective tariff has died a natural death. Some of the republican papers say the rise in leather, sugar and kerosene is all on account of the Wilson tariff bill. The common school boy knows better than that. Who puts a corner on our staple productions? Every school boy who has got as far as the rule of three in mental arithmetic knows that it is trusts and combines that put the prices up and water their stock at their will and the Wilson tariff bill has no more to do with it than does a Chinese god. Many of the republicans have played that old high protection tariff tune so long they can't play anything else.

Raise More Potatoes.

What's the matter with the American farmers that they do not raise enough potatoes to supply the demand in the United States? It may be news to many that they do not, but the statistican of the agricultural department in his monthly report for April shows this to be the case. We import something like six million bushels a year, from Great Britain and Canada, as well as smaller amounts from Holland, Belgium and Germany.

Of course we export potatoes also, but the imports exceed the exports of the toothsome tuber. Within the past ten years we have imported 24,000,000 bushels more than we exported; for which we paid over $9,000,000. This very tidy sum should have gone into the pockets of our own farmers. Now that there is such a narrow margin of profit in wheat raising, why do not some of our wheat farmers turn part of their acreage into potato fields? There is more money in the crop than in wheat. Perhaps, however, the fact that potatoes require more attention than wheat, especially in the matter of keeping the Colorado beetles from destroying the plants, may explain the disinclination of our farmers to raise potatoes.—Toledo Blade.

Twenty Six Disappear After a Fire at a State School.

Slippery Rock, Pa., May 13.—The boys' dormitory of the state reform school here was totally destroyed by fire this morning at 5 o'clock. It was a three story frame building and 250 boys were sleeping there when the fire was discovered. Those on the first floor escaped without trouble. Fire on the stairways cut off any means of escape from the top floor. The escapes were not adequate to admit the escape of all and many jumped into blankets. Others slid down ropes. So far 26 of the boys are missing, but it is supposed they will all be accounted for by tomorrow, as a number are reported to have left for their homes immediately after the fire. The loss was $25,000, partly insured.—Minneapolis Times.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

During the last few days a cold wave has swept over this part of the country, accompanied by rain wind and frost. Hardly think the frost has done any serious damage, but the cold wave has caused a shrinkage in real estate.

The James Personette school at Maple Plain closed last Saturday. Mr. Personette gave general satisfaction as a teacher and can get a good recommendation from the school board in the Maple Plain School Dist.

The Armstrong school will close in three or four weeks.

The prospects for a good crop were never much better at this time of the year. A good many of the farmers have planted corn, but the planting will not all be finished up before the last of this week or the first of next.

Mr. Hardt says Maple Plain will have some needed improvements soon, in addition to what has already been made. Mr. Hardt has in front of the Post Office a fine posy bed, with ships sailing overhead. The Cleveland House has a new sign, arched over the sidewalk, that reads "hotel". Mr. E. Conover has been putting his house in order, putting on paint, etc. Mr. Hardt says bids are open for the painting of the city scales. John Beer is selling lumber, hardware, etc. What about that old well in front of E. A. Conover's store? The village better let the contract for filling that up. It looks bad in the daytime.

South Maple Plain is improving and lots have gone up 20 per cent.

THE GREAT WAR SERIES.

SHENANDOAH

A Story of Sheridan's Great Ride.

BY J. P. TRACY.

This is one of the most fascinating stories ever emanating from the pen of an American author, and is hailed with delight by all who have read it. It is rapidly becoming very popular and is creating a furore wherever introduced. It is a love story pure and simple—founded on the great achievements of Sheridan in the Shenandoah Valley during the late civil war, and the descriptions of the Battle of Winchester and of Sheridan's Great Ride are here given as seen by an eye-witness. This is truly a wonderful book. The next number is still better and more good things are to follow. All old soldiers, their wives and children will read this great book and enjoy it. The book contains 224 pages, printed on fine paper, handsomely illustrated, and bound in illuminated cover. Published by the Novelist Publishing Co., 61 Beekman St., New York City, and sold throughout the United States and Canada for the low price of 25 cents. Newsdealers handle.

Woman's Column.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

Always take time to do good. You have just as much time as anyone else. See that you use it for the uplifting of humanity. He who lives to himself will make a failure of life. He will not only lose much that is good and helpful but he will stint his own soul and it will be so shriveled and reduced in size as to be of little value to him and none whatever to other people. The selfish man makes his own coffin, digs his own grave and few mourn his departure.

A writer of proverbs says, "There is little or no patriotism in politics." If this be true it shows a lamentable state of affairs, and explains why we are in such a low condition as a nation. Our politics ought to be chuck full of patriotism and every good citizen should do his part to cleanse our politics of the filth which now begrimes them, and bring about as speedily as possible a change for the better.

Farmers Lend A Hand.

St. Paul, Minn., May 3.—(Special)—In local option contests the saloonists have made a telling point of the alleged fact that many farmers will trade where they can purchase liquor. The force of this argument is being broken in this state by securing a manifesto from farmers who are opposed to license. Two years ago some of the business men of Willmar, being appealed to to use their influence against license replied that while they personally had no use for saloons their country patrons desired them. The no-license men immediately circulated through the surrounding country a petition to the business men of Willmar to close the saloons. When five hundred signatures had been secured the signers appointed a committee to wait upon the business men to present the petition and still further make known their views. This was done in a most impressive manner. In fact they gave the knights of the counter to understand that if they cared more for shekels than for the lives and characters of the sons of their patrons, the latter would not feel obliged to go out of their way to fill their tills.

This was an argument not to be resisted and the effect was apparent at the ensuing election. Sacred Heart, Winnebago City, and other places have since employed the same tactics.

There lies before your correspondent a printed petition, with 200 signatures attached, to the citizens of Rushford, Whalen and Lanesboro, Fillmore county. Printed copies of both the petition and the list of names were extensively distributed. The petition reads as follows:

"Aware of the terrible consequences of the liquor traffic, not only for the towns where license is granted but also for the people in the surrouding country, we do hereby petition our friends and fellow-citizens of Rushford, Whalen and Lanesboro, to vote the saloons out of their respective towns. By so doing and by not permitting any "blind pig" in their midst the temptation of drinking would be removed from our market places to mutual good both for the town and the country.

"We do hereby also declare, that we prefer to trade where neither saloons nor "blind pigs" is supported. With greetings and in hope that you will consider and comply with our request, we remain, etc."

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.
Square Type.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, and soft tall, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the nobler sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with it, write, send for a specimen copy (free), and you will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of the whole family.

MARIETTA HOLLY, who is known as "Josiah Allen's Wife," resides in the ancestral house where five generations of Hollys have lived. The house is in Jefferson county, N. Y., close to Lake Ontario. It is here that "Josiah Allen's Wife" does all the writing that has made her so famous.

AMONG the Turks bath money forms an item in every marriage contract, the husband engaging to allow his wife a certain sum for bathing purposes. If it be withheld she has only to go before the cadi and turn her slipper upside down. If the complaint be not then redressed it is ground for divorce.

SOME misunderstanding exists as to the meaning of the word "tael," in which the Chinese indemnity was ordered paid. The "tael" is not a coin, but a weight. It varies in value according to the price of silver. In Peking at the present time one tael is equal to $1.50 in Mexican silver dollars or 75 cents in American gold.

THE devastation caused by the recent bursting of the reservoir at Bouzy, France, was greater than was at first supposed. At least 130 lives were lost, and more than 200 families were homeless. The disaster was so similar to the Johnstown flood in this country as to excite comment, and, like the catastrophe in this country, it teaches the lesson that the masonry of a large reservoir dam should be the strongest that can be built by man.

A NEWSPAPER train on the Pennsylvania road made the run from Philadelphia to Atlantic City the other day in 45:95 minutes. The distance is 58.30 miles. The average speed was at the rate of 76.50 miles, and the fastest mile was made in 41 seconds, or at the rate of 87.8 miles. It would seem, says the Minneapolis Journal, as if his debts could hardly overtake a man traveling at that speed, and perhaps that is one reason the passengers were confined to newspaper men.

A NEW YORK court has virtually decided that bronze paint is a more decent covering for limbs of "living statuary" than tights. It is stated that in some of the Asiatic countries the natives wear tattoo-marks in place of clothing, and it is regarded as sufficient. A garment tattooed on the skin is waterproof and will last a life-time. If it were not for the severity of our climate this, under the New York decision, would be an economical solution of the "nothing to wear" problem.

SHEPHERDS on Mount Massico, in the north of Mondragone, have met a terrible fate. There is a large cavern in the mountain which they were in the habit of using as a refuge for themselves and their flocks in time of bad weather. Eleven shepherds from the town of Sora had gathered together in the cave when a large quantity of earth, which had been loosened by the recent heavy rains, and in which huge stones and pieces of rock were imbedded, fell upon them. Eight of the men were terribly injured and either died on the spot or succumbed to their injuries before help arrived.

SUPPOSE a Burmese husband and wife quarrel and determine to separate. The wife—who always does all the marketing—goes out and buys two little candles of equal length, which are made especially for this use. She and her husband sit down on the floor and light them simultaneously. One candle stands for him, the other for her. The one whose candle burns out first rises and goes out of the house forever, with nothing but what he or she may have on. The one whose candle has survived the longest takes everything. So the divorce and division of the property are settled.

THE fearful draft made upon the population of France by its wars during the last hundred years has been shown by a publication just issued by Dr. Lagneau, member of the Academy of Medicine of Paris. From his figures it appears that the wars of the first republic cost France 2,122,402 men. From 1801 to Waterloo cost 3,157,398 more. In the Crimea 95,615 succumbed; in Italy 48,678, in China 950, and in Cochin China 48 per 1,000. The second empire cost France 1,600,000 soldiers. According to Dr. Lagneau's tables the century from 1795 to 1895 witnessed the death of 6,000,000 French soldiers.

Last year the deficit was $69,803,260, making the aggregate deficiency since July 1, 1893, $120,208,147.

BY the explosion of a boiler the 14th, in a saw mill near Perryville, Pa., five men were killed and three fatally injured, two of whom have since died. The names of those killed outright are: Claude English, James Mowers, Eugene Merrick, Lyman Perry, Charles Grover. Cable Converse, who was badly scalded, and Albert De Grayet, who was fearfully mangled, died a few hours after the accident.

EVERY store in Pulaski, Io., was burglarized the night of the 13th. The burglars evidently had a couple teams to carry off their plunder.

PEACE PROCLAIMED.

The Mikado of Japan Issues an Imperial Edict.

He Yielded to the Demands of the Powers in Order That Enduring Peace Might Prevail—Admiral Ito to Command the Navy.

LONDON, May 15.—A dispatch to the Central News from Tokio says that an imperial decree has been issued setting forth that the envoys of Japan and China have completed the task entrusted to them of negotiating a treaty of peace between the two countries. The decree, after stating the conditions of peace agreed upon, says that Russia, Germany and France advised Japan that the permanent retention by her of the Liao Tung peninsula would not conduce to lasting peace in the orient and urged the retrocession of that territory to China. The decree then continues:

"We have always been anxious to establish and maintain peace. Our object in the recent war was to found an enduring peace. We believe that Russia, France and Germany are imbued with the same feeling. Therefore we will not insist upon the retention of the Liao Tung peninsula. We do not desire to raise fresh trouble, increasing the calamities of our people, or to obstruct the expansion of our country by deterring a restoration of the blessings of peace. China has shown regret for her breach of friendship, thus justifying before the world Japan's action. Japan will comply with the desires of Russia, France and Germany. The manner in which the Liao Tung peninsula will be restored to China will be arranged by China and Japan.

"Now that this treaty of peace has been duly ratified and the ratifications exchanged, our former friendship with China is restored and the ties attaching us to neutral countries are made closer. Let our officials and people keep this steadily in view."

The dispatch adds that Admiral Ito has been appointed chief of the navy department in room of Admiral Viscount Kabayama Sukenori, who has been selected to go to Formosa to formally annex the island, of which he will be the viceroy. Admiral Kabayama will be accompanied to Formosa by Mizume Jus, chief secretary of the lower house of the Japanese diet, who had been appointed head of the civil administration of Formosa.

A LATE NIP.

Jack Frost Leaves His Mark Upon Early Vegetables and Small Fruit.

Farmers in many states have been put to considerable loss and inconvenience from the heavy frost of Saturday night (May 11). Such reports are coming in from Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin and Ohio. Four inches of snow fell in the Black Hills (Ia.) Friday, and water at Jefferson froze. Vegetables, small fruits and small grains all suffered.

On the 13th reports from northern Michigan told of 20 inches of snow at Mancelona and 7 to 10 inches at Traverse City. Thermometer at Oshkosh, Wis., stood at freezing point, with a light fall of snow. Inestimable damage resulted from frost to early vegetation and small fruit throughout Iowa. The United States weather bureau reports a killing frost at Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Columbus, Parkersburg, W. Va., and Chattanooga, Tenn. Entire grape crop was ruined in the Chautauqua grape belt of New York. A gale on Lake Michigan blowing a the rate of 40 or 50 miles an hour put many vessels in danger.

HASELTON TALKS OF MEADE.

Says the Admiral Made False Representations to the Venezuelans.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—A phase of the important pending question between England and Venezuela, in which the United States has intervened to ask arbitration, is involved in the demand of the state department for the resignation of United States Minister Haselton on serious charges made by Admiral Meade. The charges are in effect that Mr. Haselton had been guilty of drunkenness during an occasion of the visit of the United States squadron, and that he left most of the duties of his position to be performed by his private secretary.

Minister Haselton regards the charges as inspired by pique, and as an evidence of this he cites political representations of a direct and indirect character, by which, he says, Admiral Meade sought to impress the Venezuelan government and public that the visit of the United States squadron was something more than a courtesy and involved assurances that the United States was about to lend the strength of its navy to maintain Venezuela against Great Britain.

TWENTY-SIX ARE MISSING.

Fire in a State Normal School at Slippery Rock, Pa.

SLIPPERY ROCK, Pa., May 14.—The boys' dormitory of the state normal school here was totally destroyed by fire Monday morning at 5 o'clock. It was a three-story frame structure, and 250 boys were sleeping there when the fire was discovered. Those on the first floor escaped without any trouble. Fire on the stairways cut off all means of escape from the top floor. The fire-escapes were not adequate to admit of the escape of all, and many jumped into blankets. Others slid down ropes. So far twenty-six of the boys are missing, but it is thought they will all be accounted for, as a number are reported to have left for their homes immediately after the fire. The loss is about $25,000, partly insured.

Schnaubelt Is Traced.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13.—Rudolph Schnaubelt, the fierce-looking, heavy-jawed anarchist who threw the bomb in the Haymarket nine years ago, has been in California for at least a year. He was seen in Vallejo, 30 miles from this city, less than two weeks ago, and it is believed that he is either hiding in that place now or is en route for Rio de Janeiro, where he lived until the outbreak of the recent revolution.

It Will Stand.

NEW YORK, May 13.—The Sun's Washington special says that at the consultation of justices of the United States supreme court, Saturday, Justice Jackson voted with Justices Brown, White, Harlan and Shiras to sustain constitutionality of the income tax law, and the vote when announced May 20 will stand 5 to 4 in favor of the law.

Iowa Silver Democrats to Meet.

DES MOINES, Ia., May 13.—A call has been put in circulation throughout the state for a democratic silver convention at Des Moines June 6, the day following the the conference already announced of free silver men of all parties under the auspices of the Central Bimetallic league.

THE MONEY DISCUSSION.

Cherry Replies to Morton—Judge Vincent Says "Coin" Errs.

DENVER, Col., May 10.—James A. Cherry has mailed a reply to the letter addressed to him by Secretary Morton, given to the public on Tuesday. He informs the secretary that his letter has not given him the information on the silver question he had hoped it would. It does not make it clear that values cannot be affected by legislation, whereas it has seemed to him that legislation could affect values both locally and generally. Mr. Cherry continues:

"Did the fall of silver from 1873 to 1893 cause the legislation of 1873? You ask what sent silver down in 1893 to eighty-four cents an ounce. Surely the fall in its value was not the cause of legislation that preceded it. It was the effect of it. Again, the senate of the United States passed a bill in 1891 which provided for the free coinage of silver in this country. It was believed that the bill would pass the house and probably be signed by President Harrison and become a law. Silver jumped within a week from about 94 cents an ounce to $1.17 an ounce. That rise, remember, was not confined to this country. It made a corresponding jump in Europe. We cannot get confused over the proper place to put 'cause and effect' in this instance.

"Make silver into money, give it all its old uses and there will be a demand for it. And what a demand! How men would work and sweat and risk for it, and what joy and good it would bring the world! You coin it, Mr. Morton, and give it these uses and I will furnish the demand.

"Everything is now measured in gold, and that famous yardstick of yours and Mr. Carlisle's is getting too long. The producer doesn't get good measure for his products, the debtor falls before such a measure and the laborer cannot live when his labor is measured by it, and the stick is growing and desolation keeping up with it.

"The silver countries on account of gold appreciation are commencing to do all of their own manufacturing. With the loss of our manufacturing supremacy our commercial supremacy is in danger.

"These facts, when they are understood, are likely to cause a financial revolution, unless it is made clear that it is not due to a mistake in our financial legislation. Send more light."

CHICAGO, May 10.—As referee of the bet made by W. S. Forrest with John P. Hopkins three weeks ago ex-Judge William A. Vincent has decided in favor of Mr. Forrest, to the effect that "Coin" errs in stating that silver was the unit of value from 1792 to 1873, and that the unit was both gold and silver, 371¼ grains being the quantity of silver and 24¾ grains being the quantity of gold which were to equally express the measure and value of the unit adopted Mr. Vincent gave out his decision Wednesday. It is quite an exhaustive review of the subject.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Senator Mitchell, of Wisconsin, who has just returned from a visit to his state, says he is compelled to confess there is a greater free silver sentiment there than he supposed. A recent financial publication presented the arguments in favor of the free coinage of silver was being read, he said, on all sides, and was having a wonderful influence over the people. Men he had hitherto thought sound are now advocating the doctrine expounded in that book. Still, he believed both parties would do the right thing by the time the elections came around and that sound money would prevail in the land. Senator Mitchell said his impression was that the national democratic convention would support a free silver plank in its platform, while it was probable that the republicans would content themselves with a statement emphasizing their friendliness for silver and its coinage at a ratio to be established by international agreement.

DENVER, Col., May 15.—Following the lecture of ex-Congressman Bland in this city, the following editorial published in the Denver Times (rep.) attracted considerable attention:

"When Senator Teller announced that he had cast his last vote for any presidential candidate who was opposed to free silver or lukewarm in its interest, he did it with the knowledge that the republican party of Colorado stood as one man at his back. It is free coinage or disruption for the national republican party in 1896. Which will you choose?"

THURSTON RECALLED.

Secretary Gresham's Note to Hawaiian Government Received at Honolulu.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—Hawaiian advices received Thursday morning from Honolulu dated May 2, per steamer Mariposa, are as follows: The letter demanding the recall of Minister Thurston is here, and was read to the executive session of the councils yesterday afternoon. This letter had been to Hong Kong. It went past Honolulu in a bag with a couple of hundred others. The fault lies with the post office at San Francisco.

Gresham's letter is dated February 21 last, and in strong language stated that Thurston is no longer personally acceptable to the administration of Washington as Hawaiian minister. It is definitely settled that Thurston will not return to Washington. He has resigned the office, his resignation to take effect when his successor has been appointed.

BRADSTREET ON TRADE.

All Signs Point to Continuance of the Business Revival.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Bradstreet's review of trade conditions and prospects is briefly outlined as follows:

"The present week brings distinct and, in some instances, even more pronounced evidences of improvement in business, notwithstanding the increase of the wave of industrial discontent and strikes for higher wages, always the accompaniment of an upward tendency to prices.

"Pittsburgh announces no material changes, the business community waiting the anticipated larger volume of trade. At the west previous gains are maintained and confidence in an enlarged volume of business increases. At such centers as Cleveland, Cincinnati, Louisville Detroit and Milwaukee there are no marked changes. But at Chicago and St. Louis wholesale dealers report a volume of business larger than last week and than in the week a year ago.

"The south sends more encouraging reports than for some time. Larger Pacific coast cities continue to report heavy wheat exports, an outlook for large crops of wheat and fruit and higher ocean grain freights. Better mercantile collections are noticeable."

SAYS HE IS BLACKLISTED.

And Therefore William J. O'Shea Sues Railroad Companies for $10,000.

TOLEDO, O., May 14.—William J. O'Shea has commenced three suits for damages, in the sum of $10,000 in each case, against the Lake Shore, Ohio Central and Wabash railroad companies. The suits are based on the allegation that as a result of his discharge and boycott during the American Railway union strike and his subsequent blacklisting he is unable to secure employment on any road. He was for a long time in the employ of the Lake Shore road. He avers that his name is on the blacklist books of the roads and that he has seen it there. The case will be watched with great interest in the railroad world, for should it be successful a hundred others would soon follow.

That Tired Feeling

It is remarkable how many people there are who have That Tired Feeling and seem to think it is of no importance or that nothing need be done for it. They would not be so careless if they realized how really serious the malady is. But they think or say "It will go off after a while."

We do not mean the legitimate weariness which all experience after a hard day's work, but that all-gone, worn-out feeling which is especially overpowering in the morning, when the body should be refreshed and ready for work. It is often only the forerunner of nervous prostration, with all the horrible suffering that term implies. That Tired Feeling and nervousness are sure indications of an impure and impoverished condition of the blood. The craving of the system for help can only be met by purifying the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the one great blood purifier. It expels all impurities, gives vitality and strength, regulates the digestion and makes the weak strong.

"In the spring I felt very much run down—no strength or appetite. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and my appetite improved and I did not have that tired feeling." H. R. SQUIRES, East Leverett, Mass.

COLONY DESTROYED BY BEARS.

An Island Where a Settlement of Russians Was Wiped Out.

From the quarterdeck of the United States revenue cutter Corwin, lying off Hall's island, at the northerly end of St. Matthew's island, in Behring sea, the captain and several officers were looking toward the shore. Douglass, the pilot, had just pointed out something under the cliffs that looked like low, half-fallen walls, and said they were ruined barrabaras. The barrabara is the Aleutian house, built half underground. Some of the gentlemen wished to explore the interior of the island in hopes of finding signs of valuable minerals.

"Well, I don't know, sir," said the pilot. "I wouldn't care much to go at this time of year, unless the party was large and well armed. Any one can see from here what a forbidding country it is, and it's sure to get worse when you reach it. It's chock full of bears, and in the breeding season they're mighty ugly."

"How does it happen that there are so many polar bears on St. Matthew's and Hall's islands?" asked the captain. "This must be about the southern limit of their range."

"Well, I suppose, sir, they come down from the arctic on the field ice, following the seal and the walrus. The winter pack reaches way south of here, and the bears make homes on the island among rocks and caves. They breed here, and as many more come every year from the north they naturally get plenty. So long as they find enough to eat they won't trouble anybody unless cornered, and once food gets scarce they'll tackle anything. One look at what's left of those barrabaras has always been enough exploration for me in these parts.

"There's a sad story about those old houses, sir," continued the pilot. "A good many years ago the Russians thought they would form a settlement here. So they sent a ship with I don't know just how many people to make a start. No doubt the settlers were a hard lot—convicts of one sort or another—the Russians often made such use of their hard citizens. But that's neither here nor there. They were human beings and were put on shore right here, and they built or dug, whichever you like to say, these barrabaras. Provisions for a year were given them, and they were told to skirmish around and see what they could do in the hunting line. Then the ship sailed away, promising to call round next year and see how they were getting along.

"And so she did, but the settlers were not doing anything that the visitors could see. They hoisted no signal and made no sign of life at all, and when a party from the ship landed a grewsome sight it was they saw. The tops were ripped off the barrabaras, and everything was knocked about, not a living thing could they find. Some moldy provisions were left and, worst of all, some human bones; not whole skeletons lying as though the people had been starved or had died of disease, but just human bones spread about the floors, and some of 'em outside on the ground.

"Not a bit of writing was found; nothing at all to say how or when the trouble came. Water was plenty and provisions, too, and only the bears could account for the wiping out of the little colony. They must have corraled the settlers in the dead of winter, when the pack ice is all around the island, and hunger makes 'em fierce, and then they must have torn off the roofs of the huts and made short work of the people. The ship sailed away and the Russians never tried to colonize the island again."—N. Y. Sun

A NEVER-MIND FELLOW.

I never mind the weather—if it's spring time, many a tree
Is shakin' down its blossoms in a shower over me;
An' I know the girls air goin' where the houn-eysuckles grow,
An' I see the rivers flowin' an' I'm glad I'm fur from snow.

I never mind the weather—if it's summer, well, I seem
To pull myself together an' jest dream, an' dream, an' dream!
For the roses roll around me in a perfect foam o sea,
An' the good Lord runs the weather—an' it's all alike to me!

I never mind the weather—if it's winter, well, I see
An' I know the kettle's steamin', an' I know the fire's bright,
An' I see blue ayes a-beamin', an' I'm all at home at night!

A FAMOUS FIGHT.

A Story of the Early Days in Leadville.

No man in Leadville in the early mining days enjoyed a more deserved popularity than little Bob Brierly. He was a bright fellow, genial and sociable in his disposition, warm in his attachments and courteous and obliging to everybody. Nothing was known of his antecedents except that he had been driven west by domestic difficulties, had settled down in Leadville, opened a law office, and had rapidly acquired about all the practice that was afloat in those days. Hank McLaughlin lived in an adjoining camp, where he enjoyed the reputation of a desperado, and was a frequent visitor at Leadville. He was a big, savage fellow, the very opposite of Bob Brierly, who was below the medium size, delicate and gentlemanly. From the first the two seemed to hate each other. There was a natural antipathy between them. Instinct taught each to see in the other a deadly and dangerous enemy.

One day McLaughlin struck the little mining town in an ugly humor and proceeded to make himself very numerous, and people knew before he had been there two hours that trouble was brewing between him and Brierly. They had met up the country some time before the discovery of rich silver rock in the Leadville district and came very near having a difficulty then. The fact appeared to be that McLaughlin, who was anxious to be thought a fighter, was insanely jealous of Brierly's well-established reputation in that respect. The first night of his advent into camp he got on a jamboree, flourished his revolver and swore that no man who wore a "biled" shirt and a "plug" hat could make him take water. As Bob was the only one in town who sported such evidences of civilization as a white shirt and a high silk hat, of course all knew that Hank meant him. But Bob only smiled on the riotous demonstrations of the big rough, and quietly walked off and went to bed. From that hour, however, the town felt that something serious was going to happen. Strangely enough, in a place where shooting scrapes were of daily occurrence, Leadville got excited all over at the prospect of a quarrel between Bob Brierly and Hank McLaughlin. The death-dealing merits of the men were discussed freely, and money was wagered on the final results. Notwithstanding McLaughlin's size and bloodthirsty talk, Brierly was the popular favorite. The little fellow had won his spurs in many a hard-fought scrimmage, and many of the miners were ready to bet that he would kill his opponent or drive him out of camp.

Leadville had among its cosmopolitan population in those days quite a sprinkling of men who believed that the right way for gentlemen to settle their difficulties was according to the code. Street fights and barroom encounters were well enough in their way, but the proper thing was a duel according to the code of honor. Leadville bore testimony to the handiwork of these gentlemen in this respect. Time and again had her high-toned and pugnacious citizens, actuated by the true spirit of chivalry, gone out and shot each other in the most approved fashion. Why not arrange a regular affair between McLaughlin and Brierly? With Bob there was no trouble, and he at once cheerfully acquiesced in the proposal of his friends to avoid the vulgar barbarity of a street affray or a saloon encounter.

McLaughlin, however, did not take the thing kindly, so it was said, and gave his officious interviewers such a stormy reception as came near starting a riot in the camp. For this reason, to the sincere regret of not a few, the proposed duel had to be abandoned, and the town was left in a feverish condition of expectation, impatiently waiting for the fray. Fortunately, they had not long to wait. A difficulty among some miners led to a lawsuit before Judge Stead, a judicial autocrat of the place, and Bob Brierly appeared as attorney for one of the parties. Happily, or unhappily, as the fact might be viewed from different standpoints, Hank McLaughlin was a witness against the side represented by Brierly, and when this condition of affairs became generally known it was in the air that the time had come for one or both to pass in his checks, as the sports phrased it.

When the belligerent witness took the stand all eyes were turned on him. With an angry glance at Brierly and a suggestive hitch at his hip pocket, where the handle of a big six-shooter could be plainly seen, he proceeded with his testimony and for a time got along smoothly enough. The cross examination, however, was too much for the witness. Repeatedly he was admonished by the justice to answer the questions and avoid insulting personalities. Still he was ugly, cross and abusive and indulged in a vicious sneer when Brierly quietly remarked that nothing he might say could make him forget he was in a court of justice. At last, losing all patience and finding restraint next to impossible, Brierly insisted that the court should take a recess. Immediately on adjournment, the crowd poured into "The Carbonate," directly across the street, and filled the saloon to its utmost capacity.

While the long line of thirsty souls were standing at the bar drinking or waiting to be served, a cry of "look out" was heard, and instantly the sharp and loud reports of two revolvers scattered the crowd in all directions. Who drew first none could say, but the little one evidently got in the first shot, for McLaughlin was seen to stagger and put his hand to his breast. He did not flinch, however, and both men continued to fire with great rapidity. At this critical juncture something was noticed to be wrong with Brierly's pistol. It would not revolve, and in working with it the chamber dropped out and rolled on the floor. Again McLaughlin's pistol rang out, and a bullet hole through his antagonist's hat showed that the effect of the first shot had not destroyed his aim, although he staggered around the room like a drunken man. Coolly stooping down, Brierly picked up the chamber of his revolver, deliberately replaced it and began firing again.

While fixing his weapon he had got into a corner at one end of the bar or counter and McLaughlin took a similar position at the other end. The fire now raked the counter from end to end, to the danger and horror of a number of spectators who had taken refuge from the flying bullets behind the bar at the beginning of the fight. With the crack of the pistols was heard the wild cry of some poor devil in the line of fire. The shriek and fall of one of the number, a quiet, inoffensive German, who had nothing to do with the affray, put an end to the bloody business. The proprietor of the Carbonate, now a well-known citizen of Denver, jumped across the counter and seized Brierly with an iron grasp, while others caught McLaughlin and wrenched the revolver from his hands. The result of the shooting was the death of the unfortunate German, shot through the heart, the fearful wounding of McLaughlin, who was sinking fast from a serious flesh wound in the breast, and a slight flesh wound received by Brierly.

The barroom duel over, Leadville resumed its normal condition. The fight was eminently satisfactory. Both men were game, but the little one had come out on top. Brierly was well known throughout the sage-brush country. He was a prime favorite with everybody, and no bigger heart ever beat in a little body. On more than one occasion he had talked over his turbulent life and the exciting scenes in which he had been an actor. No mention had ever been made of his early life, but a tiny miniature of a fair-haired, blue-eyed maiden, which he always carried next his heart, might have told its sad story of love and sorrow, hope and despair. Few men ever knew how thoroughly Brierly despised, in his latter years, the reputation of a fighting man.

Such a reputation, he would bitterly remark, is a curse to anyone. Every reckless fool who wanted to get his name up as a desperado thinks he is in duty bound to have a difficulty with you, while you are expected to resent every grievance, real or imaginary, with the knife or pistol. "If I had to live my life over again, nothing short of absolute dishonor would make me fight anybody." His reflections on the past were evidently not of a pleasant character, and there can be no doubt that he deeply and sincerely regretted many events in his reckless career. It was singular how so quiet and gentlemanly a little fellow could get into so many ugly scrapes. His early griefs weighed upon his mind, and like many another gallant fellow he sought forgetfulness in strong drink. Doubtless this had much to do with his numerous deadly quarrels, for few men were more quiet and inoffensive when sober. Poor Brierly! With him life's fitful fever is over, and he sleeps beneath the pinon bushes, on the carbonate hills, his secret buried with him. Peace to his ashes!—Washington Post.

An American Artist's Experience with King Ludwig.

In the Blumenstrasse of Munich, where artists from all parts of the world congregate, some curious stories are still told of the late King Ludwig, who committed suicide while insane, but who had apparently many flashes of wit and wisdom in his madness. He one day expressed approval of the technique of an American artist and directed him to bring his best work to the castle of Linderhof at once.

Mr. Dash repaired with two canvasses to the royal residence, full of eager expectation, as the king, it was said, paid enormous sums for pictures that pleased his fancy.

He surveyed the pictures in silence for a moment and then turned to the painter.

"You are an American?"

"Yes, your majesty."

"I have heard that upon your continent is every variety of scenery; great mountains, mighty rivers, tropical forests, Arctic glaciers?"

"It is true, sir."

"And you have there people of every race and condition—Indians, slaves, the most beautiful women in the world? And you bring to me pictures of our German peasants? Bah! Out with you!"

The luckless artist beat a hasty retreat, wondering whether he or the king had made a mistake in the purpose of art.—Youth's Companion.

Her Euphemism.

He was about the most verdant young man she had ever met, and the more he talked to her the more he impressed himself upon her in that regard until she could restrain her expression of appreciation no longer.

"Do you know," she said, with charming candor, "that I like you?"

"I didn't know it, miss," he replied, awkwardly, "but as you have told me so, I am sure I feel very highly flattered."

"Well, I do, and I couldn't help telling you so."

"May I ask why?" he said, with a pink white flush shawing itself on his cheeks.

"I presume it is because I am such a thoroughly Irish girl," and he didn't know what she meant, until he told the story to his roommate, and that gentleman suggested the national color of Ireland as a probable explanation.—Detroit Free Press.

Needless Anxiety.

'Way back in the 'thirties there lived in Broadalbin, Fulton county, N. Y., a shiftless, improvident fellow whose only occupation was to loaf at the corner store and talk about nothing, hours at a time, with the other sitters. One day a topic of considerable excitement was passed around the circle, over a new state law, just passed, giving to a man ten sheep, a cow and a team of horses, as exempt property for debt. This old fellow, who was indebted to everybody and owned not a dollar in the world, was in evident distress about the matter, and finally burst out: "What the deuce am I to do about it when I don't own these critters and nothing to buy 'em with?" The poor man thought the law obliged him to own them.—Judge.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Railway Lands.

Gov. Clough issued a proclamation which will soon throw open to settlement the old land grant of the state to the Hastings and Dakota Railway Company. The edict was made in accordance with the provisions of S. F. No. 375, passed by the last legislature, which directs that the governor shall relinquish the claim of the state to certain lands and surrender them to the United States. This act was passed for the very purpose for which it was used yesterday by the chief executive.

The lands in question comprise a considerable tract of valuable prairie, hill and dale along the rout of the Hastings and Dakota road, now in the hands of a receiver. They are a portion of a grant made to the state in the early 70's for the state to hold in trust and use in promoting its railroad interests as grants to railroad companies. In 1886 the Hastings and Dakota company was gived the grant in question to keep and to hold as its own under certain conditions. The railroad company failed to qualifiy, became insolvent and went into the hands of Russell Sage, the New York capitalist, who was appointed receiver. The state sued the company and Sage to quiet title to the land, and after a considerable length of time it won the case, and now the land will revert to the government, its original owner.

Illegal Fishermen.

An extensive capture of illegal fishermen with their outfits was made by S. F. Cullerton, executive agent of the fish and game commission, at Centerville. There were taken by Mr. Fullerton and his assistants 111 nets and large quantities of fish. Warrants have been issued for offenders in this regard in various places, and soon additional warrants will be issued for trespassers in Ramsey and Anoka counties.

The fish captured were of the finest, and the practice, it is said, has been going on for years, the Twin Cities being largely supplied by the transgressors. It is thought strange that the larger lakes, including White Bear lake, have not had their fish completely extracted long since, because of the systematic methods employed in the capture. The offenders wanted to know if the matter could not be fixed up in some way, as they alleged they had been in the practice of doing so for a long time in the past.

Changed The Name.

The Ozark flats, made famous, or rather notorious, by the fact that the principals in the Ging tragedy lived there, have been christened anew. Henceforth the building at Thirteenth street and Hennepin avenue, Minneapolis, will be known as the Hennepin flats, the name having been decided upon by the Eastern owners of the property. The former name from its unpleasant notoriety had become a "hoodoo" to the building as a residence property, and it is said that out of fifteen flats which the building contains but two are at present occupied. The property is considered one of the finest in the Twin Cities, and the change of name is expected to restore its popularity.

Bogus Checks.

The Northwestern Bank of Minneapolis was swindled out of $1,010 by a smooth individual, who got away with the money. A man called at the bank with a check for $645, purporting to be executed by Dunham & Eastman, and when told he would have to be identified said he would go and get the check O. K.'d. He soon returned with what seemed to be a proper indorsement and the check was paid. Later in the day he presented another check by the same firm for $365, which was paid without question. In a few hours after both checks were found to be forgeries.

Naval Cadets.

Eight candidates took examination at Winona for the Annapolis naval cadetship for the First district, the examination being conducted by Judge of Probate H. L. Auck and Hon C. A. Morey, while the physical inspection was made by Dr. E. D. Keyes. Eight candidates took the examinations: Geo. H. Pietke, Winona; William Lennahan, Winona; Henry Canfield, St. Charles; L. B. Sperry, Wasioja; Charles H. Lamberton, Winona; Richard W. Ramp, Dresbach.

News in Brief.

Abner Gorst was killed in a well at Oak Ridge. He was buried under six feet of earth and was dead when taken out five hours later.

Charles Amory and George Borshaw, while working in the boom in the bay at Duluth, were struck by lightning and killed.

In response to the offer of $2,000 in gold made by a Chicago publisher, to be given to authors of four best manuscripts, 641 contestants forwarded one story each. Miss Winnie Stevens, formerly of Anoka, won the second prize, $500, for a novel, "Love's Legacy."

Lyden B. Stevens, aged 73, while fishing from a boat in the lake at South Haven, fell into the water, from heart failure, and was drowned.

Adam Fisher was married to Miss Mary Helmsath at the Church of the Immaculate Conception in St. Cloud. The contracting parties were both born and raised in St. Cloud. The wedding was out of the ordinary, inasmuch as the bride is totally deaf and dumb, and the groom is nearly deaf.

Ben Whetson, of Clinton Falls met with a tragic death. The little fellow was in the mill of Henry & Lennon, and while there he went into the basement, where he somehow became entangled in the shaft of the water wheel. When found his body was a horrible sight. His limbs were broken in many places, and his brains were spattered over the adjoining woodwork.

Fire totally destroyed the main part of the Faribault rattan works. The loss is estimated from $25,000 to $50,000, with $16,000 insurance. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Mary Benson was commissioned postmistress at Centerville.

The Fergus Falls council has passed an ordinance keeping the Salvation army off the streets.

Andrew Wagner had a hearing at Anoka, and was bound over in $500 bonds. He is charged with attempting to wreck a passenger train on the Great Northern.

Supreme Court Reporter Charles C. Wilson, of Rochester, has resigned, because the legislature cut his salary down to $2,000.

The new flour mill at Brooten is burned down. It had just been running a week. Loss, $10,000; partly insured.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Chocolate Snaps: One pound of sifted sugar one pound of chocolate grated, mix together; beat the white of one egg and stir into the sugar and chocolate, continue to beat until it is a stiff paste. Sugar a white paper, drop the paste on it with a small spoon and bake in a slow oven.—Western Rural.

—New Orleans Indian Bread: Beat two eggs very light and add them alternately with a pint of fine white meal to a pint of sour milk or buttermilk; beat a level teaspoonful of baking soda into a little of the sour milk until it foams; stir this in the batter, beat well and bake in a quick oven.—Country Gentleman.

—Baptist Dip: Roll some light dough very thin, cut with a small biscuit cutter or in squares with a knife. Fry in hot lard to a light brown, remove with wire spoon and place in a colander that no fat may remain on them. Prepare cream or milk gravy as for common toast and immerse the cakes.—Orange Judd Farmer.

—Date Teacake: One-half cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, one egg, one cupful of milk, four cupfuls of flour, salt, three teaspoonfuls of baking-powder. Add last one cupful of chopped dates. Bake in long, shallow pans, and serve warm with butter, or with a liquid sauce for dessert.—Good Housekeeping.

—Potato Pie: Peel and grate one large white potato into a dish, add the juice and rind of one lemon, the beaten white of one egg, one teacup of white sugar, one cup cold water; pour this into a nice under crust and bake; when done have ready the beaten whites of three eggs, half cup powdered sugar, flavor with lemon, spread on the pie and return to the oven to harden.—Farmer's Voice.

—Egg-plant Preserve: This unique delicacy is very fine, and has the merit of being easily prepared. Pare and cut into slices half an inch thick, add pound for pound of sugar, and let it stand over night. Next morning put on over a rather slow fire, let it come to a boil, and cook slowly for several hours, until the slices are transparent. This very much resembles fig preserves, and is a good substitute.—Good Housekeeping.

—To Clean a Carpet: The carpet being first well shaken and free from dust, nail it down to the floor; then mix half a pint of bullock's gall with two gallons of soft water; scrub the carpet well with soap and the gall mixture; when perfectly dry it will look like new, as the colors will be restored to their original brightness. The brush used must not be too hard, but rather long in the hair, or it will rub up the nap and injure the carpet.—Leeds Mercury.

—Bread Griddle Cakes: Take one pint of stale bread crumbs, moisten with boiling milk, and soak over night, or until softened. Then mash the bread to a paste; add two eggs well beaten, a little salt, a cup of flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder and cold milk to thin them. Make them just as thin as they can be baked without sticking or tearing. Try a cake or two on a hot, greased griddle if you have any doubt. Or in the morning, add sour milk and soda, allowing half a teaspoonful of soda to a cup of sour milk. Bread cakes take longer to bake than other kinds.—Boston Budget.

SPRING HOUSECLEANING.

Some Practices in the Work Which Should Be Condemned.

By popular custom housecleaning is postponed in the spring till after the winter fires are put out. On most seasons this is too late. Every house after the long shut-in period of winter needs a thorough reorganizing and special cleaning. This should be done before warm days, and ought to be commenced as early as the middle of April, or as soon as the windows can be kept freely open while the rooms are being cleaned. Fires ought to be continued some time after housecleaning to thoroughly dry out the house, even if the weather is so warm that windows must be kept open for comfort. It is seldom safe to do away with winter fires before the middle of May in this locality, unless the living-rooms of the family are provided with fireplaces for use during the spring and fall months. The common practice of cleaning house, scrubbing paint and floors, hastily replacing carpets without fires to dry out the house, is to be strongly condemned. It is an invitation to miasmic colds and all the discomforts that come in their train. The sensible housekeeper begins by cleansing her garret and then looks over the cellar, and sees that both the cellar and all buildings near the house are thoroughly cleansed and whitewashed before the general cleaning of the living apartments of the house. All closets and stowaway places are next attacked, and every place where moth or buffalo bug may lurk must be looked over. The bedsteads must be taken apart and dusted and filled with Persian insect powder, merely as a precautionary measure. This work should be done as early as possibles in April, as during this month all insect life revives, and is hatched out for the season. If precautions are taken to rid the house of pests of this kind thus early in the season, there will be little trouble afterward. A month later the buffalo bug has gone into a papa state, and has accomplished all the mischief he is likely to do for the season, and other insects have become abundant enough to offer a formidable resistance to ordinary methods of extermination.

If this preliminary cleaning is done thoroughly and other rooms of the house are cleaned, one by one, as it is convenient, housecleaning need not be the affliction it so often is. It is true, where there is a large amount of whitewing and painting, it is often necessary to tear up several rooms at once in order to have the work done at a cheaper price by the job, but, except where this is the case, it is far better to do one, or at most two rooms, at once, and settle these completely before going further. It is true that carpet-cleaners like to have a large amount of work at once, but they do their work by the yard, so it is just as cheap to have the carpets cleaned by the room instead of by the house, as so often done. The first method can be put in force without any break in the regular family life, and those who are not immediately interested in the work will hardly realize what has been accomplished, except by the result. The other method interferes more or less with the comfort of every member of household, and has brought the season of house-cleaning under the just ban of man.—N. Y. Tribune.

Of a Little Girl.

Here is a little girl—
So sweet, so perfect sweet,
From every golden, wind-tossed curl,
Down to her slippered feet!
And even the rustle of her dress
Is unto me a sweet caress!

Here is a little girl—
So perfect sweet and pure,
That I do think the thought of her
Shall evermore endure!
And even her lightest footfall seems
To pass like music through my dreams!

Here is a little girl
Who in the storm and strife
Still sweetly whispers words of love
And tenderest words of life!
And even her lightest whisper falls,
A melody in memory's halls!

RENEWING THEIR YOUTH.

A Strange Story from a Nebraska Village.

The Villagers Excited Over the Increased Health and Vigor of the Older Inhabitants—The Experience of Two "Vets."

(From the World-Herald, Omaha, Neb.)

A World-Herald reporter was attracted by the evidence of renewed activity of some of the older inhabitants of the village of Florence, a suburb of Omaha, Neb., and enquired the cause. Mr. Andrew Finkenkeler, who was a member of Company B of the First Iowa Volunteers during the war, made the following explanation so far as he himself is concerned:

"In July, 1866, while my company was on the march through to Austin, Texas, I was attacked with rheumatism of the worst kind in one leg at Alexander, La. Being weak I was sunstruck and remained unconscious for several hours. Every summer since I have been unable to stand the heat of the sun, and have been compelled to give up my work. There was in my head a bearing down feeling which increased until it seemed my head would burst, and it caused a ringing in my ears, and palpitation of the heart set in, so that the slightest noise would set my heart thumping. Several times it has rendered me unconscious for from seven to ten hours at a time. In addition to this the rheumatism extended up my entire side until it drew my head down on my shoulder. I lost my strength and flesh and was totally unfit for work.

"For twenty-eight years I have consulted physicians and taken their prescriptions without deriving any material benefit. My ailments increased in intensity until I was assured that there was no hope for me. During last year I went into the butcher business, but the dampness from the ice used increased my rheumatic pains to such an extent that I was not only compelled to quit the business, but was confined to my house and bed for nearly six months.

"I had given up all faith of being a well man again, when in November last I read in the World-Herald a case of a man who had been entirely cured from the ailments from which I was suffering, by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. On November 28 I purchased a box. In a week I was astonished to know that I felt better than I had for six months past, and before I had used half a box I was sure that I had found a cure for my ailments. The ringing in my ears began to lessen in volume and finally left me. That was the first effect I experienced aside from an increased appetite. The pain from the rheumatism gradually left me, so that within one week from the time I took my first pill I was able to sit up in bed. On January 1st, I was able to go out and walk around a little. The palpitations of my heart entirely ceased. On February 9, I was so thoroughly cured that I accepted a position as night watchman in the Forest Lawn Cemetery, remaining out of doors from 6 P. M. until 6 A. M. I have gained in weight from 144 pounds which I weighed in November last, to 172 pounds which I weigh now.

Mr. R. W. Cowan, keeper of a general store at Florence, was also seen by the reporter. Mr. Cowan is also an old soldier, having been a member of the 144th Infantry, Company C, and later of Company M of the First Minnesota Cavalry. Mr. Cowan stated that he contracted chronic diarrhœa while he was in the army and has never until within the past few months, received any relief. He stated that he had taken the wonderful Pink Pills and was now almost thoroughly cured, so much so in fact that he has discontinued their use.

He was also paralyzed in the left side of his face, the mouth being drawn up at the left corner, and he was entirely unable to move the muscles of his forehead or to close his left eye. He states that he believes it is owing to the use of the Pink Pills that he has recovered the use of his left eye-lid, which, prior to his taking the pills, had been fastened down by a physician so that the sight would not be destroyed from the eye filling with dust, and ascribes the recovery to the Pink Pills. He has gained fifteen pounds in weight since last October, and feels healthier and stronger than at any time since the war. He intends to recommence using the pills with the expectation of a complete recovery from the paralysis.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, all forms of weakness, chronic constipation, bearing down pains, etc., and in the case of men will give speedy relief and effect a permanent cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

MENDING BOYS' CLOTHES.

A Method Which Helps in This Prosaic Work.

This is the time of year when mothers are wondering which will "go first," the boys' winter clothes or the winter, and requires a skill born of experience to manage without an expenditure which, reckoned by value received, is extravagance.

It pays to mend and to mend neatly, even in these days of cheap suits; and, though it may seem a waste of time and energy to patch and darn garments which cost but little, still the aggregate of these small savings, especially in a large family, forms an item of importance.

With trousers eternal vigilance saves many stitches and many clothes. If one can only forestall a break, a patch may be put inside so that it will hardly show. With knickerbockers, which are apt to split like the sleeves of the jacket at the hem, it is easy to take a neat seam if the break has not left ragged edges. Careful pressing is required for all cloth darning.

With jackets the points of wear are the elbows, the edge of the sleeves, and the front. The elbows may be mended like the trousers, by slipping a piece of cloth inside, between the lining and the cloth, and darning neatly. The edges may be turned in just far enough to hold and then sewn together by blind stitching. On dark cloth it is often possible, especially for the worn place on the front, to buttonhole stitch with coarse twist. Should any white still show, it may be inked occasionally.

Nearly all laundries takes orders for new bands for shirts, and the work is done so reasonable that it is hardly worth one's while to attempt it at home. But sometimes only one buttonhole of a shirt is broken. It is then practicable to set a piece into the band and make a new buttonhole without taking off the entire strip. The only caution necessary is that in cutting out the worn part in front it must be taken far enough back so that the joint will not show at the opening of the collar. The piece cut out should be ripped off the bosom and the new muslin seamed and turned over level with the band, so that no stitching will show.

Few mothers know how much may be done with tape. For the opening at the back of a shirt, for the shoulder straps of a little girl's guimpe, for a placquet hole, tape is invaluable. For a shirt, cut a piece not quite two inches long and sew it across the lower part of the opening at the back. This relieves the strain of a sudden jerk, such as all boys are apt to give.

"I despair of ever getting really fast black darning cotton," says one woman, "so I have taken to using cashmere mending wool for all hosiery. It does not make so neat a darn, but it is softer for the feet and it never loses color." The same authority declares in favor of darning flannels and flannelette garments in preference to patching them.

The comic papers are not far wrong when they ridicule the average woman for not knowing how to sew on buttons. It is often the simplest things of which we remain longest ignorant, because no one thinks it worth his while to tell us just how they should be done.

For buttons which are sown through and through, and on which there is great strain, such as those on children's waists, No. 16, or at least not finer than No. 20, cotton is needed. Linen thread is not available, because it requires a coarse needle, and that will not pass readily through the button. Double the cotton, place a pin across the top of the button and sew over it and through the holes, winding the cotton around the button underneath after each stitch. Thus you make an artificial shank, and when the pin is withdrawn there is enough thread to prevent it snapping when strained.

For coat buttons, whether lasting, bone or ivory, the best thing to use is coarse twist. If you can get tailor's twist, so much the better. Linen thread turns gray, and becomes brittle after a short time. Twist is the best for shoe buttons, and should always be used double.—N. Y. Times.

REVENGE.—De Bann—"I don't think the Gumbys liked that chafing-dish we gave them for a wedding present." Mrs. De Bann—"Why not?" De Bann—"I met Gumby today, and he invited us around to eat something they are going to cook in it."—Brooklyn Life.

DELANO DIARY

--Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—Dr. Niven's method of extracting teeth without pain is the latest and best. An application to the jaw is all. At Delano May 21 and 22.

—M. J. Borrill is putting the finishing touches on the painting of Pogrzeba's saloon and the Delano creamery. John does some good work in his line.

—Mr. Gutzwiller is having built a very elaborate foundation, on the corner of the alley and Bridge street, on his new real estate purchase. Some one has said it might be for a wine cellar.

—Billy Marble closed a three days engagement in Delano Wednesday night. He and his troupe give satisfaction wherever they appear. They promised to be in Delano again next fall.

—Some members of the old Delano Cornet Band have been blowing, evenings, at the City Hall lately. That's right boys. It is a good way to spend your evenings; and every first class village the size of this appreciate a good band.

—Since last Friday the weather has been quite cool. At night frosts have made their appearance, destroying tender vegetables and fruit. The thermometer has been below the freezing point several times; once down to 28 degrees above zero.

—The old Charley Eppel store has again changed hands, Hanseman & Kohler retiring and the old proprietor again assuming the reins. Since then the trade has fallen through and an assignment to Simon Weldelee been made, we understand.

—I. Gutzwiller was the only member of the School Board that voted against a secret session of that body last Saturday night. For once Ignatius was on the right side. People in the District have a right to know how public business is transacted. These star-chamber meetings, usually, are not what the patrons of the district desire.

—Milton Muckey, the city engineer, has manufactured a small engine, which he has on exhibition at the power house. The work on it was all done by Mr. Muckey. The engine itself is made of brass, while the base is moulded from babbit metal. Mr. M. tested it and found that it would run 690 revolutions a minute. It is a fine little machine.

—The Eagle, sometimes called the Buzzard, slings out one of her dirty, low down, insinuations against the GAZETTE, this week, and tries to convey to her readers a wrong impression. And the Old Bird hasn't yet acknowledged her misstatement, when she told those who read her items that she was the only Wright County paper to give the President's message the same week it was read to Congress. With evil minded people and Birds, perhaps nothing beats a well told lie, unless it is sticking to it.

—At the meeting of the Board of Education, held at the Council room Saturday evening, the board allowed a couple of small bills; discussed the finishing of the sign on the school house; then went into executive session, passing a resolution that the room be cleared, and no one but members of the School Board be allowed in the room, while they proceeded to hire teachers for the next year. They then elected teachers as follows: Principal, Charles S. Hawker; Grammar Department, Miss Mary Hagar; Intermediate, Miss Anna R. Quinn; Primary, Miss Irene Cheeley. Leaving the High School Department vacant for the present, to be supplied soon.

—Dr. Niven, May 21 and 22.

—Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—Third Street is being graded. Our village is daily assuming metropolitan airs.

--Last Fair Day was about as noisy as others, though there were fewer people in town.

—A couple of fountains for watering horses, are being put up by the village council; one near the bridge, the other near the depot. This will be handy for travelers and others keeping stock.

—Roosen's creamery is nearly finished. He expects to start up Monday or Tuesday. Mr. Kammer, the butter maker, appears to understand his business and some of our citizens are fixing their mouths for some first class butter next week.

—If you are interested in Memorial Day, and desire to see it properly observed in Delano and the graves of those fallen in their country's service; or since their return from the war whose remains rest in our neighboring cemeteries covered with flowers, be at the City Hall Saturday evening promptly at 8 o'clock and help organize and appoint committees for the occasion.

—School Boards, Village Councils, Town Boards, Legislatures and other servants of the people should hold open meetings. They should never transact business that the public is not entitled to know about. Their proceeding should be public and above board, and their constituents are entitled to know just how each member of a board votes, on every question coming before the board. Otherwise how are people to know what officials they wish to retain in office and which they wish to substitute at the first opportunity. If the minutes, properly kept, of each public meeting were published, people would have a correct statement of their business and would know who was best guarding their interests.

—The corps of teachers selected by the school board for next year's work will, doubtless, do good work, and keep the school up to grade, or perhaps raise its standing if possible. Mr. Hawker is one of Delano's boys of whom all are proud. He was born here and received the rudiments of his education in Delano's common schools, afterwards going to Northfield, then to Hamline University, where he is to graduate, next month. He has had experience in teaching, having taught several terms during his student days. Misses Quinn and Hagar have taught a year in our schools before, and Miss Cheeley has taught the A B C's to nearly all the pupils now in attendance in Delano schools. They, of course, will have the support of patrons of the school. The High School teacher should be carefully selected for that particular place. The outlook is for a prosperous school year.

Personals.

F. H. Lindsley returned from the cities this morning.

Mrs. Volkenat, of Montrose, made Delano a business visit Tuesday.

Electrician Smith was a westbound passenger on the G. N. this morning.

J. C. Johnson, Lyndale's Post Master and merchant was a GAZETTE caller yesterday.

John Catlin spent Sunday and Monday with relatives in Minneapolis and visited the University.

Mrs. C. J. Buckley and children left this morning for Hamline, to spend a few days with Grandma.

Rev. J. W. Powell returned Thursday from his visit to Blue Earth City. His daughter, Mrs. Councilman, and two sons, came home with him.

School Notes.

The usual preparations for the state examinations are being made.

Miss Viola Cunningham vitited Minneapolis this week.

A programme (?) for commencement has been arranged. It is a slight deviation from the general rule but it will no doubt be a very interesting one. Hamlet and other noted persons will be present. There will also be some music by an amateur "orchestra" of local talent which will then play before the public for the first time.

Miss Maria Sanford, of the State University, has been secured by the Seniors to aid them in filling up their programme for commencement.

Miss Steele is going to teach in the South Side High School in Minneapolis, next year. We wish her success in her new place.

It has been proven at school that those persons of the feminine gender are not as afraid of a mouse as they are accused of being.

The scholars sincerely hope that their examination papers will bring as good results this time as they did last.

We understand that Professor Dewey is to stay in Morris another year. We are glad to see him in a place where he can put forth his best efforts.

Commoner. The frequent and heavy rains of late will have a tendency to undermine the health and impair the appetite of the usually robust chinch bug.

Herald Where the diphtheria came from in the two cases developed this week is a mystery, as it has been several weeks since there has been any here, and the cases that did exist were well guarded.

Eagle. The newspapers of the state do not seem to take much stock in the Davis boom for president. A good many people look upon it as a scheme to get the Senator out of ex-Goy. Merriam's way.

Times. The last legislature came down pretty hard upon traction engine owners, and it is now unlawful to blow the whistle of traction engines on any public highway in the state and all such engines must be stopped within 100 feet of any team on the road. If the owner of an engine breaks any bridge he must pay half the cost of having the same repaired.

GAZETTE $1.00 per year.

Free! Free!

Henry George's great work on the tariff "Protection or Free Trade" also the famous speeches of Hon. Tom L. Johnson of Ohio; O. M. Hall of, Minn., and others, any or all sent free on application to Minnesota Democratic Association. 126 Globe Bldg. St. Paul Minn.

P. J. Smalley, Sect.

When they go to the theater, don't you know,
They occupy seats near the front row.

County Cullings.

Three buildings owned by the Schwab estate, Samuel Whitney and T. Tollington, one occupied by the Postoffice, were destroyed by fire yesterday, at Clearwater. Loss, $3,500.

G. A. Berkner and son Charles, of Waverly, are putting up a new mill at Litchfield, 100 barrels capacity. They are reliable mill men and Litchfield can be proud of their work.

Pay your Real Estate taxes on or before May 31, as on June 1, a penalty of 10 per cent will be added to all delinquents. Don't wait till you go to court or you will have to pay the penalty.

That telephone that has been talked about from Delano to the county seat has not yet made its appearance. If it was up and in working order now, along about tax paying and court time people could easily see its usefulness.

District Court convenes at Buffalo on Monday, June 3d, Judge Seagrave Smith to preside. Several important cases will be tried this term. Among them the death of Frank Davis of Franklin will be investigated and quite a number from Delano are very much interested in the outcome.

A column letter from Johnston Mealey, of Howard Lake, on Bi-metallism, is going the rounds of the newspapers. Mr. Mealey has invented a plan for stamping a gold half dollar into a silver half dollar, making the two worth together one dollar, making in this way a composite dollar and insuring bi metallism. This is quite an ingenious arrangement for maintaining the parity of the two metals. He has applied for a patent for his discovery

Among Our Exchanges.

For a whole week the St. Paul papers have said not a "word in favor of the claims of Cush Davis" for President. What's up anyway?--Valley Herald, Chaska.

Information comes from Barton that J. G. Wooley, of Rest Island fame will be the candidate of the W. C. T. U. for President of the United States in 1896. --Wabasha Democrat.

Those who moved south from Nebraska on account of the drouth have got into it again. Oklahoma and Texas are as dry as we were last year.—Weeping Water (Neb.) Republican.

It is not true, as the Minneapolis Tribune asserts, that President Cleveland has abandoned the idea of running for a third term. He never had the idea, and therefore could not abandon it. -Morning Call.

The plan of taking the pardoning power away from the Governor and placing it in the hands of a pardoning board is a good one, and the power of reprieve and commutation should go along with it.—News-Ledger, Litchfield.

New Paynesville, Minn, May 12.—A farmer near here is going to butcher two fine large horses for their hides. He has tried in vain to sell them. Our people are not going to eating horseflesh, though there is some talk of trying it.--Minneapolis Tribune.

In our opinion the associated banks of New York are practically one concern, and much more of a menace to the country than the old United States bank ever was or ever could become. We unhesitatingly advocate the abolition of all national bank charters at their expiration, so far as their note issuing privilege is concerned.—Litchfield Independent.

It is well the C. K. Davis presidential boom started early as it will thereby be pretty effectually nipped before the convention occurs next year. Senator Davis is a good man and would fill the presidential chair ably and well; but there isn't the ghost of a show for him to get there, as any one of sense well knows. It would only be a repetition of the Windom foolishness of 1880. --Sherburne County Times.

We believe that every man, except the fiat money crank, believes in honest money, a sound currency and a dollar as good as any other dollar, and the question agitating the minds of a good many people just now is whether the remonetization of silver will make every dollar as good as every other dollar. Will it raise the price of silver to the 16 to 1 ratio and keep it there? If it will, then give us free and unlimited coinage: if not, then free coinage is not what we want.--Aitkin Republican.

A New Jersey justice has just committed a young man to thirty days in the workhouse for smoking cigarettes. In passing sentence, the judge declared that cigarette smoking was a far worse evil than drunkenness. He was not far from wrong. While a confirmed drunkard may reform and lead a better life, a confirmed cigarette fiend has nothing before him but a hopeless mental imbecility which will land him in the lunatic asylum or the grave long before his manhood--such as it is—has been spent.—Morning Call.

Congressman McCleary has given the gold bugs of the country much comfort by saying that the silver question was fought out in Minnesota last fall and routed, foot, horse, and dragoon; that the republicans would not be given any further trouble by it, although the Democrats might be entangled by it. "Our people," said he, "are sober, reasoning people, and they pretty generally figure out the right course." Yes, they are sober and thoughtful, and the more they have thought on the silver question the more they have become convinced that they made a great mistake when they elected gold bugs to congress last fall.—Moorhead News.

Hard Fiber Twine.

St. Paul, May 14.—Warden Wolfer, of the state prison, was in the city today. He says that a portion of the hard fiber twine plant is already in place in the prison. It is expected that nearly 1,000,000 pounds of its product will be ready by harvest time. The making of soft fiber twine will be abandoned. Mr. Wolfer says that the prison will be able to undersell outside manufacturers by at least 40 per cent.

The Schurmeier prison labor law, Mr. Wolfer says, cannot be put into general operation until the contract of the Union Shoe and Leather Company expires, which will not be until Oct. 1, 1896.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Putting it Delicately.

"Josiar," said Mrs. Cornrassel, "was you ever hypnotized?"

"Never thet I knows on."

"D'ye b'lieve they is any sech a thing ez hypnotism, anyway?

" 'Course I do."

"Could I learn it?"

"I duno 'bout that. What on airth ails ye, anyway? What do ye want to hypnotize fur?"

"Well, you see, Josiar, I'm too kind hearted to stir ye up to being industrious by harsh words, an' I thort thet if I could hypnotize a little, mebbe I could get a bucket o' spring water an' a bunch o' kindlin' wood without yer knowin' thet ye'd worked a bit, an' with nuthin' but the peacefullest sentiments all 'round." — Minneapolis Journal.

TARIFF IS A TAX.

Minnesota Now Has Two U. S. Senators who are aware of that fact.

DECORATION DAY.

Do you know what it means, you boys and girls
Who hail from the North and South?
Do you know what it means,
This twining of greens
Round the silent cannon's mouth;
This strewing with flowers the grass grown grave;
This decking with garland the statues brave:
This flaunting of flags,
All in tatters and rags;
This marching and singing;
Those bells all a-ringing;
These faces grave and these faces gay;
This talk of the Blue and this talk of the Gray
In the North and the South, Decoration Day:
Not simply a show-time, boys and girls,
Is this day of falling flowers:
Not a pageant, a play,
Nor a holiday
Of flags and floral bowers;
It is something more than the day that starts:
War memories a-throb in veteran hearts;
For across the years
To the hopes and fears,
To the days of battle,
Of roar and of rattle—
To the past that now seems so far away,
Do the sons of the Blue and the sons of the Gray
Gaze—hand clasping hand—Decoration Day.
For the wreck and the wrong of it, boys and girls,
For the terror and loss as well,
Our hearts must hold
A regret untold
As we think of those who fell,
But their blood on whichever side they fought
Remade the nation and progress brought!
We forget the woe
For we live and know
That the fighting and the sighing,
The falling and the dying,
Were but steps toward the future—Martyr's Way!
Adown which the sons of the Blue and the Gray
Look with love and with pride, Decoration Day.
—Wide Awake.

THE twenty-ninth anniversary number of the Dodge County Republican was received today. It is a fine paper, and gives evidence of living in a live community.

THE Normalia, a monthly publication of the St. Cloud Normal School came to hand today. We are pleased to see, as Editor-in-Chief, the name of our old townsman, a Delano boy, W. E. Johnson.

THE Minnesota Weather and Crop Review, the official publication of the Minnesota weather service came to hand this morning. It is published at Minneapolis, edited by E. A. Beals It gives infotmation relating to crops and weather and is quite interesting.

THIS week's Eagle takes a column to tell her readers about patriotism. There is a little bit of pretty good advice in a portion of the article. We would advise the Eagle to follow it. Then she excitedly, after her style, pounces upon the Democrats for repealing the McKinley bill and getting a little bit of the terrible tariff off. She tries to make out that the country is about rouned, and the Democrats are to blame. At the same time the city papers are proclaiming the advent of good times. Regardless of party or politics they are united in saying that prosperous times are here. The city articles sound best, to most people. Even if the Democrats did deal protection a dealy blow, if it is instrumental in restoring to the country good times, hurray for Democracy.

THE MINNESOTA DEMOCRAT is a new publication, we this week welcome to our table. It is published by the Minnesota Democratic Association. It has for its motto "Free Trade and sound currency." The money question alone does not involve the whole of the difficulties to be settled by voters at the next election. But a still further reduction of tariff is to be demanded. Minnesota Democracy is liable to be of the faith the Association is. And the platform on which Democrats in Minnesota will stand next election day is liable to contain two planks leaning very strongly in the direction of Free Trade and sound money, Democratic principles pure and simple. Democrats always have, do now, and alwayr shall advocate trading where you can do best, and receiving and paying out money that is good and sound; one dollar just as good as another. And Minnesota Democrats are much like Democrats wherever you may find them.

MINNESOTA Democrats seem not to have died, as some have tried to have us believe, at the last State election, but are as lively as ever. And at this early day begin to show unusual signs of vigor, and enterprise, in educating the people to true Democracy. At the last Presidential election the tariff question was brought prominently to the front. And upon that issue almost alone, the battle was won, for a reduction of the exorbitant rates. The Wilson bill has been passed, after a very long and hard fight. It did not meet the wants of the tariff reformers, by a good deal. It is only a step in the right direction. The Republicans howled, and so did the Populists until our country has been having an unusually hard time getting along. Many firms and individuals have succumbed. They have made assignments or been totally ruined, financially. They had, some of them, attributed all the evils to the Democratic administration, to the inefficiency of Congress; of Grover Cleveland, and finally of the Wilson bill. But lo! And behold! there we are. Not longer after the passage of the Wilson bill, have they begun to tell us good times are surely coming, are here, than did they have to tell us, after the McKinley bill went into effect, that the times were growing harder; that mills and factories were shutting down; or reducing the wages? How is it? Does not the tariff have considerably more to do with hard times or good times than many think? Does it not stand to reason that after screwing the tariff up to the last notch, the McKinley bill and having hard times; harder and harder, until the Wilson bill has begun to have some effect, and then having good times come that there must be a great deal depending on the tariff? Would it not be better to do away entirely or as nearly as possible, with an evil that is capable of creating such great changes in our financial world? Would it not be better to have free trade? Would not our ocean carrying trade again become our pride, if our ship owners could purchase luxuries and necessities, many of which cannot be got at home, and bring them to our shores, and take in exchange the many products of our lands and our factories returning with them to those who need them and are glad to make the trade? Would not all be benefited? This thing of trying to have an international money unit, a gold dollar good in any land, while we have a Chinese wall of protective tariff around ourselves don't look right. Take down your wall. Let people dicker and trade as God intended they should, with each other, and have our own money sound, and the nations of the earth will find wherewith to satisfy our hungering for the necessaries and luxuries of life.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, May 17, 1895.

Secretary Lamont took a turn at wrestling with the regular weekly cabinet resignation rumor this time, and he took a fall without half trying. This rumor, which came by telegraph all the way from Ohio, gave ex-Congressman Outhwaite as Secretary Lamont's successor. There isn't the slightest doubt that Mr. Outhwaite would make a good Secretary of War, but inasmuch as Dan Lamont is now giving satisfaction in that position and has no idea of retiring until March 4, 1897, the rumored change must be packrd away with its long list of too previous successors.

Ex-Speaker Crisp was in Washington this week He has been resting since the adjournment of Congress and looks better than he has for several years. He is decidedly opposed to the plan of fighting the Presidential campaign a year ahead of time, and thinks much ammunition is being wasted by Democras in various states.

The statement is positively made, and generally believed, that the decision of the Supreme Court, which will be handed down next week, will declare the income tax to be unconstitutional.

The recallar stand taken by the British government, in refusing to re-enact the regulations in force last year to prevent illegal sealing in Boring Sea, is harshly criticized. It is a practical nullification of all the measures for the protection of the seals whih were agreed upon at the Paris arbitration, and may result in the United States officially declaring the treaty abrogated. The action of the British government is apparently entirely in the interest of the Canadian pelagic sealers, and will result in the extermination of the seals unless some way of stopping the killing can be devised by the government.

Hon. Samuel L. Rodgers, who has just been appointed Collector of internal revenue for the Fifth district of North Carolina, and who is regarded as authority on the politics of his state, is in Washington. Speaking of the situation he said: "North Carolina, despite the revolution of last November, is still a Democratic state, and democrats will regain its control within the next two years. The coalition between the republicans and populists will be shortlived. Already they are tiring of the fusion compact, and though it may hold together for one more campaign, that will be the end of it. It doesn't take any prophet to tell that the combination, in the very nature of things, couldn't be permanent. A few sore-headed democrats who have gone over to the fusion side in hope of spoils, will be kicking themselves ere many days go by for having deserted their party, for they will find that the fellows they deserted to will be empty-handed themselves.

Everybody is glad that President Cleveland decided not to court-martial Admiral Meade for his recent very indiscreet remarks in a printed newspaper interview. That he was guilty of a serious infraction of the naval regulations, one for which a younger officer would have deserved severe punishment, there is no doubt. But the Admiral has grown old in the service, is high-tempered, and has a torpid liver which makes him see things to worry him incidents that others would never notice: therefore everybody is glad that he will escape with a reprimand, and on every hand is heard the wish that Secretary Herbert will make that as light as possible.

Ex-speaker Reed was in Washington this week. He tried to keep his visit a secret, and having failed in that said he was only paying a visit to his friend, Congressman Hitt, of Ill. who has been quite sick for several weeks. Mr. Reed did not say what other objects he had in view, but there are indications that some of them will not be pleasant to certain Republican Congressmen, who, believing themselves slated for coolee committee positions under the next house, have been conspiring against Mr. Reed's boom for his party's Presidential nomination. The big man from Maine heard about the conspiracies, and there is reason for the belief that the Congressional conspirators will not fare well when Mr. Reed makes up the committees of the House. He hasn't the reputation of turning the other cheek to those who smite him. On the contrary, he smites back every time, and he is a hard hitter too. It is said that he found his Presidential boom in a very dangerous condition, and that he may withdraw from the race in order to throw all his strength to some man who can be certain of beating Harrison, who is the one man that Reed will do almost anything to keep out of the nomination. The feud between him and Harrison is one, dating away back to the early part of Harrison's administration.

CORRESPONDENCE

ROCKFORD RIPPLES.

DIED, S. D. Fuller, on Thursday, May 16, at the age of 71. He was buried Sunday from the Presbyterian church, Rev. Noyes officiating. A large crowd followed the remains to their last resting place, in Elmwood cemetery.

Very heavy frosts continue to make their appearance every night, damaging tender garden stuff.

J. O. Guerney and John Terney visited the city last week. Guerney expects to move to Minneapolis in the near future to take a position as bookkeeper. Success John.

Dr. O. R. Fassett and wife, attended the meeting of the State Homœopathic Society, at St. Paul, this week. If Mrs. F's health permits she will take a trip to Maine. The Dr. will accompany her to Chicago.

There is a rumor afloat that Rockford is to have another general store. That's right, the more the merrier. The firm name is to be I. P. Harvey & Co.

Mrs. J H McCord, of Annandale, visited Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Benner, this week.

H. E. Pitt, landlord of the Centennial Hotel, is making considerable improvement inside, and out, on his new purchase, which adds much to its appearance.

Rockford school closes on Friday. They will picnic at Lake Sarah Saturday. Prof. Baker closes a very successful term having given general satisfaction.

BUFFALO BUSINESS.

Fred Boerner's new brick hotel now looms up in fine shape. It will be one of the finest hotel buildings in the county when completed.

Dr. Shannon is a very busy man now-a-days. He is having a fine new residence built, which he expects soon to occupy.

Wednesday was a great day for M. D's at the County Seat. Besides the local members of the fraternity, there were in town Drs. Ridgway, of Annandale, O'Connor, of Maple Lake, and Catlin and Schrader or Delano.

The editors of the Eagle and the GAZETTE met Wednesday near the pump at the Court House. They agreed that the County Seat has good water.

Clerk of Court O'Leary wears his old time smile for everybody. An off year for Democrats don't seem to affect the Colonel. Messrs. J. T. Hanna, Olaf Wicklund, John Lohmiller, Massanz, and Matt Fautch of Delano were County Seat callers on Wednesday.

County Treasurer Mattson and his assistant, S. W. Junken, are kept very busy these times counting the cash turned in for taxes, and receipting for the same.

Surveyor Moland is seen quite frequently lately about the Court House, Some of the boys accuse him of watching for an opportunity to catch the Clerk of Court alone in his office. Mr. M. denies the soft impeachment, however.

The Windsor Hotel and the store building on the west were consumed by fire on Monday. Austin Knight and Gorman Bros., livery men, had close calls but escaped with slight damages. The town needs waterworks of some kind.

Dr. R. O. Cady has concluded his drug store must belong to the order "Salamander" as it has had three of its nearest neighbors burned to the ground and still stands.

Landlord Shaffar has a good run of custom now. No wonder, the way he treats them.

GAZETTE $1.00 per year.

His Honor Not Hurt.

Judge B. fell down a flight of stairs, recording his passage in a bump on every stair until he reached the bottom, where he had acquired such a degree of momentum that he rolled across the corridor. A servant, seeing the predicament of the judge, and raising him up, said, "I hope your honor is not hurt?"

"No," said the judge sternly, "my honor is not hurt, but my head is."—Our Dumb Animals.

THE BUTTERFLY.

I was once a dingy worm
On a bough;
Ugly, brown and small; but just
See me now!
To my pitiful estate,
To my shell,
Came an angel whispering,
All is well!
Hearing this, I burst my bonds,
Soared and flew!
So it is with human things,—
So with you.
Never mind the homely shell;
Some fine day
God may whisper in your ear:
"Come away!"
And with rapid, radiant wings,
Light and free,
You may burst these earthly bonds,
Fly, and see!
—Our Dumb Animals.

Woman's Column.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

The well regulated saloon is no more nor less than an absurdity, and it is for this reason that one can never be found. The same is true of the ideal saloon keeper, he exists in imagination only. A business that damns souls for the sake of money can only be well regulated when it is regulated out of existence. The man who sells liquid poison that he may profit by other men's degradation and misery is not capable of any degree of ideality whatever. Good can not come out of evil, and all this talk about the good saloon keeper is uncalled for. The saloon may get so vile and wicked that it will cause such a wave of popular indignation that it will be swept out of existence; but no permanent good can come from it in any other manner.—Champion of Progress.

Self Control.

Every observing man must finally come to the conclusion that the most important acquisition in life is self-control. He finds himself admiring not the repose that comes from inanation, but that which comes from fulness of vitality and faith controlled, held in bonds of reason and good manners. That is a storehouse of power. Not only in public effort, but in the privacy of the home and the superficial intercourse of society, the element that ministers most effectually to peace and success is self-contol. Vitality is often wasted in acquiring habits that detract from personal appearance, or even come under the head of bad manners.

Voice, feet and hands, when uncontrolled, have been the base that have kept many men out of desired fields of enjoyment and employment. So with the mind, if it has been ungoverned. The mind that will not harness itself has acquired its uncontrollable freedom in the first years in the home and schoolroom; its antagonism to order and obedience hrs been acquired in childhood. No matter how richly a man may be endowed by nature, if the training of home and school has not made him master of his own body. Endowments untrained, uncontrolled, unguided, are no more valuable to a man than the power of speed would be to a horse who had never known any harness.—Outlook.

Only Wants to be Let Alone.

"Saying, Let us alone; what have we to do with thee?" (Mark 1:24.)

This is the cry that sin always makes when it finds itself cornered by indignant righteousness. It only asks to be let alone, and it will flourish and take care of itself. Weeds in the garden do not ask to be cultivated, and do not want anything to do with the gardener or his hoe. Little evils, like little weeds, are easily destroyed, but if left to themselves they soon reach a growth so rank that they are hard to kill, and their removal will seem to threaten the life of the useful plants which have been striving for growth near them. The great curse of rum selling is now raising a similar cry to be let alone, but the words which are to compass its doom have been spoken by Him who said, "Vengeance is mine; I will repay," and although this terrible monster is now striking consternation into the hearts of many by its violent contortions, in seeking to tear and destroy all opposing powers, as the evil spirit did when leaving the man, its doom is sealed and its fate is sure. The Spirit of Christ has entered the land and He can and will save His people. One of the most hopeful signs that the devil of drink will soon be cast out is that it is now crying so hard to be let alone.

International Marriages From A Clergyman's Point Of View.

REV. DR. R. S. MACARTHUR, PASTOR OF CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH.

All improper marriages should be denounced; but international marriages are not necessarily improper. Merely the international feature ought not to affect the moral character of the marriage. All depends upon the facts in each case. Whether marriages are international or not, where the motive, on the one side, is plainly to secure wealth, and on the other, a real or supposed prominent social position, the marriage falls far below the proper standard. Where differences in religion, in education, in taste, and in social relations, are very marked, the propriety of the marriage is certainly en to question. But it ought to be constantly borne in mind that the mere international feature is, per se, neither commendable nor objectionable. All depends upon other considerations. It is to be hoped that the time is near at hand when American women will feel there is no higher honor than to be the wives of brave, true, and patriotic American men, and the mothers of patriotic American sons and daughters. The present tendency does not reflect much credit on certain classes of American women, however much it may conduce to the financial ambitions of certain foreigners.—From "Should International Marriages be Denounced?" in Demorest's Magazine for June.

Wright County Medical Society.

The Wright County Medical Society will hold their first annual meeting on Wednesday, June 19, at Buffalo. This is expected to be an interesting meeting, as several important matters are to be attended to, among them the election of officers; the adopting of a uniform schedule of prices; the reading and discussing of papers on diseases met with in everyday practice. Wright County now has good material for such a society, and can hold as interesting and profitable meetings to its members as any county in the state. Let each practicing physician in the county, and whose territory extends into the county, make it a point to be present and determined to do his best toward making the papers and discussions interesting. Then will the society flourish.

When to Set Tomato Plants.

From Garden Lore we clip the following which will be of interest to many of our readers:

In answer to A. A. H. Bellows Falls in regard to early tomatoes, you advise not to set in the open ground until the weather is so settled that they will go on growing and not be checked by cold nights. Our experience is that it is always best, if the plants are properly hardened off in the frames, to put them out as soon as there is a fair chance for their strviving, even though some protection must be given after planting. I once planted out 55,000 tomatoes in northern Maryland in late April. They were turned blue-black by cold in early May, and yet I shipped fruit the last week in June three weeks ahead of others in the same latitude who waited for the May full moon to pass. Here we set out some plants April 3, and set the remainder of the same lot late in the month. Those set the third were sheltered on two or three cold nights and ripened fruit May 25, while those set later gave first fruit June 13. It is very easy to protect a tomato plant in its early growth outside. If a cold threatens, simply bend the plant gently to the earth and put a shovelful of soil on it. This is done rapidly and is perfectly effectual. The earlier the plants can be got to live outside, the earlier the crop will be.—W. F. Massey, Raleigh, N. C.

Catalogue of Carleton College.

We are in receipt of a catalogue, and the following notice which we print for the benefit of those who may be interested:

The annual catalogue of Carleton College at Northfield, Minn., for the academic year, 1894-5, shows a total enrollment of 277 students, 122 of which are in the college department and in postgraduate study. The three full, four year courses are all represented in the present graduating class which consists of twenty members, twelve ladies and eight gentlemen. The postgraduate students are five in number, three gentlemen and two ladies, four of these students are pursuing the special course of three years in mathematics and astronomy.

It is a noteworthy fact for the friends of the Institution that this Commencement, June 8-13, 1895, is the 25th anniversary of the College. On this account large preparations are being made to celebrate the occasion in a fitting manner. Prominent educators and many Carleton students of former years are planning to be present on this anniversary occasion.

News Items.

The graduating class, of the St. Cloud Normal School, numbers 62; said to be the largest of any of its twenty six years.

Harry T. Hayward's death warrant has been signed by Gov. Clough. The execution to be June 21. An appeal to the Supreme court is expected to put off the fatal day several months.

The Supreme Court has decided against the income tax law. So there will be a deficiency of several millions in government receipts, which will likely occasion an extra session of Congress or an issue of more bonds.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole year's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 19¾ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the other sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and it will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put it in the way of saving money by finding in one volume everything to satisfy the literary wants of whole family.

DECORATION DAY.

Do you know what it means, you boys and girls
Who hail from the North and South?
Do you know what it means,
This twining of greens
Round the silent cannon's mouth;
This strewing with flowers the grass grown grave;
Tals decking with garland the statues brave:
This flaunting of flags,
All in tatters and rags;
This marching and singing;
Those bells all a-ringing;
These faces grave and these faces gay;
This talk of the Blue and this talk of the Gray
In the North and the South, Decoration Day:

Not simply a show-time, boys and girls,
Is this day of falling flowers:
Not a pageant, a play,
Nor a holiday
Of flags and floral bowers;
It is something more than the day that starts:
War memories a-throb in veteran hearts:
For across the years
To the hopes and fears,
To the days of battle,
Of roar and of rattle—
To the past that now seems so far away,
Do the sons of the Blue and the sons of the Gray
Gaze—hand clasping hand—Decoration Day.

For the wreck and the wrong of it, boys and girls,
For the terror and loss as well,
Our hearts must hold
A regret untold
As we think of those who fell,
But their blood on whichever side they fought
Remade the nation and progress brought!
We forget the woe
For we live and know
That the fighting and the sighing,
The falling and the dying,
Were but steps toward the future—Martyr's Way!
Adown which the sons of the Blue and the Gray
Look with love and with pride, Decoration Day.

—Wide Awake.

THE twenty-ninth anniversary number of the Dodge County Republican was received today. It is a fine paper, and gives evidence of living in a live community.

THE Normalia, a monthly publication of the St. Cloud Normal School came to hand today. We are pleased to see, as Editor-in-Chief, the name of our old townsman, a Delano boy, W. E. Johnson.

THE Minnesota Weather and Crop Review, the official publication of the Minnesota weather service came to hand this morning. It is published at Minneapolis, edited by E. A. Beals It gives infotmation relating to crops and weather and is quite interesting.

THIS week's Eagle takes a column to tell her readers about patriotism. There is a little bit of pretty good advice in a portion of the article. We would advise the Eagle to follow it. Then she excitedly, after her style, pounces upon the Democrats for repealing the McKinley bill and getting a little bit of the terrible tariff off. She tries to make out that the country is about ruined, and the Democrats are to blame. At the same time the city papers are proclaiming the advent of good times. Regardless of party or politics they are united in saying that prosperous times are here. The city articles sound best, to most people. Even if the Democrats did deal protection a dealy blow, if it is instrumental in restoring to the country good times, hurray for Democracy.

THE MINNESOTA DEMOCRAT is a new publication, we this week welcome to our table. It is published by the Minnesota Democratic Association. It has for its motto "Free Trade and sound currency." The money question alone does not involve the whole of the difficulties to be settled by voters at the next election. But a still further reduction of tariff is to be demanded. Minnesota Democracy is liable to be of the faith the Association is. And the platform on which Democrats in Minnesota will stand next election day is liable to contain two planks leaning very strongly in the direction of Free Trade and sound money, Democratic principles pure and simple. Democrats always have, do now, and alwayr shall advocate trading where you can do best, and receiving and paying out money that is good and sound: one dollar just as good as another. And Minnesota Democrats are much like Democrats wherever you may find them.

MINNESOTA Democrats seem not to have died, as some have tried to have us believe, at the last State election, but are as lively as ever. And at this early day begin to show unusual signs of vigor, and enterprise, in educating the people to true Democracy. At the last Presidential election the tariff question was brought prominently to the front. And upon that issue almost alone, the battle was won, for a reduction of the exorbitant rates. The Wilson bill has been passed, after a very long and hard fight. It did not meet the wants of the tariff reformers, by a good deal. It is only a step in the right direction. The Republicans howled, and so did the Populists until our country has been having an unusually hard time getting along. Many firms and individuals have succumbed. They have made assignments or been totally ruined, financially. They had, some of them, attributed all the evils to the Democratic administration, to the inefficiency of Congress; of Grover Cleveland, and finally of the Wilson bill. But lo! And behold! Here we are. Not longer after the passage of the Wilson bill, have they begun to tell us good times are surely coming, are here, than did they have to tell us, after the McKinley bill went into effect, that the times were growing harder; that mills and factories were shutting down; or reducing the wages? How is it? Does not the tariff have considerably more to do with hard times or good times than many think? Does it not stand to reason that after screwing the tariff up to the last notch, the McKinley bill and having hard times; harder and harder, until the Wilson bill has begun to have some effect, and then having good times come that there must be a great deal depending on the tariff? Would it not be better to do away entirely or as nearly as possible, with an evil that is capable of creating such great changes in our financial world? Would it not be better to have free trade? Would not our ocean carrying trade again become our pride, if our ship owners could purchase luxuries and necessities, many of which cannot be got at home, and bring them to our shores, and take in exchange the many products of our lands and our factories returning with them to those who need them and are glad to make the trade? Would not all be benefited? This thing of trying to have an international money unit, a gold dollar good in any land, while we have a Chinese wall of protective tariff around ourselves don't look right. Take down your wall. Let people dicker and trade as God intended they should, with each other, and have our own money sound, and the nations of the earth will find wherewith to satisfy our hungering for the necessaries and luxuries of life.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, May 17, 1895.

Secretary Lamont took a turn at wrestling with the regular weekly cabinet resignation rumor this time, and he took a fall without half trying. This rumor, which came by telegraph all the way from Ohio, gave ex-Congressman Outhwaite as Secretary Lamont's successor. There isn't the slightest doubt that Mr. Outhwaite would make a good Secretary of War, but inasmuch as Dan Lamont is now giving satisfaction in that position and has no idea of retiring until March 4, 1897, the rumored change must be packed away with its long list of too previous successors.

Ex-Speaker Crisp was in Washington this week. He has been resting since the adjournment of Congress and looks better than he has for several years. He is decidedly opposed to the plan of fighting the Presidential campaign a year ahead of time, and thinks much ammunition is being wasted by Democras in various states.

The statement is positively made, and generally believed, that the decision of the Supreme Court, which will be handed down next week, will declare the income tax to be unconstitutional.

The peculiar stand taken by the British government, in refusing to re-enact the regulations in force last year to prevent illegal sealing in Bering Sea, is harshly criticized. It is a practical nullification of all the measures for the protection of the seals whih were agreed upon at the Paris arbitration, and may result in the United States officially declaring the treaty abrogated. The action of the British government is apparently entirely in the interest of the Canadian pelagic sealers, and will result in the extermination of the seals unless some way of stopping the killing can be devised by the government.

Hon. Samuel L. Rodgers, who has just been appointed Collector of internal revenue for the Fifth district of North Carolina, and who is regarded as authority on the politics of his state, is in Washington. Speaking of the situation he said: "North Carolina, despite the revolution of last November, is still a Democratic state, and democrats will regain its control within the next two years. The coalition between the republicans and populists will be shortlived. Already they are tiring of the fusion compact, and though it may hold together for one more campaign, that will be the end of it. It doesn't take any prophet to tell that the combination, in the very nature of things, couldn't be permanent. A few sore-headed democrats who have gone over to the fusion side in hope of spoils, will be kicking themselves ere many days go by for having deserted their party, for they will find that the fellows they deserted to will be empty-handed themselves.

Everybody is glad that President Cleveland decided not to court-martial Admiral Meade for his recent very indiscreet remarks in a printed newspaper interview. That he was guilty of a serious infraction of the naval regulations, one for which a younger officer would have deserved severe punishment, there is no doubt. But the Admiral has grown old in the service, is high-tempered, and has a torpid liver which makes him see things to worry him incidents that others would never notice: therefore everybody is glad that he will escape with a reprimand, and on every hand is heard the wish that Secretary Herbert will make that as light as possible.

Ex-speaker Reed was in Washington this week. He tried to keep his visit a secret, and having failed in that said he was only paying a visit to his friend, Congressman Hitt, of Ill. who has been quite sick for several weeks. Mr. Reed did not say what other objects he had in view, but there are indications that some of them will not be pleasant to certain Republican Congressmen, who, believing themselves slated for cooler committee positions under the next house, have been conspiring against Mr. Reed's boom for his party's Presidential nomination. The big man from Maine heard about the conspiracies, and there is reason for the belief that the Congressional conspirators will not fare well when Mr. Reed makes up the committees of the House. He hasn't the reputation of turning the other cheek to those who smite him. On the contrary, he smites back every time, and he is a hard hitter too. It is said that he found his Presidential boom in a very dangerous condition, and that he may withdraw from the race in order to throw all his strength to some man who can be certain of beating Harrison, who is the one man that Reed will do almost anything to keep out of the nomination. The feud between him and Harrison is one, dating away back to the early part of Harrison's administration.

ROCKFORD RIPPLES.

DIED, S. D. Fuller, on Thursday, May 16, at the age of 71. He was buried Sunday from the Presbyterian church, Rev. Noyes officiating. A large crowd followed the remains to their last resting place, in Elmwood cemetery.

Very heavy frosts continue to make their appearance every night, damaging tender garden stuff.

J. O. Guerney and John Terney visited the city last week. Guerney expects to move to Minneapolis in the near future to take a position as bookkeeper. Success John.

Dr. O. R. Fassett and wife, attended the meeting of the State Homœopathic Society, at St. Paul, this week. If Mrs. F's health permits she will take a trip to Maine. The Dr. will accompany her to Chicago.

There is a rumor afloat that Rockford is to have another general store. That's right, the more the merrier. The firm name is to be I. P. Harvey & Co.

Mrs. J H McCord, of Annandale, visited Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Benner, this week.

H. E. Pitt, landlord of the Centennial Hotel, is making considerable improvement inside, and out, on his new purchase, which adds much to its appearance.

Rockford school closes on Friday. They will picnic at Lake Sarah Saturday. Prof. Baker closes a very successful term having given general satisfaction.

BUFFALO BUSINESS.

Fred Boerner's new brick hotel now looms up in fine shape. It will be one of the finest hotel buildings in the county when completed.

Dr. Shannon is a very busy man now-a-days. He is having a fine new residence built, which he expects soon to occupy.

Wednesday was a great day for M. D's at the County Seat. Besides the local members of the fraternity, there were in town Drs. Ridgway, of Annandale, O'Connor, of Maple Lake, and Catlin and Schrader or Delano.

The editors of the Eagle and the GAZETTE met Wednesday near the pump at the Court House. They agreed that the County Seat has good water.

Clerk of Court O'Leary wears his old time smile for everybody. An off year for Democrats don't seem to affect the Colonel. Messrs. J. T. Hanna, Olaf Wicklund, John Lohmiller, Massanz, and Matt Fautch of Delano were County Seat callers on Wednesday.

County Treasurer Mattson and his assistant, S. W. Junken, are kept very busy these times counting the cash turned in for taxes, and receipting for the same.

Surveyor Moland is seen quite frequently lately about the Court House, Some of the boys accuse him of watching for an opportunity to catch the Clerk of Court alone in his office. Mr. M. denies the soft impeachment, however.

The Windsor Hotel and the store building on the west were consumed by fire on Monday. Austin Knight and Gorman Bros., livery men, had close calls but escaped with slight damages. The town needs waterworks of some kind.

Dr. R. O. Cady has concluded his drug store must belong to the order "Salamander" as it has had three of its nearest neighbors burned to the ground and still stands.

Landlord Shattar has a good run of custom now. No wonder, the way he treats them.

GAZETTE $1.00 per year.

His Honor Not Hurt.

Judge B. fell down a flight of stairs, recording his passage in a bump on every stair until he reached the bottom, where he had acquired such a degree of momentum that he rolled across the corridor. A servant, seeing the predicament of the judge, and raising him up, said, "I hope your honor is not hurt?"

"No," said the judge sternly, "my honor is not hurt, but my head is."—Our Dumb Animals.

THE BUTTERFLY.

I was once a dingy worm
On a bough;
Ugly, brown and small; but just
See me now!
To my pitiful estate,
To my shell,
Came an angel whispering,
All is well!
Hearing this, I burst my bonds,
Soared and flew!
So it is with human things,—
So with you.
Never mind the homely shell;
Some fine day
God may whisper in your ear:
"Come away!"
And with rapid, radiant wings,
Light and free,
You may burst these earthly bonds,
Fly, and see!

Woman's Column.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

The well regulated saloon is no more nor less than an absurdity, and it is for this reason that one can never be found. The same is true of the ideal saloon keeper, he exists in imagination only. A business that damns souls for the sake of money can only be well regulated when it is regulated out of existence. The man who sells liquid poison that he may profit by other men's degradation and misery is not capable of any degree of ideality whatever. Good can not come out of evil, and all this talk about the good saloon keeper is uncalled for. The saloon may get so vile and wicked that it will cause such a wave of popular indignation that it will be swept out of existence; but no permanent good can come from it in any other manner.—Champion of Progress.

Self Control.

Every observing man must finally come to the conclusion that the most important acquisition in life is self-control. He finds himself admiring not the repose that comes from inanation, but that which comes from fulness of vitality and faith controlled, held in bonds of reason and good manners. That is a storehouse of power. Not only in public effort, but in the privacy of the home and the superficial intercourse of society, the element that ministers most effectually to peace and success is self-contol. Vitality is often wasted in acquiring habits that detract from personal appearance, or even come under the head of bad manners.

Voice, feet and hands, when uncontrolled, have been the base that have kept many men out of desired fields of enjoyment and employment. So with the mind, if it has been ungoverned. The mind that will not harness itself has acquired its uncontrollable freedom in the first years in the home and schoolroom; its antagonism to order and obedience hrs been acquired in childhood. No matter how richly a man may be endowed by nature, if the training of home and school has not made him master of his own body. Endowments untrained, uncontrolled, unguided, are no more valuable to a man than the power of speed would be to a horse who had never known any harness.—Outlook.

Only Wants to be Let Alone.

"Saying, Let us alone; what have we to do with thee?" (Mark 1:24.)

This is the cry that sin always makes when it finds itself cornered by indignant righteousness. It only asks to be let alone, and it will flourish and take care of itself. Weeds in the garden do not ask to be cultivated, and do not want anything to do with the gardener or his hoe. Little evils, like little weeds, are easily destroyed, but if left to themselves they soon reach a growth so rank that they are hard to kill, and their removal will seem to threaten the life of the useful plants which have been striving for growth near them. The great curse of rum selling is now raising a similar cry to be let alone, but the words which are to compass its doom have been spoken by Him who said, "Vengeance is mine; I will repay," and although this terrible monster is now striking consternation into the hearts of many by its violent contortions, in seeking to tear and destroy all opposing powers, as the evil spirit did when leaving the man, its doom is sealed and its fate is sure. The Spirit of Christ has entered the land and He can and will save His people. One of the most hopeful signs that the devil of drink will soon be cast out is that it is now crying so hard to be let alone.

International Marriages From A Clergyman's Point Of View.

REV. DR. R. S. MACARTHUR, PASTOR OF CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH.

All improper marriages should be denounced; but international marriages are not necessarily improper. Merely the international feature ought not to affect the moral character of the marriage. All depends upon the facts in each case. Whether marriages are international or not, where the motive, on the one side, is plainly to secure wealth, and on the other, a real or supposed prominent social position, the marriage falls far below the proper standard. Where differences in religion, in education, in taste, and in social relations, are very marked, the propriety of the marriage is certainly en to question. But it ought to be constantly borne in mind that the mere international feature is, per se, neither commendable nor objectionable. All depends upon other considerations. It is to be hoped that the time is near at hand when American women will feel there is no higher honor than to be the wives of brave, true, and patriotic American men, and the mothers of patriotic American sons and daughters. The present tendency does not reflect much credit on certain classes of American women, however much it may conduce to the financial ambitions of certain foreigners.—From "Should International Marriages be Denounced?" in Demorest's Magazine for June.

Wright County Medical Society.

The Wright County Medical Society will hold their first annual meeting on Wednesday, June 19, at Buffalo. This is expected to be an interesting meeting, as several important matters are to be attended to, among them the election of officers; the adopting of a uniform schedule of prices; the reading and discussing of papers on diseases met with in everyday practice. Wright County now has good material for such a society, and can hold as interesting and profitable meetings to its members as any county in the state. Let each practicing physician in the county, and whose territory extends into the county, make it a point to be present and determined to do his best toward making the papers and discussions interesting. Then will the society flourish.

When to Set Tomato Plants.

From Garden Lore we clip the following which will be of interest to many of our readers:

In answer to A. A. H. Bellows Falls in regard to early tomatoes, you advise not to set in the open ground until the weather is so settled that they will go on growing and not be checked by cold nights. Our experience is that it is always best, if the plants are properly hardened off in the frames, to put them out as soon as there is a fair chance for their strviving, even though some protection must be given after planting. I once planted out 55,000 tomatoes in northern Maryland in late April They were turned blue-black by cold in early May, and yet I shipped fruit the last week in June three weeks ahead of others in the same latitude who waited for the May full moon to pass. Here we set out some plants April 3, and set the remainder of the same lot late in the month. Those set the third were sheltered on two or three cold nights and ripened fruit May 25, while those set later gave first fruit June 13. It is very easy to protect a tomato plant in its early growth outside. If a cold threatens, simply bend the plant gently to the earth and put a shovelful of soil on it. This is done rapidly and is perfectly effectual. The earlier the plants can be got to live outside, the earlier the crop will be.—W. F. Massey, Raleigh, N. C.

Catalogue of Carleton College.

We are in receipt of a catalogue, and the following notice which we print for the benefit of those who may be interested:

The annual catalogue of Carleton College at Northfield, Minn., for the academic year, 1894 5, shows a total enrollment of 277 students, 122 of which are in the college department and in postgraduate study. The three full, four year courses are all represented in the present graduating class which consists of twenty members, twelve ladies and eight gentlemen. The postgraduate students are five in number, three gentlemen and two ladies, four of these students are pursuing the special course of three years in mathematics and astronomy.

It is a noteworthy fact for the friends of the Institution that this Commencement, June 8-13, 1895, is the 25th anniversary of the College. On this account large preparations are being made to celebrate the occasion in a fitting manner. Frominent educators and many Carleton students of former years are planning to be present on this anniversary occasion.

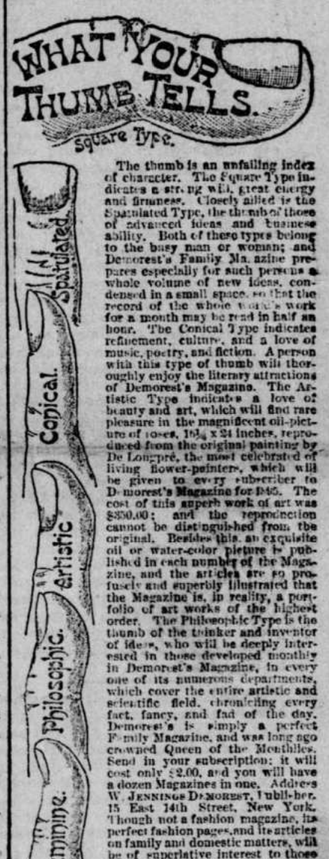
BUFFALO GAZETTE

One year for $2.50.



The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole month's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 10½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong especially to the fair sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and it will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put it in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of a whole family.

In Greenland the word for love is savenvtsvixuvilaravwomatakampy. It is a wonder any lover survives in that cold land.

The war which Germany is waging on American dried apples has led to the belief that the Germans drink too much beer after eating the apples. The result is always disastrous.

Prof. Holden has come to the conclusion that there is no atmosphere and no aqueous vapor on Mars, and consequently no inhabitants. Thus many a pretty speculation is shattered by hard facts.

Bells are tolled in some districts of France when frost is threatened. Immediately the inhabitants place quantities of tar between the rows of vines. The tar is lighted, and volumes of dense smoke arise, thus protecting the vines.

Joe Jefferson recently lectured to the Yale students, or rather scolded them, for presenting farce comedies, instead of standard plays. He told them that the average college farce comedy was simply degrading and disgusting.

Printer's Ink puts the case for advertising thus: "Advertising costs money, and so do railroad fares. But as it is cheaper to ride a thousand miles than it is to walk that distance, so also it is cheaper to advertise than to circularize."

The young queen Wilhelmina, of Holland, is to be married—by and by, she is only 14 now—to a grandson of Queen Victoria, the son of the prince of Gotha-Coburg. The British queen is slowly gathering all the crowns into her family.

The Fargo (N. D.) Forum gives the following pertinent hint to parents, which is just as applicable elsewhere as it is in Fargo: "Do you know where your children were last evening? It will save many a heartache to have their confidence and know how they spend their evenings."

No girl who is not over 18 years old can be married in New York without the consent of her parents, according to a new law. The worst of it is that the young lady's testimony will not be taken as to how old she is unless time has left such evidences on her face as will make it certain that the minister cannot be mistaken as to her age.

Commander P. N. McGiffen, the American who served with the Chinese in the late war, attributes the superiority of the Japs in the naval battles to the fact that they used shells, while the Chinese guns had nothing but solid shot. He claims that the Chinese gunners were just as accurate, and bore themselves with equal bravery, but were not provided with modern projectiles.

Mince pie is a good old New England delicacy, but it has its danger line, just as have other New England products, like hard cider. Capt. Archibald Hill, of the Salvation Army at Ellensville, N. Y., has confessed to forgery, and lays all his sins to his appetite for mince pie. He was not satisfied with pawning his clothes to get mince pie, but forged a check for $1,000 to appease his appetite.

There is one thing that a woman can do better than anybody else in the world. She can iron a worn-out handkerchief so that everyone of its ragged holes will be hidden from sight, and will only appear to view when her husband, who is a minister, takes that identical handkerchief out of his pocket when half-way through the sermon and calmly unfolds it to the eyes of the whole congregation.

Mr. Balfour in a recent address before the English Newspaper society among other things said: "The newspaper in its capacity as an advertising agent is after all of the first importance to any civilized society, inasmuch as it brings together those who have something to sell and those who have something to buy." This comes not from a newspaper man, nor from anyone interested in newspapers, but from one of the leading statesmen of England, who has had abundant opportunity to study the power of communication by advertisement.

The agricultural department, from an examination of the stomachs of 7,000 specimens, found that 95 per cent. of the food of hawks and owls consists of field-mice, grasshoppers and crickets. It is for the other 5 per cent. that the farmers have been waging warfare on these birds, so useful to agriculture. The state of Pennsylvania has actually paid $100,000 in bounties to encourage the killing of these birds, on the theory that they are injurious to agriculture. What mistaken beings men are. A farmer will hunt half a day to shoot a bird which may take a few grains of corn a day.

Mrs. Julia Woods, of Kansas City, is a woman who is "new" with a vengeance. Engaged to a western swain, she went to New York for a trousseau. On Broadway she met a man named Arthur Grissom. She had never seen him before. He had never seen her. Neither had ever heard of the other. They looked. They sighed. They spoke. They faced about. They entered the Little Church Around the Corner and were made man and wife. This does away with the question of who shall propose; it does away with moonlight nights in May and gas bills in December.

By the death of Gustav Freytag Germany has lost one of its most eminent novelists of the modern period. He was born at Kreuzburg, and was educated at the universities of Breslau and Berlin, and after his graduation devoted himself to the study of German history and antiquity. He was the great German champion of the middle classes and mercantile life. In politics he was liberal, but not to an extreme. He was a member of the reichstag and enjoyed the confidence of the late crown prince. He was poet, journalist and dramatist, and had much success in the latter field.

NOT A GOOD LAW.

The Income Tax Act in Its Entirety Declared Invalid.

A Majority of the Members of the United States Supreme Court Pronounced It Unconstitutional—Opinion Read by the Chief Justice.

Washington, May 21.—The supreme court of the United States Monday declared the income tax law to be unconstitutional.

The vote on the income tax resulted: Five against the constitutionality of the law to 4 for the law. Those against the law were Chief Justice Fuller and Justices Field, Gray, Brewer and Shiras; for the law, Justices Harlan, White, Brown and Jackson.

Conclusion of Court.

"1. We adhere to the opinion already announced that taxes on real estate being indisputably direct taxes, taxes on the rents or income of real estate are equally direct taxes.

"2. We are of the opinion that taxes on personal property or on the income of personal7 property are likewise direct taxes.

"3. The tax imposed by sections 27 to 3 inclusive, of the act of 1894, so far as it falls on the income of real estate and on personal property being a direct tax within the meaning of the constitution, is therefore unconstitutional and void, because not apportioned according to representation, all those sections constituting one entire scheme of taxation are necessarily invalid.

"The decrees hereinbefore entered in this court will be vacated. The decrees below will be reversed and the cases remanded with instructions to grant the relief prayed."

Sections 27 to 37 of the tariff act of 1894 referred to in the conclusions of the court in the opinions are all the sections of the act relating to the income tax, so that the entire income tax law is declared void specifically.

"As heretofore stated, the constitution divided federal taxation into two great classes, the class of direct taxes and the class of duties, imposts and excises, and prescribed two rules which qualified the grant of power as to each class. The power to lay direct taxes, apportioned among the several states in proportion to their representation in the popular branch of congress, a representation based on population as ascertained by the census, was plenary and absolute, but to lay direct taxes without apportionment was forbidden. The power to lay duties, imposts and excises was subject to the qualification that the imposition must be uniform throughout the United States.

Old Decision Too Narrow.

"Our previous decision was confined to the consideration of the validity of the tax on the income from real estate and on the income from municipal bonds. The question thus limited was whether such taxation was direct or not, in the meaning of the constitution, and the court went no farther as to the tax on the incomes from real estate than to hold that it fell within the same class as the source whence the income was derived—that is, that a tax upon the realty and a tax upon the receipts therefrom were alike direct; while as to the income from municipal bonds that could not be taxed, because of want of power to tax the source, and no reference was made to the nature of the tax as being direct or indirect.

"We are now permitted to broaden the field of inquiry and determine to which of the two great classes, a tax upon a person's entire income, whether derived from rents or products or otherwise of real estate, or from bonds, stocks or other forms of personal property, belongs, and we are unable to conclude that the enforced subtraction from the yield of all the owners' real or personal property, in the manner prescribed, is so different from a tax upon the property itself that it is not a direct but an indirect tax in the meaning of the constitution.

Marshall's Decision Quoted.

"The words of the constitution are to be taken in their obvious sense and to have a reasonable construction. In Gibbons vs. Ogden, Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, with his usual felicity, said:

"'As men whose intentions require no concealment generally employ the words which most directly and aptly express the ideas they intend to convey, the enlightened patriots who framed our constitution and the people who adopt it must be understood to have employed words in their natural sense, and to have intended what they have said.'

"We know of no reason for holding otherwise than that the words 'direct taxes' on the one hand, and 'duties, imposts and excises' on the other were used in the constitution in their natural and obvious senses, nor in arriving at what those terms embrace do we see any ground for enlarging them beyond or narrowing them within their natural and obvious import, and the time the constitution was framed and ratified. Passing from the text, we regard the conclusion reached as inevitable, when the circumstances which surrounded the convention and controlled its action and the views of those who framed and those who adopted the constitution are considered."

Property Tax Not Direct.

The opinion next took up the argument that a tax on property is not a direct tax within the meaning of the constitution, and on this point it says:

"All the real estate of the country and all its invested personal property are open to the direct operation of the taxing power if an apportionment be made according to the constitution. The constitution does not say that no direct tax shall be laid by apportionment on any property than land. On the contrary, it forbids all unapportioned direct taxes; and we know of no warrant for excepting personal property from the exercise of the power, or any reason why an apportioned direct tax cannot be laid and assessed, as Mr. Gallatin said in his report when secretary of the treasury in 1812, 'upon the same objects of taxation on which the direct taxes levied under the authority of the state are laid and assessed.'

"The stress of the argument is thrown, however, on the assertion that an income tax is not a property tax at all; that it is not a real estate tax nor a crop tax nor a bond tax; that it is an assessment upon the taxpayer on account of his money-spending power, as shown by his revenue for the year preceding the assessment; that rents received, crops harvested, interest collected, although once not taxable, have become transmuted in their near form into taxable subject matter; in other words, that income is taxable irrespective of the source from whence it is derived."

The chief justice said that since the court had held unanimously that the receipts from municipal bonds could not be taxed because the bonds were instruments of the states the same rule applies to revenue from other sources not subject to the tax, and the lack of power to levy any but an apportioned tax on real and personal property equally exists as to the revenue therefrom. The court does not understand that the income tax has ever been regarded in England as other than a direct tax.

General Argument.

After the review of cases and consideration of arguments of counsel the court, as it approached its conclusion, made the following general argument:

"If it were the fact that there had been no income-tax law, such as this, at the time the constitution was framed and adopted, it would not be of controlling importance. A direct tax cannot be taken out of the constitutional rule because the particular tax did not exist at the time the rule was prescribed.

"Being direct, and therefore to be laid by apportionment, is there any real difficulty in doing so? Cannot congress, if the necessity exist of raising thirty, forty or any number of million dollars for the support of the government in addition to the revenue from duties, imposts and excises, apportion the quota of each state upon the basis of census and thus advise it of the payment which must be made and proceed to assess that amount on all the real and personal property or the income of all persons in the state and collect the same if the state does not in the meantime assume and pay its quota and collect the amount according to its own system and in its own way? Inconveniences might possibly attend the levy of an income tax, but that it is apportionable is hardly denied, although it is asserted that it would operate so unequally as to be undesirable.

"If it be true that the constitution should have been so framed that a tax of this kind could be laid the instrument defines the way for its amendment. In no part of it was greater sagacity displayed. Except that no state, without its consent, can be deprived of its equal suffrage in the senate the constitution may be amended upon the concurrence of two-thirds of both houses and the ratification of the legislatures or conventions of the several states, or through a federal convention when applied for by the legislatures of two-thirds of the states and upon like ratification. The ultimate sovereignity may be thus called into play by a slow and deliberate process, which gives time for mere hypothesis to exhaust itself and the sober second thought of every part of the country to be asserted.

"We have considered the act only in respect of the tax on income derived from real estate and from invested personal property, and have not commented on so much of it as bears on gains or profits from business, privileges or employments, in view of the instances in which taxation on business privileges or employments has assumed the guise of an excise tax and been sustained as such. Being of opinion that so much of the sections of the law as lay a tax on income from real and personal property is invalid, we are brought to the question of the effect of that conclusion upon these sections as a whole. It is elementary that the same statute may be in part constitutional and in part unconstitutional, and if the parts are wholly independent of each other, that which is constitutional may stand while that which is unconstitutional will be rejected.

Must Stand or Fall as a Whole.

"And in the case before us there is no question as to the validity of this act, except sections 27 to 37 inclusive, which relate to the subject which has been under discussion, and as to them we think the rule laid down by Chief Justice Shaw in Warren vs. Charlestown is applicable, that if the different parts 'are so mutually connected with and dependent on each other, as conditions, considerations or compensations for each other, as to warrant a belief that the legislature intended them as a whole, and that if all could not be carried into effect the legislature would not pass the residue independently, and some parts are unconstitutional, all the provisions which are thus dependent, conditional or connected, must fall with them.'

Defeats Intent of Law.

"According to the census the true valuation of real and personal property in the United States in 1890 was $65,037,091,191, of which real estate, with improvements thereon, made up $39,544,544,343. Of course, from the latter must be deducted, in applying these sections, all unproductive property and all property whose net yield does not exceed $4,000; but even with such deductions it is evident that the income from realty formed a vital part of the scheme for taxation embodied therein. If that be stricken out, and also the income from all vested personal property, bonds, stocks, investments of all kinds, it is obvious that by far the largest part of the anticipated revenue would be eliminated, and this would leave the burden of the tax to be borne by professions, trades, employments or vocations, and in that what was intended as a tax on capital would remain in substance a tax on occupations and labor. We cannot believe that such was the intention of congress.

"We do not mean to say that an act laying by apportionment a direct tax on all real estate and personal property or the income thereof might not also lay excise taxes on business, privileges, employments and vocations. But this is not such an act, and the scheme must be considered as a whole.

"Being invalid as to the greater part, and falling, as the tax would if any part were held valid, in a direction which could not have been contemplated except in connection with the taxation considered as an entirety, we are constrained to conclude that sections 27 to 37, inclusive, of the act, which became a law without the signature of the president, are unconstitutional."

Something of a Sensation.

Dissenting opinions were read by Justices Harlan, Brown, Jackson and White.

The four dissenting opinions were in reality the sensation of the day, for each breathed a spirit of defiance to the opinions of the majority not often developed in the court of last resort. Justice Harlan denounced the decision of the court in unmeasured terms as a calamity and an unheard-of interpretation of the constitution. He did not hesitate to declare that the people should proceed at once to amend the constitution, so that in the future congress might tax incomes if the emergency should arise. He was filled with violent indignation at the action of the court, which took away from congress the right to tax the rich and left to the legislative body the right to tax industry only. He was fairly trembling with suppressed emotion when he declared his solemn opinion that this action of the court was of the kind which in other nations and times had overturned governments and placed power in the hands of mobs.

Justice Jackson pronounced the decision a calamity to the nation and disaster to the government, because it took away a vital part of its taxing power. Justice Brown also denounced the decision of the majority as something little short of monstrous. Justice White also dissented, and his opinion boiled down was that the majority of the court had been guilty of a terrible mistake in law and an outrage on good public policy.

Money Will Be Refunded.

Washington, May 21.—Internal Revenue Commissioner Miller says that under section 3,220 of the revised statutes all the moneys paid in on account of the income tax will be refunded to the payers by the treasury department without delay. Acting under this section internal revenue taxes wrongfully collected are daily refunded by his office, and the same action will be taken as to repaying the income tax collected. It amounts to only $73,000.

OSCAR MAY ESCAPE.

His Trial Goes Over Until Next Session of Court—Taylor's Trial Begun.

London, May 21.—The Old Bailey court was crowded Monday at 11 o'clock when Justice Wills, accompanied by the lord mayor of London, Rt. Hon. Sir Joseph Ronals, and several aldermen took their seats upon the bench preparatory to the commencement of the second trial of Oscar Wilde. Sir Edward Clarke, Q. C., counsel for Wilde, immediately made an elaborate argument in favor of having Wilde tried separately. The judge agreed to this and decided to try Taylor first. It is now probable that Wilde's case will go over until next session of the Central criminal court and there is evidently but a slight chance of his conviction.

TO CELEBRATE IN LONDON.

Americans to Make a Patriotic Demonstration July 4.

London, May 21.—The membership of the recently formed American society of London is growing apace and is now over 300, including in that number nearly every prominent American in London. The American society, formed on the basis of the Ohio society of New York, is preparing for a grand patriotic demonstration, which will be held July 4. One of the largest banqueting halls in London has been engaged for the occasion and it is estimated that 600 Americans will be present at the banquet. United States Ambassador Bayard will preside and a number of the leading public men in the United States have been invited to come here and address the meeting.

Effect of the Decision.

Washington, May 21.—In the opinion of the highest officials of the treasury department there will be no extra session of congress as a result of the income tax decision. The deficiency each month has been between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000, but there is a balance of $85,000,000 in currency on hand, which will fully cover the estimated deficiency between now and December 2, when congress meets. This calculation does not include the gold reserve, which, according to the regular treasury statement issued, amounts to a little over $97,000,000.

To Hang June 21.

St. Paul, Minn., May 21. — Gov. Clough Monday morning signed the death warrant of Harry T. Hayward, the murderer of Kate Ging, fixing the date of execution for June 21.

Spring Makes Me Tired

To many people Spring and its duties mean an aching head, tired limbs, and throbbing nerves. Just as the milder weather comes, the strength begins to wane and "that tired feeling" is the complaint of all.

The reason for this condition is found in the deficient quality of the blood. During the winter, owing to various causes, the blood becomes loaded with impurities and loses its richness and vitality. Consequently, as soon as the bracing effect of cold air is lost, there is languor and lack of energy. The cure will be found in purifying and enriching the blood.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is the greatest and best spring medicine because it is the greatest and best blood purifier. It overcomes that tired feeling because it makes pure, rich blood. It gives strength to nerves and muscles because it endows the blood with new powers of nourishment. It creates an appetite, tones and strengthens the stomach and digestive organs, and thus builds up the whole system and prepares it to meet the change to warmer weather.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is a medicine upon which you may depend. It is the only true blood purifier prominently before the public eye to-day. It has a record of cures unequaled in the history of medicine. It is the medicine of which so many people write, "Hood's Sarsaparilla does all that it is claimed to do." You can take Hood's Sarsaparilla with the confident expectation that it will give you pure blood and renewed health. Take it now.

TRAVEL IN JAPAN.

An American Tourist's Stirring Trip on a River Boat.

At Tokimata I engaged a boat with five men to take me down the rapids as far as the Tokaido; the river was running high, and they would not do it for less than twenty-four yen—a good price for a journey of only ten or twelve hours; but when you remember that it takes them ten days or a fortnight to haul the boat back, it does not seem excessive. Don Pedro's remark, "What need the bridge much wider than the flood?" does not apply to most of the Japanese rivers; usually they are just a trickle of water among a wide bed of pebbles, which is filled after heavy rains with a raging torrent, but Lake Suwa serves as a reservoir for the Tenryugawa, and it always has enough water to be navigable. The boats used on it are about thirty feet long, flat-bottomed and flat-sided, with a square stern and a high, pointed bow; they are very loosely built and flexible, and the bottom boards are so thin that they wabble like a sheet of paper when passing over rough water or shallows. A heavy foot would break through them, and it is necessary to tread only on the bamboos which are laid lengthwise, resting on the cross-ribs.

My baggage was piled in the middle of the boat, and a seat arranged on it for Matsuba and myself, one man took the long stern oar while the other four worked in the bows, and within a few minutes of the start we were plunging down between high cliffs, charging at rocks which we only avoided by a few inches, swirling round in eddies at the foot of one rapid while the men got breath for the next, and until we stopped for our mid-day meal at the little village of Nakabe there was no time to sketch, or think, or do anything but enjoy the wild exciting race. The river twists, between high mountains, down a gorge with such sharp curves that it is often impossible to see any exit, and our boat would rush down, heading straight for a cliff against which the water dashed furiously; while one man in the bows whacked the side with his paddle for luck and then stood ready with a pole, the other three pulled like mad, and just when I thought "we must come to grief this time," she would suddenly turn and swish round the corner into smoother water. The rapids continued to be amusing, though the fun was not quite so fast and furious, all the way to Kajima, where the mountains end and a broad plain begins; below here the river still ran swiftly, but smoothly, divided into several channels by long gravel banks, on which gray willows and bamboos grew, and snipe and herons congregated. We met strings of boats being laboriously towed along. The wind generally blows up stream, and they are able, on these lower reaches, to help themselves by hoisting a sail, but I shall never understand how they get their boats back through those upper rapids. The pace is tremendous; we did the ninety miles from Tokimata to Nakanomachi in ten hours of actual traveling, though the latter part of the journey was on comparatively sluggish water.—Alfred Parsons, in Harper's Magazine.

MEMORIAL HYMN.

COME strew the flowers, twine the wreaths,
We'll place the brightest flowers of May
Around our honored dead.

'Tis fitting thus to decorate
And lay the sweet perfume
Of flowers that bloom around our homes,
Upon the soldier's tomb.

This sad, sweet hour brings to our minds
The parting and the pain,
And all the sad heart-breaking days
Ere we should meet again.

Ah! those were days when parents' hearts
Seemed breaking with their grief,
When hair grew gray, and toiling hands
Shook like the falling leaf.

When wives and children toiled by day
And wept and prayed at night,
And sisters knelt with blanching cheek,
Prayed: "God defend the right."

The war is o'er; we purchased peace,
But oh, at what a price!
All o'er the land the mounds are proof
Of freedom's sacrifice.

But while we place earth's fairest flowers
Above our home-brought brave,
Our hearts go out in sympathy
To many an unmarked grave.

In honoring one we honor all
Brave soldiers of our land,
For just as dear are those who rest
Beneath the southern sand.

Then place the flowers with gentle hand
Upon the velvet sod,
And pray that all may meet again
Around the throne of God.

—Mary W. Tucker, in Ohio Farmer.

FOUND IN A COAT POCKET.

THE 30th of May was raw and chill in Aurora, a small village near the edge of the northern pineries. The sun had hidden behind a cloud, and a keen blast from off the great lake swept over the country like a parting taunt from the long, furious winter that had just taken leave. A sharp frost had touched the gardens the night before, and the meager bounty of bud and blossom that they yielded for the day seemed to visibly revive and freshen under warm, human touch. All things partook of the influence of the day and weather. The somber forest that encompassed the place took on new dignity and gloom. Houses and fields, which a month before had been robed in an enchanted mantle of glistening white, and a month hence would be gracious with vines and flowers, stood out upon the landscape in naked ugliness. The men and women who had gathered to do honor to the memory of their fallen heroes were wrapped in sad retrospect, looking again into open graves, or living over anew that period of heartbreaking suspense that had ended in tidings of suffering and death. Even the veterans who in a grim school had learned lessons of fortitude and cheer were singularly depressed, and forgot the gay jests and badinage with which they were accustomed to silence painful memories.

Aurora and her outlying district had sent three companies to the war. Barely a dozen men walked in the procession this day. Some of the sorry remnant that returned had gone further west in search of health or fortune. A few were shut up in their homes, too weak or too broken to venture out; of those who answered the roll-call the majority were ailing or infirm, and muffled to the ears to propitiate the physical man for the audacity of the spiritual.

John Sexton was one of the younger men among the veterans, but he had stepped to the door that morning, viewed the sky and faced the biting wind, then went to a cedar chest and took from it a garment that had lain there undisturbed for many years—a blue overcoat, soiled and faded, and with a bullet-hole through the right sleeve that hung empty by his side.

The procession formed at the head of the main street, before the old church in which the memorial services had been held. There were memories clustering about that old frame church. John Sexton recalled some of them. The first call for recruits had been made there; the fiery, impetuous speeches, the rush of youngsters, amid the cheers of men and the sobs of women. He had been among the first to enlist, a beardless boy with a man's heart, kindled with patriotic fire. Within the same gray walls, at the parting supper given to his regiment the night before it marched, he had shyly asked Hetty Plympton to be his wife some day, and she, half laughing and half weeping, had told him that when he came back wearing his epaulets she would marry him. And he had gone away glad and proud, buoyed up with hope. The epaulets seemed so easy to win, the chances of disaster or failure so remote. Then there came the hard discipline of the camp, the long, forced marches, the carnage of battle, the secret night mission, the rifle ball that cut short his military career.

He recalled how he came back. Her face had been the first he had seen on his return. Descending from the car, maimed, feeble, wasted by long sickness, his head reeling from the exhaustion of the journey, kind hands assisting him to the platform, he had caught sight of her, standing apart, pale, silent, her eyes intent upon him with an expression that he could not then understand, but that he afterward construed into a shrinking horror of the wreck he had become. A crowd of people had surged in between them—neighbors, friends, indifferent acquaintances, the majority with hearty words of sympathy on their lips; a few moved by idle curiosity to see how foully the accidents of fortune had plundered him. One old woman whose son had fallen on the battlefield had cried over him in the place of his own mother, whose frail thread of life had snapped in the tension of the first few months after he had gone to the front.

In the midst of this tumult of pity and sorrow he had again had a glimpse of Hetty, her gaze withdrawn from him, calmly penciling some memoranda in a little silk-bound book that she carried, and he had wondered if she were making note of some finery she intended to wear at the next party or church festival or was taking down the date of an engagement she had made for a boat ride or dance, bitterly contrasting her gay life of pleasure with the heavy burden of care and perplexity that had descended upon him. Yet a few seconds later there had been a moment, a strange, bewildering moment when she had paused before him, looking into his eyes again with a mute, beseeching look, striving to speak, her trembling voice dying away in broken utterances. One instant she had put up her little hand to rearrange some trifling disorder in his dress, as a loving woman might have done for her disabled hero; in the next she had slipped away out of his life forever.

He had taken his place with his comrades, behind the wheezy string band that led the procession, preceded only by the high dignitaries of the village and the carriage containing the orator of the day. Citizens were grouped on the platform, watching the line form while waiting for their carriages. For the instant, the old soldiers, whose services were forgotten for the rest of the year, were the center of attention. John Sexton saw Miss Mehitable Plympton standing on the church steps. He lifted his hat courteously, albeit somewhat awkwardly, with his left hand, and calmly regarded her. She was really a very well-preserved woman for her age, but there was a wrinkle forming on her forehead, between her eyebrows, and her hair was getting grayer on the temples. The crow's feet that had begun to show at the corners of her eyes three years before were perceptibly deepening. Thus he deliberately remarked the ravages of time on her pretty face, as he had invariably done on the rare occasions when he encountered her, for more than a score of years. Did she note the small bald spot on his head, or the slight limp where the rheumatism had laid hold of him, he wondered?

John Sexton could not have told why he made this cold-blooded examination of the vanishing charms of her who had once been his ideal of all womanly worth and loveliness. It may have been unconscious revenge for the manner in which she treated him. It may have been to prove to himself that his heart was hardened against her. It may have been the innate savagery that lurks in all men.

Marching along the weary road to the cemetery he recalled the rest. In those days of his weakness and despair, others, men and women, had sought him and endeavored to cheer him. She had never come. When he met her at the houses of mutual friends she had treated him with a rigor that had taught him only too well the changed relation that he, a cripple, occupied toward her. Other problems confronted him. He had found himself a useless, helpless man, depending upon a brother, and barely tolerated in the house by his brother's wife. He could perform no active labor, was incapacitated for a trade, and had not the means to fit himself for a learned profession. He drifted about from one light vocation to another, filling each indifferently, more and more oppressed with a sense of his uselessness—he, a young, ambitious man, filled with energy and industry that he could find no means to apply. He taught himself to write with his left hand, and to write rapidly and well, and the government for which he had sacrificed so much at length took pity on him and gave him a place in the land office of the district. Withdrawn from society, with few friends and no intimates, he led the life of a recluse. Miss Mehitable, on the other hand, kept pace with the world and all good works. Years had silenced her girlish gayety, and lent her a certain gravity and severity of demeanor that in no wise detracted from the esteem in which she was held. Sexton watched the growth of this tendency as dispassionately as he had witnessed the fading of her youthful bloom.

"She has rounded forty now," he said to himself. "Soon her eyesight will begin to fail. When she puts on spectacles her temper will begin to grow acid."

The graveyard was on a little knoll, crowned with maples, which were beginning to leaf. As they moved up the long avenue the sun broke through the clouds, sifting down through the delicate green foliage and pendulous clusters of seed pods, heightening the brilliant colors of the national flags that marked the soldiers' graves, and kissing the purple violets and shell-pink anemones, nature's own tribute, that crept close to the mounds. The warmth and rejoicing of a northern spring lifted the pall from each heart. Neighbor looked kindly sympathy to neighbor. The tragedy and woe of the great conflict were put resolutely from sight. Valor and glory became the topic of the hour.

John Sexton remained silent and preoccupied. A slight incident had disturbed him and aroused in him a sense of anxiety and discomfort which he did not attempt to analyze. Toiling up the steep ascent, Mehitable Plympton had stumbled, and his arm had saved her from falling. How thin and wasted the hand that had clung to him for a moment; how slight the weight that he had sustained. With grim satisfaction he had watched the tokens of failing youth in her keep pace with his own accumulating infirmities. Beyond this he had never looked until now. She had seated herself upon the bank and insisted that he should go on. Her panting breath as she leaned against a tree told how her frail strength was exhausted. A nameless foreboding oppressed him as he left her.

A comrade observed his depression and approached him, addressing him genially, touching the burnt hole in his sleeve, in mute recognition of its import, then lifting his hand to smooth down the pocket lapel on the breast of his old military coat. A paper rustled in the pocket.

"Important dispatches?" queried the other, in smiling recognition of the service in which the old coat had been worn.

"If they were, I'm afraid their usefulness would be past," returned Sexton lightly, idly thrusting his hand into the pocket and wondering what relic of army days would come to light.

He drew out a couple of tiny sheets, gilded on three edges, a jagged line on the fourth showing where they had been hastily torn from a binding. Across these was scrawled a message:

"I will marry you to-night, if you want me, John. Your empty sleeve is more to me than all the epaulets in the world."

There was no date or signature, but he knew Hetty Plympton's hand. What did it mean? When had she written it? How did it come there? He remained standing, stupefied, bewildered, while the rest moved on. Suddenly the explanation flashed upon him. He remembered the scene at the railroad station on the day of his return from the south; how she had turned aside to write in the little book; her light touch on his breast when she had stood before him.

It was well for Hetty Plympton that the place where she had sat down to rest was a by-path, away from the line of march. John Sexton would not have hesitated or delayed his errand if there had been a thousand people about her. She rose at the sound of his quick tread. He held out the little scraps of paper to her.

"Hetty, I have but just found this. I never saw it before. My darling, what must you have thought?"

Can love and joy find resurrection, full and perfect, after they have been entombed for a quarter of a century? Aye, if clean hands have laid them away, and purity and faith kept guard over them. Swift came the awakening, gathering force and strength from all the years through which they had slumbered. Miss Hetty's face bloomed into something so like its girlish beauty that she was as one transfigured to John Sexton, whose eyes lost their tired, strained look and recovered their youthful fire, while his figure straightened, and he seemed in a moment to renew his lost estate of youth and courage.

Yet they accepted their happiness reverently, as becomes those who receive a precious gift, long withheld.

With a low exclamation, like the cry of some hurt creature, long suffering, that has at last reached covert, Hetty laid her head upon his breast, and he folded his arm about her.

"Sweetheart," he said, gently, "your pledge has been slow to reach me. The day has been long and lonely. Will you keep your promise to-night?"

The shadows were lengthening when they turned their faces homeward, but the radiance of the setting sun was in their faces.—Flora H. Longhead, in Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

"HETTY, I HAVE JUST FOUND THIS."

The Cause of Her Trouble.

"George!" It wasn't what she said so much as the way in which she said it. She took the word and drew it out until it was a long, tremulous filament of sweetness. Yet there was a tinge of reproof in her tone. "George!" She only said it once in reality, but it is customary with story writers to say "George" twice under these circumstances.

"What is it?"

"You have been squeezing my hand with great regularity and emphasis for some time."

"I know it," he replied, with the frankness that was characteristic of his manly nature.

"Please don't do it any more," and her voice dropped almost to a whisper.

"No more!" This sounded like heart throbs of anguish (whatever they are) and his form shook with emotion.

"Why not?"

"Because—" she faltered.

"Go on."

"Because I have got a blister on my little finger."—Tit-Bits.

—Aqua Pura Costs Money.—Customer—"Fifty cents for filling this prescription? Why, at the drug store down the street they charge me only a quarter." Druggist—"That's all it's worth at that store, ma'am. They put about four cents' worth of drugs in the bottle, and then fill it up with water. I put in the same drugs, and fill the bottle with the finest aqua pura. Thanks. Anything else?"—Chicago Tribune.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Prison Commissioners.

The governor has appointed the commissioners provided for by the Schurmeier prison labor law. This measure provides for a commission of three, one the labor commissioner of the state, one to be a member of the board of managers of the prison. The two appointed are F. W. Temple, of Blue Earth City, and T. L. Schurmeier, of St. Paul. The business of this commission will be to determine how many prisoners may be employed at any one occupation. The law provides that not more than 15 per cent of the number of citizens employed in any occupation in this state shall be set to work in the prison. That is to say, if there are 3,000 shoemakers in the state, not more than 450 convicts shall be employed at the same work. It is claimed that under the provisions of the law all shoe dealers and their employes can be counted in this matter, and that the commission can, if it chooses, put every convict in the prison at work at that industry. It is not likely, however, that this will be done. as Mr. Schurmeier, the author ot the bill, is one of three commissioners, and would oppose it, as would Labor Commissioner Powers.

To Push Things.

Ed. A. Paradis, chairman of the executive committee of the Minnesota Editorial association, has been in conference with the Commercial club and the manufacturers of St. Paul and Minneapolis and of the northwest, with the object of bringing together the manufacturers and newspaper publishers to discuss plans and measures for pushing northwestern manufacturing interests.

The plan has met with a cordial response from a large number of manufacturers, who have been consulted in the matter, and it finds equal favor with the newspapers of the state.

It is expected that there will be over 100 country newspaper men at the conference, which will be held at the Commercial club, St. Paul, on the evening of Friday, June 7.

Invitations are now being prepared to the meeting, which will be sent to the newspapers and manufacturers of the northwest.

Appointed.

Gov. Clough appointed the commission that will select the site for the new insane hospital provided for by the last legislature. The commission is made up of one member from each of the seven congressional districts, and is as follows:

First District—C. E. Bondy, Eyota.

Second District—J. H. Block, St. Peter.

Third District—A. J. Carlson, East Union.

Fifth District—O. C. Merriman, Minneapolis.

Sixth District—Alvah Eastman, St. Cloud.

Seventh District—Henry Hooper, Stephen.

It is expected that a meeting of the commission will be called soon, when it will organize and prepare to receive and cousider propositions for sites.

AFTER THIRTY YEARS.

The Buckeye State Contributes the Story of a Veteran's Search.

How Fred Taylor, a Member of the Gallant 189th N. Y., V. I., Finally Found What He Has Sought Since the War Closed.

(From the Ashtabula, Ohio, Beacon.)

Mr. Fred Taylor was born and brought up near Elmira, N. Y., and from there enlisted in the 189th regiment, N. Y., V. I., with which he went through the war and saw much hard service. Owing to exposure and hardships during the service, Mr. Taylor contracted chronic diarrhœa from which he has suffered now over 30 years, with absolutely no help from physicians. By nature he was a wonderfully vigorous man. Had he not been, his disease and the experiments of the doctors had killed him long ago. Laudanum was the only thing which afforded him relief. He had terrible headaches, his nerves were shattered, he could not sleep an hour a day on an average, and he was reduced to a skeleton. A year ago he and his wife sought relief in a change of climate and removed to Geneva, O., but the change in health came not. Finally on the recommendation of F. J. Hoffner, the leading druggist of Geneva, who was cognizant of similar cases which Pink Pills had cured, Mr. Taylor was persuaded to try a box. "As a drowning man grasps at a straw so I took the pills," says Mr. Taylor, "but with no morehope of rescue. But after thirty years of suffering and fruitless search for relief I at last found it in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The day after I took the first pills I commenced to feel better and when I had taken the first box I was in fact a new man." That was two months ago. Mr. Taylor has since taken more of the pills and his progress is steady and he has the utmost confidence in them. He has regained full control of his nerves and sleeps as well as in his youth. Color is coming back to his parched veins and he is gaining flesh and strength rapidly. He is now able to do considerable outdoor work.

As he concluded narrating his sufferings, experience and cure to a Beacon reporter, Mrs. Taylor, who has been his faithful helpmeet these many years, said she wished to add her testimony in favor of Pink Pills. "To the pills alone is due the credit of raising Mr. Taylor from a helpless invalid to the man he is to-day," said Mrs. Taylor. Both Mr. and Mrs. Taylor cannot find words to express the gratitude they feel or recommend too highly Pink Pills to suffering humanity. Any inquiries addressed to them at Geneva, O., regarding Mr. Taylor's case they will cheerfully answer, as they are anxious that the whole world shall know what Pink Pills have done for them and that suffering humanity may be benefited thereby.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

COACHEE WAS A WIZARD.

But His Magic Couldn't Keep Him Out of Jail.

Belief in the magic art is by no means extinct in the department of the Pas de Calais.

The latest sorcerer is a coachman, who, by some peculiar process of reasoning, is regarded by the ignorant as a past master in the occult sciences.

One of his victims was a girl who was extremely anxious to be wedded to the object of her affection.

The young man could not be induced to come forward, so she consulted the jehu, who told her that she would be married in the beginning of February. She put a certain sum of money down as an installment, and, although disappointed, was returning with the remainder when the police interfered and arrested the jehu.

One venerable dame declared that she was delighted with the magician, as he evicted an evil spirit from her habitation.

She had called on him with her daughter, and he had told them that the house was bewitched.

On the receipt of the sum of eighteen francs the coachman paid her a visit, and, after shutting himself up in the stable for ten minutes, he emerged with the joyful tidings that he had discovered a "fatal toad" and had driven it off the premises.

From that moment, the old woman declared, she had been at peace, and she wound up with the expression of her gratitude and of her confidence in the great sorcerer.

In answer to the questions put to him the jehu said that he had learned it all in a little book he had lost. There were spells and incantations.

"Very good. Repeat one," said the presiding judge.

"But they are in Latin," the man replied.

"Never mind; go on. We shall understand all the same," exclaimed the judge, encouragingly.

The improvised magician, however, could not get out a word, but hung his head amid roars of laughter, and soon afterward he was sentenced to two months' imprisonment.—London World.

Got What She Asked For.

She was buying a trunk.

"I want one," she said, 'that can not be opened by the regulation trunk key that everybody uses."

"All right," said the dealer, "I will see that you have one."

The next day the trunk was sent home, and a few hours later the purchaser appeared at the trunk store.

"I told you," she said, "that I wanted a trunk that could not be opened by the regulation trunk key."

"That's what I sent you."

"Why, any trunk key in the house will unlock that trunk."

"You said the regulation trunk key, have you tried a hairpin?"

Then she went home and wept when she found that she couldn't unlock that trunk with a hairpin.—Detroit Free Press.

Shyness of the Southern Fox.

The southern fox is fully as cunning as his New England brothers, and knows where his protection lies. When the short yelp of the pursuing hounds warns the fleeing fox that the dogs are close upon his heels, he, with almost human intelligence, makes for the "bunch of stock." The mules or sheep, when the fox puts in his appearance among them, make a break and scamper helter skelter, keeping up the run until brought to a standstill by a fence or some other obstruction. The sly fox keeps right among them, and the loosening up of the soil caused by the feet of the other animals covers the scent of the fox, giving him temporary advantage over the pursuing hounds.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

DELANO DIARY

—It is said that the popular air with Mr. C. G. Roosen is not now "Sweet Marie" but rather "creamery."

—Louis Kunkle has purchased the house formerly occupied by Frank Metz, on the west side, and is fixing it up preparatory to occupyfng it as a residence.

—Quite a number of Delanoites, and thore living near, have made trips to the county seat to pay up their taxes, the first day of June 10 per cent penalty will be affixed to delinquent taxes.

—Some of the South Third Street residents are seriously discussing the propriety of looking out for a street committee next year who will put a little work in their end of town. It is hard to please everybody.

—The village marshal who carries the key to the City Hall and the electric lights connected therewith, could not be found Saturday evening, so after standing around in the cold until tired the crowd adjourned to the residence of Mrs. Chance by invitation, to complete arrangements for observing Decoration Day. George P. Schaffer was chosen President and T. J. Catlin Secretary, of the evening and committees appointed as found in another place in this paper.

—Several young men are being continually complained of by a couple of elderly men in town; the charge is calling bad names and taunting with language to provoke the old men to wrath. It is wrong boys. It looks bad. Those on the streets witnessing such things, as a rule, have more respect for the gray-headed patriarchs than for those who continually tantalize, and make life miserable for them. The police should protect the citizens of our village from such occurrences as are almost daily and nightly taking place.

—On Wednesday morning Roosen's new creamery was started up. The Health officer. Village electrician, a telegraph operator, several engineers and the editor of the GAZETTE witnessed the performance of the separator, for the first time. 24 customers brought milk; in all 3076 pounds. This was sufficient to make a good start with. It is expected that the creamery will be patronized from quite a distance. Already the proprietor is figuring on getting another separator if it is needed. Everything is new. The butter maker seems inclined to do his best and it looks as if the Delano creamery would be able to gobble up one of the prizes for Creamery butter at the State Fair next fall.

—The village council should reconstruct some of their committees. Notably the one on village poor. Old Mr. Wicklund has been confined to his bed, and in a delerious condition for several days, and although neighbors have been trying to take care of him, and have appealed to the committee on sick; they received no encouragement. One member of the committee even referred inquirers to the Recorder to find out who the committee is, and refiused to act until the council should come together on Monday evening, though that would be several days. Public officers should attend to such urgent calls as these. And a committee should have power to meet the needs of the community, and energy enough to act in emergencies. Mr. and Mrs. W. have been recipients of village poor funds for years and should not be neglected now through the negligence of committee men.

LATER.—Mr. Wicklund was taken to Buffalo, Wednesday and sent to the Hospital for Insane, at St. Peter.

—Yesterday was Ascention day, and was duly observed by the Catholic people.

—It is surpising how the average Delano belle can get about when placed on wheels.

—Fine fish for frying floods our market frequently. Few folks but are fond of such food.

—Wilson's Players at the City Hall Monday night, May 27. Admission 25 cents. Free dance after the show.

—Before selling any more cigarettes to school children, we would advise some of our dealers to read the late law on the subject, found in today's supplement.

—The name and place of residence of those appointed by Gov. Clough to act on the committee to locate the new hospital for insane can be foun on ahe of this paper.

—From the amount of lumber being received and sent out of Delano it looks as if the country would soon be as thickly settled as some parts of Minnapolis or St. Paul.

—An article on the decision of the United States Supreme Court on the invalidity of the income tax law appears on the inside of this paper. The money collected under that law is to be refunded to those paying it in.

—There will be an art social Tuesday evening, May 28th, in the City Hall, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. church. Ice cream and cake will be served. A short programme will be rendered. Everybody visit the art gallery.

—Urbon Kornek, who was arrested and taken to Minneapolis for breaking into a car, circulated a petition here today asking mercy from the judge who tries his case tomorrow. His paper was signed by several of the leading business men in town.

—Neighbor C. J. Buckley seems to be forging to the front as an inventor. Not content with giving to the craft a wonderful press for printing roll paper he now has an invention for cutting the printed paper into sheets as it comes from the press. The same machine can be used for cutting white paper as it comes from the paper mill.

—The laws are issued this week. From the huge lot of paper required to convey to our readers the laws made by our Solons during last winter's term we should judge somebody did some work. Twenty-eight pages of laws make quite a volume. If you thoroughly master these before the next grist is ground out you can hang out your shingle as a pretty fair lawyer.

—Street Commissioner Brenner has finally succeeded in making the street committee know that when they want any grading done the proper thing to do is to stake out the ground and show him the grade. He don't propose in future to be more than boss and all the hands. He draws the line at playing surveyor and acting as compass.

—Notices have been posted calling the old soldiers to meet at the City Hall, Saturday, May, 25, at 3 o'clock, P. M. promptly. We understand it is proposed to organize a G. A. R. post, and to make arrangements to turn out in full force on Memorial Day. Old soldiers are growing fewer each return of the anniversary of the establishment of this National Holiday. Yet quite a number could be mustered here if all turn out.

—The higher grades of the public schools will have completed their labors for the present term next Friday. The lower grades did not begin for a month later so have that much longer now to make up. The school has made considerable progress during the year past. Examination papers have been satisfactory in most cases. The graduating class is not as large as that of last year but is putting forth its best efforts to have as good commencement exercises as its predecessor. Prof. Maria Sanford, of the State University, has been secured to make the oration.

—At a meeting at the City Hall last night Messrs. C. G. Roosen, I. Gutzwiller, J. E. Borsch, M. A. O'Hair and Dr. Shrader, were appointed as a committee to look into the chances of getting the Fourth Hospital for Insane located at Delano. There is nothing like making an effort, and it is about time Wright county's rights had been recognized in some way. The law requires the new asylum to be located handy to St. Paul and Minneapolis. It is but an hours ride to the latter, and the best of railroad facilities. Our village is one of the healthiest in the state, well drained and has many other advantages for the location of such an institution.

—As it seems so difficult for our neighbor on the other corner, the Eagle, to speak with any degree of accuracy on most subjects, we would suggert she try the system of English grammar recommended by M. John Phoenix, and which is something like this. Let 100 represent perfection and 1, represent the lowest degree. Then when using adjectives use the number which you think would meet the case you are talking about. For instance if a young lady says, fine day sir; instead of saying pretty fine or tolerably so, you say yes madam, 100 fine or 60 fine as the case may be. Or one, might say of the Eagle: she was a 62½ fine, 21 Old Bird before her 33½ beautiful feathers were shot off by the 100 strictly true articles that have been hurled at her 99 defenceless head; her head becoming so 98 terribly bald through her own 87 vile, 86 slanderous innuendoes; and 99 untruthful statements about her 99 good and 100 respectable neighbors. While at the same time her 50 good reputation has suffered from her 97 wicked actions until now with some it is 99 pretty bad on some subjects.

—Rev. J. W. Powell will deliver the oration on Memorial Day.

—Everybody interested in celebrating the 4th of July is requested to be present at the City Hall, Saturday, May 25, at 8 p. m.

—While letting contracts why don't the Village Council let the contract for printing? Don't all answer at once.

—The committee on waterworks seem to be in trouble. Bids were called for, and it is reported that C. W. Kerrick bid $525. Coffin & Babb $499. The latter firm was notified that their bid had been accepted; but before the contract war completed they were told that another bid from C. W. Kerrick had been received for $485, fifty dollarr cheaper than his first bid and they could have a chance of going under tnat. They didn't appreciate the privilege, and at last accounts the contract for the extension of the waterworks had not been iet.

All committees are requested to meet at the City Hall, on Monday evening, May 27, at 8 P. M.

County Cullings.

Roads throughout the county are now in splendid condition. The dry weather is beneficial in some directions.

Senator Culkin is so far recovered from his attack of typhoid fever as be about town again. Never very robust his late tussle has left him still less so.

If the edifer of the Waverly Tribune will induce his correspondent who quoted some words that reminded us of an old and familiar poem to publish, in the next issue of his paper, the entire "American Classic" "Bret Harte's parody" "the only genuine sequel to Maud Muller" he will greatly oblige us, and quite a number of others who are wholly unfamiliar with it.

We are in receipt of a copy of the Premium List for the Thirty Sixth Annual Fair of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society to occur Sept., 9th to 14th, on the State Fair Grounds at Hamline. Over $4000. is offered for premiums on horses, as much more for cattle, and other departments are well looked after.

Write to the secretary E. W. Randall, Hamline, Minn. and get a Premium List for yourself, and take something to the Fair. Let Wright County be well represented in all departments. Our dairy interests should take a front rank. We should be well to the front in agricultural products of most kinds. Our stock is good. Old Wright should carry off her share of premiums and honors.

Ben Scott formerly of the Montrose News went away from that village sometime ago, leaying a number of individuals who would like to see him a few dollars worth. It seems he is now arrested under the name Wilson, of the Mankato Morning News, and is likely to take up his residence at Stillwater for a term of years Perhaps our Montrose friends could find him there, after he is established in his new home.

John Turngren, one of the sturdy farmers of northwestern Franklin noted for his ability to think and act for himself was in town yesterday evening. He thinks the fate of the country hangs mostly on the farmer's shoulders. If their crops are good and prices fair times will be good. If they fail to have something to dispose of we will have to grovel along in financial straits for another twelve months.

Wright County's Democracy seems to be groping about in the dark, waiting for something to turn up, so that they may know which side the to get on. It is a poor way to obtain recognition. If Democrats in this county are to be honored with any favors, or have their wishes even respected, they should come together, organize, and put themselves on a firm working basis now, while they are at liberty to help make a party platform for the state and the nation, There is neither honor nor profit in idling away the time until all other parties have made arrangements for the next campaign, and a few chronic office seekers, and Democrats for revenue only, aided by some powers behind the throne that don't care for principles so long as they can select men to win on whatever ticket they may happen to run, have tinkered up a milk and water kind of a platform that muy be read to mean almost anything the reader sees fit to have it mean, and then like a lot of drowning rats all crawl on that can, the balance taking refuge on some plank that looks safest to them in the other parties that have had the moral courage and honor to ray what uhey do want.

Among Our Exchanges.

The Rev. Frank Stacy says that Minneapolis resembles heaven in the fact that a river runs through each. But the celestial stream is probably not dammed as often as the Minneapolis creek.—Minnapolis Times.

Many of our Stearns county people, especially those of twenty or thirty years age, well remember the late Capt. Eugene M. Wilson, of Minneapolis. Later he was elected to Congress, and was very popular with his party, for "Gene" was a genial friend and companion. A Toronto telegram of the 17th says: "The Post announces that a marriage has been arranged between Capt. Fitzherbert of the Royal Berkshire regiment, and Mary, daughter of Eugene M. Wilson, of Minneapolis." —St. Cloud Times.

Debs & Stacy.

The Hennepin County People's Party League, at its meeting last night, decided to get Eugene V. Debs to lecture in the Exposition building, if possible, when he visits St. Cloud, early in June, to adjust A. R. U. matters there. It was decided to invite Frank Stacy to give a talk on "Money" at the next meeting of the league.—Minneapolis Times.

TARIFF IS A TAX.

Minnesota Now Has Two U. S. Senators who are aware of that fact.

THE LeSueur county people seem to think they have a big supply of newspapers, the recently started one making the eighth. Wright county can go them one better as she counts nine.

THREE deaths from rabies due to the bites of dogs, have recently occurred in St. Paul, and on recommendation of the health department, Mayor Smith has ordered all dogs muzzled. There is nothing like an ounce of prevention in cases of this kind and full measure should be given.

SOME talk has been indulged in by republican papers mostly, perhaps concerning the nomination of President Cleveland for another term. No president has ever yet had three terms. President Cleveland has been honored by an election the second time after having had four year's rest. Why should he desire; or why should the people want him for a third term? We don't believe they do.

MR. HARVEY makes a telling point against the arguments of his wily opponents on the silver question, when he says that at the time our country had the most trade with Europe was when we had no money of our own. If we could trade and traffic with other nations when we had no national currency, it seems we should be able to do so when we do have money of our own; that our nation is bound to redeem.

THE replies to "Coin" are coming to the front so rapidly that it would be impossible to keep track of them "Coin" evidently bit off more than he could masticate when he indited his now famous book.--Sherburne County Star News.

It looks more as if "Coin" was equal to a traditional "daddy dollar" for cutting teeth on. Judging from the large number of the "infant industries" engaged in trying to "chaw" off even a small piece.

THE Dassel Anchor in speaking of the proposition to pardon the Younger brothers from Stillwater says: "The truly reformed should, after long and sufficient detention, be paroled, but the natural criminal should be detained from liberty through life. The character of the crime in either case need not be considered." If a repentent is to be pardoned why keep him a day after his repentance? Brother Peet would have to get Blixt out at once, under that rule.

SECRETARY WALTER Q. GRESHAM, after a long illness, passed quietly away on Tuesday morning. He has attended faithfully as was possible in his condition to the duties of his important office, though political enemies have kept up quite a fuss about his proceedures. It is too plain on the face of the matter that his enemies were wrong. For so long as he was on the judicial bench as an appointee of the republican party his decisions were lauded loudly, and he was the choice of a large number of them for President. But as soon as he differed with them they commenced to howl and claim that his decisions formerly praised by them were constantly being reversed. It dont seem as if they used him justly.

A CONTINUAL hub-bub is kept up by what is called the gold bugs, that if we have anything but a gold standard our country is ruined; yet every one of them is grasping for every big so called, "fifty cent silver dollar" they can see, and they don't even reject paper dollars, in any amount however big. And yet they cry, "we must have a gold, dollar, for the standard." Silver men yell as lustily, or more so, that "unless silver is remonetized we are all financially wrecked;" and yet they continue to take the coin of the country, and the paper money, as do the gold bugs. Why not make use of gold, silver, and paper as money, as we have for years past? Either goes with everybody in this country; and on what we desire to do with the money depends, the kind we prefer; for hording up, laying away in the stocking, gold is generally chosen; for carrying about on the person or transporting about the country paper is selected, but for everyday business, to buy necessaries of life, silver, to day, is the money of our country. So long as these facts exhist, why trouble ourselves so much? So long as we can buy what we want with any kind of a dollar, it matters not to us what the standard is. Only we consider it poor policy to be making changes in the standard. It is about as bad as making changes in the tariff and is apt to make just as much confusion. Before 1873 we heard no trouble about the bimetalism of the land. If two metals could be used then, they can now. And all the talk about our defrauding anybody by returning to the well beaten path is folly. If we have strayed into such a terrible financial quagmire as people say, we had better get back onto the good old road.

"O, Consistency, Thou Art a Jewel."

Some ardent republicans advocate a high protective tariff to compel our people to trade at home. And oppose the remonetization of silver because they fear it would interfere with Americans borrowing from foreigners. If it is desirable that Americans should be compelled to live within themselves it seems they ought to be able to do so on their own money, especially as they can dig from the ground their share of both gold and silver.

Products and Prices.

Prices of the different products farmers have to turn off for cash continue to fluctuate. It appears to make no difference whether tariff is high or low; whether money is gold, silver or paper, when nature, under the guidance of Divine will, fails to produce a superfluity of any article needed, the price goes up and up, as the commodity grows scarcer and still scarcer in the markets. On the other hand when every farmer's granery and cribs and cellars are filled to overflowing, down goes prices. All the tariff laws and single standard money in the country can't prevent. And as the fact dawns upon the capitalist that there is an abundance of products and a reasonably fair prospect of still more in the near future, the moneyed man gets rid of all he can; he hunts other fields for speculations.

Of course up to a limited degree, tariff and money legislation have their effect at all times. But it remains for the extreme cases to develope their workings clearly. When drought, or grasshoppers, or other trouble has devastated a whole country; when the inhabitants thereof have nothing left to eat nor to sell; but must obtain elsewhere the wheat, the potatoes, the other eatables necessary for themselves; when they are through force of circumstances obliged to go to other countries for something to live on, which before they had in plenty and to sell, and are met with 25 cts per bushel tariff then do they learn that tariff is a tax; an enormous burden, and that the poor man must pay as much of it as his rich neighbor who cannot possibly eat more than does he.

When one moves from one country to another and has to pay a percentage to some bank to exchange his money into that of the new home he is making, then would he like an international currency, so he could keep his own money until ready to spend it, and get full value for it.

The law of supply and demand after all is the final regulator of prices. Usually after harvest when farmers have to sell, prices drop; along in the spring they begin to rise; just before harvest the highest notch is reached. This seems year after year to be the case. It is well to look into the tariff and the money questions and satisfy yourself as to just what is best but after all don't expect to regulate everything by either or by both, for when you have it all fixed old Dame Nature is apt to frustrate your plans.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, May 17, 1895.

President Cleveland is authority for the positive statement that so far as can be seen at this time neither an extra session of Congress nor an issue of bonds will be made necessary by the decision of the Supreme Court against the constitutionality of the Income Tax. The numerous sensational statements to the contrary sent out from Washington this week had no firmer foundation than a desire to embarass the administration by creating the impression that the government would be unable to meet its obligations without issuing bonds or getting additional legislation from Congress. This is a very unpatriotic as well as a dangerous misrepresentation to make, but everything is disregarded by those who are engaged in the task of making political ammunition to be used next year against the democratic party. It was a long line of similar misrepresentations which made it possible for that foreign syndicate to drive such a hard bargain in the exchange of gold for the last issue of bonds; yet those who were the busiest in circulating them were the loudest in abusing the President and Secretary Carlisle for having accepted the terms of the syndicate.

Members of the administration have accepted without comment the income tax decision. Other officials have not been so reticent. For instance, Senator Palmer, of Illinois, at present in Washington, said: "The country will accept the decision, but if the emergency should arise for the enactmen of another income tax law, Congress will pass it and the Supreme Court then sitting will uphold the taxing authority of Congress in the premises. The people of the country understand their power."

A rather interesting story is being told concerning the payment of the deferred sugar bounty, authorized at the last session of Congress, and the proposed establishment of a republican daily newspaper at New Orleans with a Capital of $1,000,000. It seems that ex-Gov. Warmouth, of La., was the originator of the scheme. The Louisiana sugar planters pledging themselves to invest in the stock of the proposed paper a certain percentage of the amount received, if the bill authorizing the payment passed and became a law. President Cleveland and the democrats in Congress were asked to endorse the bill for the payment of the deferred sugar bounty as a matter of justice to the sugar planters and the republicans in Congress were asked to support it because a good portion of the money paid would go towards the establishment and maintenance of a republican daily at New Orleans. The result is history. The payment was authorized and $5,000,000 was appropriated by Congress, Secretary Carlisle has not paid out the money yet, and that republican daily has consequently not been started. One of the reasons the money has not been paid out is that the appropriation was not large enough to pay all the claims, but there may be other reasons which will prevent payment for some time. A republican Senator speaking of the matter said: "Certainly a democratic administration ought not to furnish money to people who propose to use it to establish an organ with which to antagonize it. True, the debt will have to be paid some time but if I were at the head of the Treasury I would let those hot headed fellows in Louisiana whistle for their money. I would not pay them until compelled to do so."

Somebody with nothing better to do started a rumor that the decision of the Supreme Court against the income tax made the government liable to the heirs of those who paid the income tax under the law enacted as a war measure for all the money collected under that law. Nothing could be more absurd. While the law under which the income tax was collected was practically the same that has been declared unconstitutional by the present Supreme Court it was passed upon and declared constitutional by the then Supreme Court, and those who paid money under it can have no valid claim on the government for its return.

Secretary Herbert has accepted an invitation to be the orator of the day at the Memorial Day ceremonies at St. Elizebeth's cemetery. President Cleveland has been invited to Arlington, but it is not certain that he will be in Washington, as he is quite anxious to accompany Mrs. Cleveland and the children to Gray Gables, and they may go before next Thursday There is a special reason why Mrs. Cleveland's departure cannot be postponed much longer. She would have gone before now, but for the prevalence of disagreeable weather.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

The frost has done but little damage to the growing crops, but has been very injurious to the fruit. The planting is about all finished, and next will be the cultivating of corn.

Last week was a busy week working on the roads in our town. Some very good work has been done on the roads this spring but in order to build a first class road every town should have a good gravel pit. But this we have not got in this part of the country. When the roads are bad Jim Hill will furnish us transportation at his price not ours.

Mrs. B. Hall has been on the sick list but at this writting is some better.

Rev. Wm. Copp preached memorial sermon at Maple Plain last Sunday afternoon.

Last Sunday there was quite a good many bicyclers seen in our town, think some of them came from a far country as their costume was different from ours. Dressing goes a little slow this spring for the average man but in time we will round them all up and have the muster rolls made out on time.

Times are not looking up as some pretend to claim. Most everybody is living and doing business on a shortage. That old hobby high protective tariff, is all a good many have to fall back on, and say that is the only thing that would have sayed us. A goodeal of honest sound money put in circulation in this country, will do more to save it from the house of bondage than all the high protective laws this country ever is the root of all evil, but a fellow can not well do without it in his business.

Carlisle, Secretary of the Treasury, is now stumping it in the land of Daniel Boon (Ky.) over bones of Henry Clay, and telling the people that gold is, or should be, the only gospel money. Many men in free America think her poor live to well and have to much freedom, and would like to put them under the Egyptian yoke of bondage. Has the poor man no rights that the rich are bound to respect.

Mr. Thomas Shaw and Mrs. Archie Young, of Delano, was in our town last Saturday.

Some of our towns people have left for Tennessee, and others have notions had, and yet the old adage is, money in that direction.

We are sore afflicted with tramps and jew peddlers, wish they would do as did the Priest and Leyite, pass us by.

Most every body has been watching garden truck for the last two weeks.

The turn of the tide has come. Upon every hand voluntary increase of wages is being made. By next year the good results of democratic reform in National affairs will be so plain that he who runs may read, and vote for a continuance.—St. Cloud Times.

The first meeting of the commission to locate the fourth insane asylum is to be held at the capitol on June 11th. Anoka, Chaska, Midway, LeSueur, Hastings, Delano and Farmington are the towns after it. The grounds must contain at least 640 and not more than 1000 acres costing not to exceed $15,000. —News-Ledger.

We have always held, and do now, that neither silver nor gold is suitable as a currency. It is too expensive and too bulky. Paper is the only proper material from which to make a currency. We advocate the remonetization of silver because if we must have a metal money basis silver and gold together is none too broad a foundation. —Litchfield Independent.

Mr. Towne's expression of views on the silver question has surprised many of his friends. Among them generally the opinion seems to be that he has been a little hasty in announcing his position, although it may be conceded that he has given the matter careful and deliberate consideration. It is very doubtful if Mr. Towne's views are exactly those of the men who contributed most to his nomination and election.—Duluth News-Tribune.

Janitor Enghouser has been cleaning up the ravine on the Court Hourse side which makes it neat and clean. He deserves credit for it. The ravine is getting to be a very rough looking place.

Mr. Cochrane, of Monticello, was a Buffalo visitor Sunday, as usual. He came over on his "wheel" and says that the roads between Buffalo and Monticello are fine. He had ought to know as he has made many a spin over them. Never mind, "Butch", call again.

It is surprising to know how much fish is being caught in Buffalo Lake. Our fish dealer shipped on Monday last, 680 pounds of dressed fish which had been caught inside of three days. At that rate fish will soon be scarce in Buffalo Lake and people will have to go elsewhere for a mess of fish.

The flour mill is being pushed right along. When it is finished it will be a very nice thing for the village and the whole neighborhood.

Street Commissioner Bryant has been at work with a crew in graveling the streets. Although now during the dry weather they are dusty, they will soon be smooth and nice to drive on during wet weather.

The foundation for the new school house adition is about completed. The work on the foundation is in charge of Mr. Peterson.

A "gent" in this village stays out on Saturday nights so late that when he goes to church the next night he falls asleep and dreams of the events that took place the night before.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.

Square Type. Spatulated. Conical. Philosophic. Artistic. Feminine.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the nobler sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and it will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of the whole family.

THE constitution on which the people of Utah will vote limits the state indebtedness to $100,000. That is a good provision. States ought to pay as they go.

A SCIENTIST places the age of the earth at 680,000,000 years. And still a man who struts the earth for thirty or forty or sixty or eighty years thinks he is a factor in it.

WHITELAW REID'S latest pictures, sent home from Egypt, show he has been taking some of the hair from the top of his head and putting it on the bottom of his chin.

A COUPLE of Chicago policemen chased a fleeing fugitive on bicycles the other day and captured him. Every day seems to open new fields of usefulness to the narrow-guage steed.

THE Boston school boys are formed into companies and regiments which are regularly reviewed by city and state officers. The country is going to have plenty of good soldiers for future emergencies.

A BROOKLYN woman convicted of cutting her brutal husband's throat, though not fatally, was allowed her freedom under a suspended sentence, with an injunction from the judge that she must not let it occur again.

THE woman who fell from a fourth-story window in Brooklyn and immediately asked if her bonnet was on straight demonstrated that the new woman never loses her presence of mind in the most perilous moments of her existence.

THE transcontinental lines are going to refuse to carry bicycles and baby carriages free. This is rather taking advantage of the babies; but as for the 'cyclers, they can protect themselves and get even by traveling the whole distance awheel.

THE New York World says there is a law in that state which makes it a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment in the penitentiary, to knowingly give reporters false information for publication. There ought to be such a law in every state, says the Minneapolis Tribune.

THE inventor of a car fender in Brooklyn, N. Y., had so much confidence in his device that he lay down upon the track in front of an electric car going at the rate of 8 miles an hour. He repeated this experiment ten successive times and escaped without injury. Such sublime faith in his own invention ought to be rewarded by success.

THE supreme court of Maine has refused a white woman a divorce from a negro on the simple ground of color. This may excite some persons, but Maine simply follows the nation by refusing to recognize the color line in its citizenship. If the white woman regarded a negro as unfit for her husband because of his color she ought to have made her decision before marriage. He was just as black as a lover as he was as a husband.

SOME boys were asked the other day to define "editor." Here are some of their definitions: "An editor is a man who handles words;" "An editor makes his living out of the English language;" "An editor is somebody who does not do anything himself, and when somebody else does goes and tells other people all about it;" "An editor is a man who has the industry of a beaver, the instinct of a bee and the patience of an ass."

THE Japanese are a poetic people, and their poetry has the quaint, suggestive style of their paintings. Every national event is signalized by some lyric or ballad, and the recent war has given rise to many popular songs. Every new year the mikado gives his people the subject for a "leta," or short, sharp poem of thirty-one syllables. These poems are sent to the court poet, who decides upon their merits. This year the subject was the "plum blossom," and, as usual, the emperor and empress composed poems on the chosen theme.

IN the Massachusetts school for the blind is a little girl named Edith Thomas who is deaf and dumb as well as sightless, but, thanks to the admirable training of the institution, she can read and write and is as intelligent as any child of her age. She has thus been able to have many pleasures in common with more fortunate children and she is a living example of the noble work done by such institutions to make the world brighter and pleasanter to those who are so afflicted as to be shut out from all participation in the pleasures of life without such training.

THE navy department, after many years of experimenting, has at last adopted a type of rifle with which the service and marine corps will soon be provided. The new rifle is the invention of J. P. Lee, of Connecticut, and is believed to be superior to the Krag-Jorgenson rifle which is now supplied to the army. It is lighter, and enables the sailor to carry fifty more rounds of ammunition than the soldier. Ordinarily it is capable of forty rounds a minute and a possible speed of fifty. The chief of ordnance believes the Lee rifle to be the best yet tried in the United States.

SINCE the adjournment of the North Carolina legislature it has been found that a bill which was tabled in the senate and was never before the house has been enrolled, ratified and signed. A suit was then brought to determine whether the bill was a law and the decision was rendered that the ratification and signatures of the presiding officers made it a law, though there was a gross fraud in the business. Under this ruling there is, of course, no further use for members of the legislature in that state. This is one of those decisions which help to bring the law into contempt.

GRESHAM IS DEAD.

President Cleveland's Cabinet Has a Vacant Chair.

Pleuro-Pneumonia Closes the Career of the Secretary of State—The End Comes Painlessly to the Jurist and Diplomat.

WASHINGTON, May 29. — Secretary Gresham died at 1:15 o'clock this morning. No death could be more quiet, more calm or more peaceful. For two hours preceding dissolution there had been no indication of a pulse or a heart beat. He lay during that time with his head resting on the arms of his daughter, Mrs. Andrews, while his devoted wife sat by his side, his hands clasped in hers, his face so turned that his last conscious gaze should rest upon her. And so the minutes dragged slowly on until the end came.

His Death Painless.

He suffered greatly during the preceding forty-eight hours, after the pneumonic symptoms were complicated with his diseases, and was only temporarily relieved by frequent hypodermic injections. But as the end approached his suffering disappeared and he passed away as quietly as a tired child sinking to slumber in the arms of its mother. Arrangements for the funeral will be made after Mr. Otto Gresham, son of the deceased, shall arrive in Washington this morning from Chicago.

At the Deathbed.

In the room with Secretary Gresham when he died, besides Mrs. Gresham, Mr. Andrews and Mrs. Andrews, were the two physicians and two nurses who have been in attendance. In an adjoining room were Secretary Lamont, Assistant Postmaster General Jones, Assistant Secretary of State Adee, Col. Corbin and Maj. Fuller, of the army, all of whom had been in waiting during the evening in order to be of any assistance to the dying statesman and his bereaved family that might be necessary

At 11 o'clock the physicians ceased their efforts to revive the dying secretary, as his system was entirely too weak to respond to their treatment. At midnight Secretary Gresham was sinking fast. His pulse was beating feebly. The doctors retired from the room, leaving the patient alone with the family.

The President Informed.

The news of Secretary Gresham's relapse did not become known until 5 o'clock Monday evening, at which hour his niece, Mrs. Fuller, wife of Capt. Fuller, of the army, was sent for. It spread rapidly, and by 8 o'clock scores of persons, prominent in public life had called to express their sympathy. Among the early callers were Secretary and Mrs. Lamont. Mr. Thurber, the president's private secretary, also arrived at an early hour, and was requested to notify the president that the secretary of state was rapidly sinking. He did so, and later in the evening communicated the fact to the United Press that the president was detained at Woodley by illness, that he desired to come to the city as soon as the information of the secretary's serious condition was made known to him, but that he refrained from doing so at the advice of his physician.

Succession to the Chair of State.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—There has already been considerable discussion as to the probable successor of Secretary Gresham. This discussion has been going on for some days, as even in case of recovery it was known the secretary would not be able to take up active work again at the head of the state department.

First Assistant Secretary Edwin F. Uhl, of Grand Rapids, Mich., stands in the direct line of succession and his name has been mentioned in connection with the office. Others mentioned are Postmaster General Wilson, Senator Gray, of Delaware, ex-Secretary Whitney, Ambassador Eustis and Don M. Dickinson.

Record of a Busy Life.

Walter Quinton Gresham was born near Lanesville, Harrison county, Ind., March 17, 1832. He was educated in country schools, and spent one year in the state university at Bloomington, but was not graduated. He studied law in Corydon, Ind., was admitted to the bar in 1853, and became a successful lawyer. He was elected to the legislature in 1860, but resigned in August, 1861, to become lieutenant colonel of the Thirty-eighth Indiana regiment.

Services in the War.

He was promoted to colonel of the Fifty-third regiment in December, and on August 11, 1863, after the fall of Vicksburg, was made brigadier general of volunteers. He commanded the fourth division of Blair's corps in the fighting before Atlanta and received a severe wound that disabled him for a year and prevented him from seeing further service. March 13, 1865, he was brevetted major general of volunteers for his gallantry at Atlanta.

Made Judge by Grant.

After the war he resumed the practice of law at New Albany, Ind. He was an unsuccessful republican candidate for congress in 1866, and in 1867-8 was financial agent of his state in New York. President Grant, who held him in great esteem, made him United States judge for the district of Indiana in 1869, and in 1880 he was an unsuccessful candidate for United States senator.

In the Cabinet.

He resigned his judgeship in April, 1882, to accept the place of postmaster general in President Arthur's cabinet, and in July, 1884, on the death of Secretary Folger, was transferred to the treasury portfolio. In October of that year he was appointed United States judge for the Seventh judicial circuit. He was a strong supporter of Grant for a third term in the Chicago convention of 1880, and was prominently mentioned as a candidate for the republican nomination for president in the convention at Chicago that nominated Benjamin Harrison.

In 1892 the populist party sent a delegation to tender Judge Gresham a nomination at the head of their ticket, but he declined to accept the offer and remained on the bench until he resigned at the personal request of Mr. Cleveland to become secretary of state.

Gresham as Secretary of State.

While Judge Gresham had always been a republican, he openly dissented from the McKinley law, and in 1892, after the nomination of Mr. Cleveland by the democrats, he, with other distinguished republicans, announced his allegiance to the democratic party and advocated Mr. Cleveland's election. After Mr. Cleveland's election in February, 1893, he summoned Judge Gresham to Lakewood, N. J., where, after a consultation, he tendered him the position of premier of the cabinet he was forming. Judge Gresham assumed the duties of secretary of state on March 7, 1893. Some of the prominent questions which have come before him since assuming the position are the Hawaiian difficulty, seal fisheries dispute, the abrogation of reciprocity treaties, efforts to prevent the Chinese-Japanese war and the Bluefields affair.

Personally Secretary Gresham secured the warmest regard of those most closely associated with him. In all his domestic relations he was most exemplary. His brilliant record as a brave soldier and his conscientious devotion to his duties in the high civil capacities to which he was called will insure for his memory national respect.]

LYNCHED AT DANVILLE, ILL.

Citizens Take the Law Into Their Own Hands.

DANVILLE, Ill., May 27. — Early Saturday morning a mob which had been in possession of Vermillion county's jail for several hours succeeded in locating John Halls, Jr., and William Royce in their cells, took them outside and hanged them for assaulting Miss Laura Barnett.

The story of the crime was the topic of discussion here all day. Business was practically suspended and shopkeepers and their clerks gathered in knots on the street corners and discussed the affair with farmers who flocked to the city during the day. Shortly after nightfall ominous mutterings were heard and some openly counseled the more quiet of their neighbors to take summary vengeance on the perpetrators of the crime and not take the chances of the law's delay or the technicalities which might arise and eventually free the men.

As early as 10 o'clock the crowd congregated on the main street, and it only needed a venturesome leader to proceed to the jail at once. That leader was soon found. From whispered threats the cry arose for vengeance, swelling on the night air until it echoed and reechoed from one end of Danville to the other. A rush was made for the jail, where, under fear of just such a proceeding, the guard had been reenforced, but constituted only a handful of men to face a frenzied, bloodthirsty mob, wrought up to an indescribable pitch and bent only on having the lives of the two cowering men within. Clamoring at the jail doors, the mob was met by Sheriff Thompson, who denied admission and, retiring behind the doors, locked and doubled bolted them.

The crowd procured a telegraph pole and a railroad iron, and at 1:30 battered in the outer door. The besiegers thronged in and commenced work on the inner door.

At 2 o'clock Sheriff Thompson sent for Judge Bookwalter, of the circuit court, who addressed the crowd from the jail corridor. He counseled them to peace and order, and for a minute, and but a minute only, his words were heeded. Then another desperate attempt was made to reach the cells where the two men were secreted. Finally Royce was located crouching and shivering with fear. His cell door was quickly battered down. A score of hands dragged him unceremoniously from his hiding place underneath the wooden bench which serves prisoners as their bed. Half dragged and half pushed he was hustled into the dining-room and seated on the table. A rope was placed over his head, and while part of the mob kept close guard over him the others continued the search for Halls until he was discovered in another and more remote portion of the jail.

At 3:15 o'clock the mob secured both of the prisoners and started toward the bridge with ropes about their necks. They were hanged almost upon the scene of their crime.

HUGH M'CULLOCH DEAD.

Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Expires at His Home in Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Hon. Hugh McCulloch, formerly secretary of the treasury, died shortly before 3 o'clock this morning. With him when the end came were his two sons, a married daughter and a grandson. Death was calm and peaceful, the patient having been for some time previous in a comatose condition. Mr. McCulloch was over 80 years of age.

Upholds the Geary Law.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The supreme court of the United States has affirmed the constitutionality of the Geary Chinese exclusion law in the case of Lem Moon Sing, the California Chinaman who left this country and was refused admission. Justice Harlan, in the opinion, said that the statute intrusted to the collector the power of passing upon the facts in the case. Lem Moon Sing contended that he had acquired a domicile as a citizen of the United States before the passage of the exclusion law.

Brothers-in-Law Fight a Duel—One Killed

VERSAILLES, Ky., May 28.—At noon Sunday the steps of Troy Presbyterian church, 7 miles south of here, were converted into a dueling ground, George B. Montgomery killing his brother-in-law, Archibald Riley, and being himself mortally wounded by Riley. The murder is the culmination of a sensation that upset high society in the Blue Grass section three years ago, when Riley seduced Montgomery's sister and fled to Mississippi. He was brought back and at the point of a pistol forced to marry the girl. He immediately deserted her and did not return to these parts until recently. Both men attended church Sunday.

Oscar Wilde Guilty.

LONDON, May 28.—Oscar Wilde has been found guilty.

The jury returned to the court after an absence of two hours.

The sentence imposed on Wilde was two years' imprisonment.

Alfred Taylor, Wilde's associate, was also sentenced to two years' imprisonment. Both the prisoners' terms are to be worked out at hard labor Both were taken at once to prison and began the service of their terms.

Women Only Know

How much they suffer when nervous, weak and tired.

Nervous prostration is a lingering, racking, living death to those afflicted, though wholly incomprehensible to others. The cause of this condition is impure and insufficient Blood.

Make the blood pure, give it vitality and it will properly feed the nerves and make them strong. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures nervousness because it acts directly upon the blood, making it rich and pure and endowing it with vitality and strength-giving power. No other medicine has such a record of cures. Thousands write that they suffered intensely with nervousness and were cured by this great medicine. The building-up powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are wonderful. Even a few doses are sufficient to create an appetite, and from that time on its healing, purifying, strengthening effects are plainly felt. The nerves become stronger, the sleep becomes natural and refreshing, the hands and limbs become steady, and soon "life seems to go on without effort," and perfect health is restored. Such is the work which Hood's Sarsaparilla is doing for hundreds of women to-day.

AN INDIAN FAIRY-LAND.

Splendors of Oudenpore, the "City of the Sunrise."

Passing under arches, we emerge from the shadow into a dazzle of light; from the broad platform of old and yellow marble, well polished by the constant friction of bare feet, a few low steps lead down to the blue water of the Pichola lake. On one side a white wall ending in a little temple cuts off the view; the dancing reflection of the sun in the water is thrown up in long rippling waves of light into the shadow of the eaves. The view down the lake on the other side is unsurpassable in India. A long perspective of white palaces, with many domes and oriel-windows, with solid masses of dark foliage rising from the water here and there, reaches to the great supporting walls of the Rana's castle, and at this point the lake opens out into greater width; its horizon of gardens and hills beyond is interrupted only by the fantastic silhouettes of the island palaces, which seem to float between water and sky; it is as if the elusive mirages which we had so often seen on our way across the white salt deserts of Persia, and which had always melted into thin air, had at last become materialized here. As we stand on the steps and look across the water in front of us, which is like a narrow river at this point, we see other temples among dark trees, all in the shadow, and there are also little garden pavilions, with steps descending to the water, and sometimes with graceful arcade galleries overhanging it. Just now the platform behind us and the steps are crowded with women and young girls, babies and children, all either bathing or washing their bronze water-jars, chattering, gossiping, laughing, or lying about in the genial afternoon sunshine of January, and not at all in a hurry to finish their work or to go home. Under and through the white arches an endless throng of these gracefully draped, swaying figures, in scarlet, in crimson and dull gold, in faded reds and warm blues, carrying on their heads the great vases of glittering metal, is continually passing to and from the wet and glistening steps. The golden afternoon haze is beginning to soften the white of the walls, but to-morrow morning, when this side is in shadow, we shall see exactly the same mellow glow on the opposite side, and the difference between morning and afternoon is quite too intangible to express with any painter's medium. A boat with a numerous crew is waiting at the landing, and having settled ourselves comfortably among the cushions, we are pushed off from the shore and steer for the island of "Jug Navas," which is the nearest of the larger islands, and seems to be the more material. As the boat moves down the lakes towards the islands, the glow and power of the white light thrown back from the vast and towering expanse of blank wall from which the Rana's palace soars upward against the deep blue of the sky, and from the white city at its side, is almost too much for the eyes. All this white, streaked in places with the golden green of the hanging terraced gardens, and the scarlet and multicolored figures on the steps, and the drinking elephants, is mirrored below, and until the plow cuts the glassy surface, it seems at times like passing over a white cloud.—Edwin Lord Weeks, in Harper's Magazine.

A HARD CHOICE.

I would not marry a poor girl!
No; that would never do;
For what is terrapin for one
Is cold corned beef for two.

I would not marry a bright girl!
Nor one with a degree;
I would not want my wife to think
She knew too much for me.

I would not marry a pretty girl!
For beauty makes one vain;
And when she once had lost her looks,
They'd not come back again.

I would not marry a plain girl!
I'm sure that I could not
Endure her face for forty years
Behind the coffee pot.

I would not marry a rich girl!
I do not like that kind;
For heiresses are always spoiled—
And sometimes hard to find.

I would not marry a silly girl!
No giddy butterfly;
No maiden with a ceaseless laugh;
No schoolgirl need apply.

In fact, I seem condemned by fate,
A bachelor to be;
For when I've found the girl I want,
Perhaps she won't want me!
—Harry Romaine, in Puck.

THE ERRATIC BICYCLE.

BY LUKE SHARP.

I HAVE, at various periods of my life, endeavored to teach a two-wheeled machine to carry a man with something like dignity and stability; to act, in fact, as if it did not wish to wobble over the whole earth in the space of ten seconds. My first efforts were made more years ago than I care to estimate, on the ordinary bone-shaker of commerce, a two-wheeled vehicle with hickory spokes in the wheels. If I remember rightly, I broke up the machine, and abandoned the attempt.

Never shall I forget my amazement when I saw a human being for the first time on one of those wheels which we now call the ordinary bicycle. It seemed to me then anything but ordinary. In due time I tackled one of these machines at a riding school, and the result of this wonderful conflict I wrote up years and years ago. The result was that in a certain number of rounds the machine floored me every time, drawing first, second and third blood. As I had some work to do in this world I again abandoned the attempt, not wishing to break myself into little pieces. On various occasions since then I have endeavored to train up a bicycle in the way it should go, but always without success.

It is an amazing thing, then, that a sedate, middle-aged man should try to do what he had invariably failed to accomplish in his youth. In looking back to see who is really responsible for this amazing outbreak on my part, I think the man most to blame is that celebrated dramatic author, Mr. Bronson Howard. Yet Mr. Howard has always been exceedingly kind and gentle with me, as, indeed, he is with everyone, and I have often wondered why he endeavored to lure me on to the top of a bicycle. Perhaps it is that Providence does not intend any man to be entirely good, and as anyone who is acquainted with Mr. Howard has never any fault to find with him, it may be that his goading of a man toward feats of bicycular eccentricity takes the place in Mr. Howard's nature that revenge, envy and all uncharitableness occupy in the souls of the rest of us.

Mr. Howard at first practiced on a tricycle, and used to cover amazing distances on that remarkably sane machine. Once when in Honolulu, with nothing to occupy his mind or his muscles but a bicycle that happened to be unemployed at that particular time, Mr. Howard tumbled about the land of the Sandwich islands, and nearly got himself flung into the Pacific on two or three occasions, but he persevered and finally conquered the two-wheeler. Since then he has been bragging about it and inviting me to take trips with him to various interesting portions of the earth.

So I said to myself that if a mere dramatic author had brains enough to ride a bicycle, surely a talented newspaper man could do the same.

A friend of mine in England said that the real way to acquire the bicycle habit was to get a machine of my own.

"As long," said he, "as you simply depend on hired machines you won't learn, because you have nothing at stake, but once you spend your money for a first-class bicycle you are then compelled to learn, or else there is so much cash thrown away."

This seemed very reasonable, so I pondered upon it and then bought the biggest book on cycling that is published, a very expensive book, one of the volumes of the Badmington Library, edited by a real lord, and illustrated by a prince—a prince of the brush—named Joseph Pennell, who is a cycler himself, and he draws very alluring pictures of the machine. I studied up this volume and was amazed to see how easy it was to ride a bicycle. I then took the advice of the book as to which particular machine to buy. It gives several pages in a description of a particular safety, and I learned that that machine had none of the vices which were so prominent in those bicycles with which I had heretofore been brought into contact. On this one it was impossible to take a header. The machine also would not slip sideways in the mud. It has numerous other advantages, for a list of which I refer all inquirers to the cycling volume of the Badmington library.

So I had a wheel made to measure—for they measure you for a bicycle in England just as if you were getting a pair of trousers made—and the other day the machine was delivered in good shape wrapped up in brown paper.

At the back part of my house there is a somewhat large lawn that costs me ever so much a year for having a lazy man with a lawn mower go over it two or three times a month. I thought I would make things interesting for this man the next time he came with his lawn mower by practicing over the grass with my new bicycle.

The machine was a beautiful one, nickel-plated everywhere that nickel would stick on it, and so light that you could easily pick it up in one hand, grasping it by the backbone. It seemed almost too pretty for a rough and tumble fight, even on the velvety lawn, and I had some thought of putting it back in its brown paper again and hiring a second-hand machine to learn on, but as it was guaranteed to hang together under almost any circumstances I concluded to go ahead with it. I put my left foot on the step that extends out from the hub of the hind wheel, and hopping with my right foot pushed it ahead of me. The machine behaved beautifully, but perhaps that was because I hopped the whole length of the lawn and had not the courage to jump up into the saddle. On the next round my natural bravery returned to me, and I raised myself above the machine and sat down somewhat emphatically and not too comfortably. The wheel seemed to be amazed at this, for with a large space of lawn to wander over, it promptly dashed over the border to the left, then, with a wild swoop to the right, fell and landed me in a rose bush. Nothing seemed to be broken except the bush, so I tackled it again and again and again. The result of the first morning's work was that I could place myself in the saddle and trundle along the lawn hanging on like grim death to the handle bar, but without daring to put my feet on the pedals.

I discovered more different muscles in my own body than I had any idea I possessed. Every bone and sinew ached, not with the falls, for I had been singularly lucky in that respect, but with the exertion of hopping along after the machine, and springing into the saddle and straining every nerve to keep the combination from going over.

Not to make too long a story of it, I may say that for three days the machine and I discussed this matter, and every morning when I led it out on to the lawn I seemed at first to know less about balancing myself than I had done when I quitted the business the day before. Perhaps during the night the machine had thought up some new tricks.

At last I rose up very early one morning, long before the season-ticket man began to pass my house to go to the railway station, for his London train. I felt that the lawn was getting too small for me. I could now work the pedals reasonably well, and stagger about the place from one end to the other of the grass plot, but I could not turn around, for when I attempted to do so the machine would swoop like a hawk into one of the flower beds or into a convenient piece of shrubbery.

Our neighborhood is a quiet one, and the street, at most times, is not so busy as the Strand. I expected to have it all to myself in the early morning out, but in this I reckoned without the milkman. I had no idea before that the multitudinal milkman was such a fiend in human shape. He drives a vehicle modeled after the old Roman chariots, and he drives at a rate of speed that is something appalling. The moment I got on my bicycle in the road some accursed milkman would come tearing up, and taking it for granted that I knew all about bicycle steering he never paid the slightest attention to me. Consequently I came within an ace of being smashed up into pieces on several occasions, and, after steering my machine up on the sidewalk and into the fence to get out of his way I used language that I knew must have turned most of the milk in that neighborhood sour.

One morning, thoroughly discouraged with the business, I got out on the street a little later than usual, so as to be rid of the milkman. One peculiarity of the bicycle seems to be that although you are reasonably successful on your last interview with it, the next you seem to have to begin all over again. This particular morning I was more than usually discouraged and had practically made up my mind to sell the machine. All at once I found myself in the saddle and realized that I had run along several rods without any serious wobbling. On and on we went with a beautiful sense of smoothness, ease and exhilaration. I turned in to the main coaching road with my heart in my mouth but my feet still on the pedals, and I executed a turn without disaster. There was now a straight stretch ahead of me for miles on a smooth and excellent road.

"Surely," said I to myself, "the time is come when my neck is to be broken. This docility on the part of the wheel can lead to nothing but disaster." Nevertheless on and on we went, and after traveling for about a mile and coming to a wide part in the thoroughfare, I took a sweep around with amazing success and travelled back again. It seemed to be an unbelievable thing, but actually I had succeeded in teaching that bicycle how to carry a man as a man should be carried.

THE ONE QUESTION.

Recent Utterances For and Against Free Coinage.

Cleveland Writes Another Letter—Central Bimetallic League Issues Call for a Convention at Memphis—Blackburn Answers Carlisle.

NEW YORK, May 27.—Two hundred and twenty-seven editors and their friends were present at the banquet of the Democratic Editorial association of the state of New York held at Delmonico's Friday night. American flags were draped around the state coat-of-arms behind President Stephen H. Parker. Senator David B. Hill occupied the seat of honor on the right of the president. The dinner began at 6:30 p. m., and it was 10 o'clock before the speaking commenced. Previous to the speaking letters expressing regret at not being able to be present from President Cleveland, Postmaster General Wilson, Secretary of War Lamont and many others were read.

President Cleveland in his letter said:

"Our party is so much a party of power, and its proper action and usefulness are so dependent upon a constant adherence to its doctrines and traditions that no tendency in our ranks to follow the misleading light of a temporary popular misapprehension should go unchallenged. Our victories have all been won when we have closely followed the banner of democratic principles. We have always been punished by defeat when, losing sight of our banner, we have yielded to the blandishments of undemocratic expediency.

"There is a temptation now vexing the people in different sections of the country which assumes the disguise of democratic party principle, inasmuch as it presents a scheme which is claimed to be a remedy for agricultural depression and, such other hardships as afflict our fellow citizens. Thus, because we are the friends of the people and profess devotion to their interests, the help of the members of our party is invoked in support of a plan to revolutionize the monetary condition of the country, and embark upon an experiment which is discredited by all reason and experience, which invites trouble and disaster in every avenue of labor and enterprise, and which must prove destructive to our national prestige and character.

"When a campaign is actively on foot to force the free, unlimited and independent coinage of silver by the government at a ratio which will add to our circulation unrestrained millions of so-called dollars, intrinsically worth but half the amount they purport to represent, with no provision or resource up make good this deficiency in value, and when it is claimed that such a proposition has any relation to the principles of democracy, it is time for all who may in the least degree influence democratic thought, to realize their responsibility.

"Democratic care and conservatism dictate that if there exists inconvenience and hardships resulting from the congestion or imperfect distribution of our circulating medium a remedy should be applied which will avoid the disaster that must follow in the train of silver monometallism.

"Our party is the party of the people, not because it is wafted hither and thither by every sudden wave of popular excitement and misconception, but because while it tests every proposition by the doctrines which underlie its organization, it insists that all interests should be defended in the administration of the government without especial favor or discrimination. Our party is the party of the people because in its care of the welfare of all our countrymen, it resists dangerous schemes born of discontent advocated by appeals to sectional or class predjudices, and reinforced by the insidious aid of private selfishess and cupidity. Above all, our party is the party of the people when it recognizes the fact that sound and absolutely safe money is the life blood of our country's strength and prosperity, and when it teaches that none of our fellow-citizens, rich or poor, great or humble, can escape the consequences of degeneration of our currency.

"What I have written has not been prompted by any fear that the democracy of the state of New York will ever be an accomplice in such an injury to their country as would be entailed by the free, unlimited and independent coinage of silver; nor do I believe they will be so heedless of party interests as to support such a movement. I have referred to this subject in the belief that nothing more important can engage the attention of the American people or the national democracy, and in the conviction that the voice of the democrats of New York, through its press, should constantly be heard in every state.

"Yours very truly,
"GROVER CLEVELAND."

To Meet in Memphis.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 28.—The following address to the public, issued by the Central Bimetallic league of Memphis, explains itself:

"TO THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES: The arch enemies of the agricultural and producing classes of our country, moved by greed and encouraged by avarice, have conspired to transfer the essentially governmental function of issuing and controlling the money volume of the nation to a system of banking corporations full of the vice of class legislation and void of any virtue which commends it to the consideration of a patriotic citizen. Undaunted by the failure to secure the sanction of the American congress the promoters of this nefarious scheme have boldly taken the initiatory step to attain the object of the conspiracy. Backed by the great power of exhaustless wealth and the influence of high official position, they have publicly convened in this city of Memphis and openly declared their purpose. They demand that the constitutional and inherently sovereign right to issue money be delivered into their hands. They hesitate at no deception, they scruple at no fraud. Knowing the innate integrity of our people they prate of 'honest money.' Appreciating our aversion to paternalism they say the 'government must go out of the banking business.'

"They hope and believe that we will not stop to consider that to exact a dollar which, by vicious legislation, they have made to cost the debtor twice as much labor and double the amount of produce as the one promised, is not 'honest.' They expect the American people to accept as true the statement that money of the constitution, established by the fathers, is dishonest for no other reason save the dicta of their illustrious accomplices and tools. They hope that the people will ignorantly confound the sovereign prerogative and the duty of the government 'to coin money and establish a system of uniform weights and measures,' with the business of loans and discounts inherently appropriate to the occupation of the private citizen. They think that we will forget that the true question is not whether 'the governments shall go out of the banking business,' but whether the banks shall go out of the governing business. Thus they design by the aid of public apathy to rivet the chains which will make free men slaves.

"That the people may come together and take counsel of each other it has been deemed expedient to call together a convention to assemble at Memphis, June 12 and 13, 1895. Every community, every city and town and every state in the union is earnestly requested and cordially invited to send delegates to that convention. Every vicinity is urged to organize bimetallist clubs, and every club should be represented. It is proposed that this convention shall voice the sentiments of the people. The country needs their best thought, their most careful deliberation and energetic action. They have no money to employ hireling emissaries to drum up delegates from cotton exchanges and boards of trade. Their own intelligent patriotism is the only fund to which they can appeal.

"The object of this convention is to formulate some definite plan for future action, to give direction to the overwhelming volume of public sentiment favoring a return to our own, and establishing our independence of alien financial institutions; to devise means for such a campaign of education that hereafter it will be possible to elect only such men to the legislative and executive offices of the nation as are unawed by power and unbought by spoils.

A PRELATE'S VIEWS.

Archbishop Ireland States His Position on the Silver Question.

CHICAGO, May 28.—Archbishop Ireland is opposed to the free coinage of silver. He regards the proposition to have silver restored as a menace to all present and future prosperity of the country. He said so Saturday while in the course of a general interview.

The archbishop was asked what might prevent the tide of prosperity, evidently now just setting in, from reaching its greatest height, and in his reply to the question he fully defined his position on the silver question. The answer will be received with interest and authority all over the country. He said:

"The present silver agitation might check the period of prosperity which it seems is about setting in for us. Without entering into the merits of the difficult and intricate questions involved in a discussion of the silver phase or craze, I would say that, so long as there is no international agreement between the great governments of the world—the commercial nations—an attempt on the part of the United States to return to free coinage of silver would be fatal to our business prosperity.

"The United States is largely a borrowing nation. A new country, undeveloped, is necessarily a borrower of the older nations, and that must positively be taken into consideration when we lightly speak of changing the form of our financial basis. It is out of the question that we by ourselves can create a silver basis to be accepted by the balance of the world, willy nilly.

"What we borrow we must receive from abroad, and the foreign capitalists will not invest in millions of securities if they are to be paid back for their advances in silver when they can buy the bullion of that metal at fifty cents. They simply will not do it, and it is an absurd folly to imagine that we can compel them to do. We are in no position to stand aloof nor to restore confidence in our business institutions except by agreeing as we have in the past as to our financial basis in the marts of the world, where we meet all that is in competition with us and all which will positively refuse to accept our proposed silver basis as that of the whole world."

Blackburn Talks Back.

LAWRENCEBURG, Ky., May 28.—Senator J. C. Blackburn, replying to Secretary Carlisle, in his speech here Saturday spoke substantially as follows:

"I do not know in what capacity Carlisle came here and spoke, whether he came as a citizen of this grand old commonwealth or as secretary of the treasury. Carlisle has said he was never for free silver. On the 7th day of November, 1878, Mr. Carlisle, while sitting by my side in the house of representatives, voted for the Dick Bland bill, which was a silver bill out and out. Only five years later the Sherman bill passed. I voted against that bill and so did Carlisle, and yet he is making the same old speech that Sherman made then. I am going to answer his argument, every point of it. He did not advance a single new idea. First, he made the assertion that if you have free coinage of silver you will put the country on a silver basis and drive all gold out of the country. This is not true. We have tried it once, and when we quit had $3 to $1 in gold more than when we began. He says this country would be the dumping grounds for all silver bullion. He is mistaken there, for ours is the only nation under the sun that has silver bullion."

Sibley Speaks.

SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., May 28.—Gen. Warner and ex-Congressman Sibley arrived from the west Saturday and were received by a committee of the chamber of commerce. A monster mass-meeting was held at the theater at night, presided over by ex-Congressman Rawlins and attended by representative men of all parties. Both speakers sharply arraigned the administration and the recent speeches of Secretary Carlisle and Comptroller Eckels.

Mr. Sibley said that Mr. Carlisle's portrayal of the horrors of free coinage would not prevent the American people from giving it an experiment. He addressed the silver mine owners particularly, and was immensely cheered when he said they were the least part of the calculations of the bimetallists; that where the mine owners had lost a dollar by the demonetization of silver, the American people had lost a hundred. He closed by prophesying that there would only be two parties in America in 1896, one the party of the gold trust, the other the party of the American people, and every citizen must be on one side or the other.

WILL STAND TOGETHER.

Treaty of Offense and Defense Between Central American Republics.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—New treaties of far-reaching importance have recently been made between Nicaragua and Honduras, and official copies have just been received in Washington. The treaties have been under negotiation for some time and were finally put into effect by proclamation April 15. They are the first practical step toward the formation of a Central American nation out of the several small republics, Nicaragua, Honduras, Guatemala, Salvador and Costa Rica. The first treaty forms a defensive alliance in case of a foreign war and an offensive alliance against common enemies. It obliterates commercial frontiers so that foreign goods once admitted to one country are free to enter the other. An express provision is made against the possibility of war between the countries by an article requiring differences to be adjusted by arbitration by some government on the American continent.

BAD FOR CROPS.

Drought, Hot Winds, Sandstorms and Frosts Do Much Damage.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Reports from western states show that rain is badly needed for the crops. Dry, hot winds and sandstorms over central and northern Iowa and Nebraska did great injury to the crops. Much damage was done by frost Monday night, especially to corn and potatoes, in and near Fond du Lac, Wis. The thermometer at Atlantic, Ia., was 92 and a gale blew. Oats are damaged in that part. Frost damaged the crops at Princeton, Ill. A hot wave came to Pierre, S. D., and the central part of the state was afflicted by heat, which had a bad effect on the crops cut by frost. Rain is badly needed. Continued drought threatens to destroy the entire agricultural product of parts of Illinois near Greenup. Another frost fell at Fairbury, Ill., and badly damaged oats.

To Siege Corea.

LONDON, May 27.—It seems to be accepted as a fact in official circles that Russian troops have crossed the Siberian frontier in force—some Shanghai reports say 20,000 strong—and advanced down into the province of Kirin, in southern Manchuria, near the Corean border. According to German information Russia has embarked upon no less a venture than seizing Manchuria and Corea for herself, and it is suspected from various indications she has an understanding with China on the whole subject.

They Will Debate.

CHICAGO, May 28.—W. H. Harvey, who was challenged to meet Roswell G. Horr, financial editor of the New York Tribune, in a discussion of the facts laid down in "Coin's Financial School," has accepted the invitation in order "to sustain the facts set forth in said book and defend it against the charges of falsehood made by the gold standard press." The only condition is the agreement of suitable rules to govern the contest.

MUST GO TO JAIL.

The Supreme Court Decides Against Eugene Debs.

Justice Brewer Reads the Court's Unanimous Opinion in Habeas Corpus Case—Summary of the Decision.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The habeas corpus case of Eugene V. Debs et al., growing out of the great railroad strike at Chicago last summer was decided in the supreme court of the United States Monday, its unanimous opinion being read by Justice Brewer.

The opinion recited the facts connected with the origin of the case—a suit by the United States in the circuit court for the Northern district of Illinois for an injunction to restrain Debs and his associates of the American Railway union from interfering with the movement of the interstate traffic; the issuing of the injunction prayed for; the violation of the injunction by Debs et al, their arrest and punishment by Judge Woods for contempt of court, and the application of the petitioners for a writ of habeas corpus. The case was argued, it will be remembered, some weeks ago by Attorney General Olney for the government and C. S. Darrow for the petitioners, the contention of the latter being that the circuit court had no jurisdiction of the original bill and therefore there could be no contempt of court in failing to observe the terms of the injunction issued thereunder.

The opinion of the court was in substance as follows:

"The case presented is this: The United States, finding that the interstate transportation of persons and property, as well as the carriage of the mails, is forcibly obstructed and that a combination and conspiracy exists to subject the control of such transportation to the will of the conspirators, applied to one of their courts, sitting as a court of equity, for an injunction to restrain such obstruction and prevent carrying into effect such conspiracy. Two questions of importance are presented.

"1. Are the relations of the general government to interstate commerce and the transportation of the mails such as authorize a direct interference to prevent a forcible obstruction thereof?

"2. If authority exists, as authority in governmental affairs implies both power and duty, has a court of equity the jurisdiction to issue an injunction in aid of the performance of such duty? What are the relations of the general government to interstate commerce and the transportation of the mails? They are those of direct supervision, control and management. While under the dual system which prevails with us the powers of government are distributed between the state and the nation, and while the latter is properly styled a government of enumerated powers, yet within the limits of such enumeration it has all the attributes of sovereignty, and in the exercise of those enumerated powers acts directly upon the citizen and not through the intermediate agency of the state.

"Under the power vested in congress to establish post offices and post roads congress has by a mass of legislation established the great post office system of the country, with all its detail of organization, its machinery for the transaction of business, defining what shall be carried and what not, and the price of carriage, and also prescribing penalties for all offenses against it. Obviously these powers given to the national government over interstate commerce and in respect to the transportation of the mails were not dormant and unused. Congress had taken hold of these two matters, and, by various and specific acts, had assumed and exercised the powers given to it, and was in the full discharge of its duty to regulate interstate commerce and carry the mails.

"If the inhabitants of a single state or a great body of them should combine to obstruct interstate commerce or the transportation of the mails, prosecutions for such offenses had in such community would be doomed in advance to failure. And if the certainty of such failure was known and the national government had no other way to enforce the freedom of interstate commerce and the transportation of the mails than by prosecution and punishment for interference therewith, the whole interests of the nation in these respects would be at the absolute mercy of a portion of the inhabitants of a single state."

The decision says, however, that there is no such impotency in the national government. The strong arm of the national government may be put forth to brush away all obstructions to the freedom of interstate commerce or the transportation of the mails. If the emergency arises, the army of the nation and all its militia are at the service of the nation to compel obedience to its laws. In the present case the right to use force does not exclude the right of appeal to the courts for a judicial determination and for the exercise of all their powers of prevention. Indeed, it is more to the praise than to the blame of the government that instead of determining for itself questions of right and wrong on the part of these petitioners and their associates and enforcing that determination by the club of the policeman and the bayonet of the soldier, it submitted all those questions to the peaceful determination of judicial tribunals, and invoked their consideration and judgment as to the measure of its powers.

After further argument the opinion says: "A most earnest and eloquent appeal was made to us in eulogy of the heroic spirit of those who threw up their employment and gave up their means of earning a livelihood, not in defense of their own rights, but in sympathy for and to assist others whom they believed to be wronged. We yield to none in our admiration of any act of heroism or self-sacrifice, but we may be permitted to add that it is a lesson which cannot be learned too soon or too thoroughly that under this government of and by the people the means of redress of all wrong is through the courts and at the ballot-box, and that no wrong, real or fancied, carries with it legal warrant to invite as a means of redress the cooperation of a mob with its accompanying acts of violence.

"We have given to this case the most anxious and careful attention, for we realize that it touches closely questions of supreme importance to the people of the country." The court then sums up its conclusions substantially as given above and denies the petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

The men who are affected by the decision are Debs, Howard, Keliher, Rogers, Burns, Hogan, Goodwin and Elliott. They are president, vice president and directors of the American Railway union.

Byrnes Retired.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Chief of Police Thomas Byrnes was retired by the police board Monday. The application was handed to Commissioner Parker, who presented it with a statement from Mr. Byrnes. Without comment from anyone, by a unanimous vote the board finished the act and the retirement was complete, done as the chief wished it to be done.

Superintendent Byrnes goes on the retired list with a pension of $3,000 a year.

LIFTED BY AN ICEBERG.

Strange stories of thrilling encounters with icebergs have been brought back from the Arctics by skippers from time to time, but they must all take a back seat now and bow low to Capt. Chester, of the schooner Elwood.

The Elwood lately returned from her first halibut fishing cruise in the northern waters. She left here on January 24, in ballast, but in order to pick up an honest dollar on the voyage, put into Departure bay and took on a cargo of coal for Juneau, Alaska. After discharging at the latter place, she headed for the Muir glacier, the purpose being to load the hold with ice, with which to preserve the fish to be caught later on. The vessel was passing through the icy straits and was just off Hoonia, says Capt. Chester, when he espied an immense iceberg about a mile away. It was fully ten times the size of the schooner and appeared to have become fast upon a reef which was known to exist at that place. The captain considered this a lucky find, for he could now get all the ice he wanted without having to go to the glacier, fully a day's sailing distant. The Elwood was headed for the berg, and when the vessel was within a few yards of it the anchor was dropped. The schooner was then permitted to swing around until she came alongside the iceberg, to which she was made fast with lines.

The tide was at the full at the time, and to all appearances the vessel was perfectly safe. A gang plank was thrown over to a ledge in the ice, and the men set to work to break off huge chunks of the berg and hoist them aboard the vessel. All went well until along toward evening. About thirty tons of ice had been deposited in the hold, and Chester encouraged the men to work a little faster, as he desired to get the entire load and leave as soon as possible. Meanwhile the tide had been falling, which caused the iceberg to settle heavily upon the reef beneath and then to gradually tip over toward the side opposite the vessel. The gang plank connecting the schooner with the iceberg began to rise in the air and had to be made fast to a ledge nearer the water in order to keep it horizontal.

The iceberg continued to careen, and Capt. Chester began to suspect that all was not going to be well for him. He ordered his men to get aboard, and was about to set sail when, with a grinding roar, the iceberg rolled off the reef and started to revolve. Immediately there arose on the starboard side of the vessel, and beneath it, a jagged spur of ice, which until then had formed the bottom of the iceberg. With a crash the ice struck the keel. The next instant the astonished crew found themselves and their vessel lifted out of the water and resting in a sort of groove or cradle at the south end of the ice mountain. It was a panic-inspiring predicament, to say the least, and all hands began to pray for their lives.

The weight of the vessel arrested the revolution of the berg, but did not have the effect of turning it back again to its original position. The reef prevented this.

Chester ordered his men into the boats, with instructions to get out of harm's way as fast as they could. Before abandoning the vessel the mate cut the lines which held her to the iceberg. The men then pulled away to a safe distance, and anxiously awaited the fate of the Elwood. The anchor held fast and the schooner, as if realizing its plight, and desiring to escape, tugged at the chain despairingly. The tide dropped a few more inches, the iceberg careened still further, and the Elwood rose still higher into the air. Although at first thought this condition seemed to render her condition still more desperate, it really proved the schooner's salvation. The tendency of the iceberg to roll over and raise the vessel brought such an enormous strain to bear upon the anchor chain that something had to give way. Something did, and to the joy of the fishermen it was not the anchor or the chain. The iceberg lurched, and the schooner was seen to slide several feet along the crevice it rested in. There was another lurch and another slide. Then the vessel reached a downward grade, and the next instant shot off the iceberg and into the sea bows on, like a rocket. She shipped a heavy sea, as the result of plunging her nose beneath the surface, but quickly righted, and, after stumbling over her anchor chain and tugging viciously to get away, settled down to her original state of tranquility, to all appearances unhurt.—San Francisco Chronicle.

DELANO DIARY

—A number of I. O. O. F's. visited Long Lake to take part in the anniversary exercises, Tuesday evening.

—The last few hot days have been too much for the boys to resist plunging into the river, and swimming is again in order.

—Examinations were held in Delano High School this week, and the school year, so far as that room is concerned closed for the year.

—The funeral of A. Sandberg was held from the Sweedish church on Tuesday, the I. O. O. F; had charge. Rev J. W. Powell preached the sermom.

—Our citizens are getting more and more ashamed of open stores and saloons on Sunday. This is a free country and everybody wants to enjoy a day of rest once a week.

—Gardeners have again taken heart since the frosts have kept away and are once more to be seen planting, and re-planting what has failed to come up or has been frost-bitten.

—On Thursday morning the finest rain of the season visited us, refreshing things generally. It was just what growing crops needed, and the farmer and everybody else came up smiling.

—The Delano Creamery shipped 700 lbs of butter to Minneapolis, on Wednesday, the first from the new creamery. One industry calls for another. Perhaps a cooper could find business munufacturing butter flirkins and doing other work in his line in town.

—Rev. T. Davies is to preach the Baccalaureate sermon on Sunday evening, at the City Hall. A good choir has practiced several selections for singing and an enjoyable occasion is promised by the High School Graduating Class. Come early if you want a seat.

—On Monday, June 3, court convenes at Buffalo. Judge Smith is to preside. A large number of Delanoites will be present, interested in the case concerning the death of Frank Davis, for which August Berneck and Charley Murphy were arrested, and let out on bail.

—One of the members of the street committee succeeded in leveling the road from his office to his intended place of residence and seemed willing street work should cease for the season; but the other member didn't see it that way and put on a bigger crew, to fill up in front of his place this week.

—Rev. J. W. Powell's memorial oration was pronounced excellent. The hall was well filled and the crowd enjoyed the singing and other exercises very much. The decorating committee was well drilled and did nicely. Albert Johnson deserves thanks for hurriedly constructing a nice monument for decoration for the unknown dead.

—The committee appointed to look after securing for Delano, the new hospital for insane, don't seem to make much headway so far. If they wish to accomplish the object for which they were appointed, they had better bestir themselves, as several competitors are in the field. Delano's chances look as bright as those of any other town in the country.

—As yet we have seen no report of the Health Offices annual inspection of the village. This is an important matter and should not be neglected; or our reputatios for being one of the healthiest places in America may suffer later in the season. All vegetable and animal refuse should be removed from alleys, back yards, cellars, and whatever places it may be found before the sultry days of summer breeds disease from them.

—The Junior League has several times lately appeared in public as a chorus. They furnish music at the M. E. church sometimes and are getting quite proficient.

—The thermometer on Tuesday registered 91 deg., and the barometer 27.35 while the air was filled with fine dust which was rapidly hurled through the air. It was for this country a rather disagreeable day.

—Our local weather service man says for the four years since he received his barometer he has never seen it indicate so low a mark as on Tuesday last, except once, and that was the day of the Sauk Center storm.

—It is well to be on the lookout for mad dogs, and all suspicious animals had best be put out of the way, St. Paul's Mayor has ordered the muzzling of all dogs in the city, since three of the citizens died from rabies caused by dog bites.

—The many Delano friends of Rev. Frank R. Millspaugh were pleased to read the recent notice of the appointment of their old rector, to the office of Bishop of Kansas. Rev. Millspaugh will make a good successor to the late Bishop Thomas.

—A young son of G. Riedler who was performing circus tricks in Mat Fautsch's hay loft on Friday afternoon slipped and fell through the opening to the barn floor, knocking the wind out of him and leaving him in an unconscious condition for a time. He is recovering his usual spirits again.

—Some of the pupils in the public school are anxiously inquiring why the new school library don't come. Quite a sum was raised by an entertainment; the board is said to have promised more, and the state contributes to the fund. There appears to be no good reason for neglecting the purchase of a fine library soon.

—The poundmaster could find something to do judging from the horse and cattle tracks found on several gardens in the village. It goes better to take care of animals properly than to be obliged to pay a dollar or so to recover them from the pound. And hay and pasture comes cheaper than early cabbage and sweet corn for feed.

—The demonstrations on Memorial Day were carried out to the satisfaction of everybody, except a few hitches in the programme, which, after the late start, partially on account of rain in the morning could not be averted. Fifteen graves were decorated at the Delano cemetery and seven at the Catholic cemetery and a monument to the unknown, at the City Hall.

—Debs in Delano. Yesterday morning quite a number of Delanoites got a good look at the President of the A. R. U., Eugene V. Debs, as he leaned quietly resting his arm on the car window frame, as he was journeying westward, on a business trip, before going into jail to serve out his sentence for contempt of court. It was not generally known that Mr. Debs would be among the passengers so the crowd was probably much smaller than it would have been.

—The vocal abilities of Delano have been almost suppressed for some time but are gradually coming to the front as those in attendance at the Decoration services in the City Hall had demonstrated to their satisfaction. And those who are present to hear the double quartette on Sunday evening will have still further proof. Good singing can be had in Delano when the material to make the music is brought together and trained a little. A good singing school would facilitate matters very much.

—Some of our citizens who chanced to be near Young's Hotel the First day of the week were treated to a little diversion at the expense of one of our good natured ex-mayors, who with an ex-councilman started out, arrayed in their Sunday best suits to run a foot race. The ex-mayor was ahead, when arriving at a soft place, where the street had been dug up for waterworks he lost his balance, and took a genuine home run slide, raising a terrible dust, much to the amusement of on-lookers. And he never got mad.

—It is far from elevating to a community, large or small, city or village, for its inhabitants and others who may have business with the members of the council or other officials to be obliged to go to a saloon to find them. And it has a bad effect on the morals of the rising generation to see such public officers on the Sabbath day, shame-faced, and blear-eyed, crawling out of back doors and coming up alleys to the street. So long as public officials conduct themselves so, it is little to be wondered at that many young men follow their ignoble example. And only those wise enough to profit by the lessons their actions teach escape. Public officials should by example, as well as by precept, teach people to be law-abiding, not only on Sunday, but every-day in the week, including the Lord's day, and night also.

—The School Board did not engage a High School teacher, at their Saturday night meeting. But requested Mr. Hawker, the Principal, to confer with the High School Superintendent, Mr. Aiton, before they should do so. This may be all right, provided they don't lose the opportunity of securing a good one. Unless all the rooms are properly run the school will show it. Usually the deficiencies are more prominent than the efficiencies on examination days. Delano wants a first class school and should have it. There is no need of taking a back seat for any village in the state. The teachers should be able, industrious, and if possible, harmonious in their work, and with the two first qualifications, and the one object in view, that of having their work show to the best advantage, the latter will follow, and the school will progress.

—We have on hand and for sale a few copies of the 28 page supplement, containing the laws passed by last winter's session of the Legislature. All should read them and preserve a copy for reference. 10 cts. apiece.

—The Eagle is evidently laboring under a misapprehension when it thinks the committee recently appointed to try to get the new Insane Asylum located at Delano have no duties to perform but to "wait on the Governor". Their duty is to hustle about and see what can be done, at once, and deal with the committee appointed to locate the institution.

—On Saturday a picnic party consisting of Mesdames Peters, Mulford, Ball, and Misses Maud Sherry, Mary Hager, Mary Catlin and Irene Cheeley, accompanied by Oscar Ball, drove to Wayzata and embarked on the pleasure boat run by Miss Cheeley's brother, Charles. The party claims to have had a splendid time though the day was raw and cold, and the trip a little early for the season, as they only met one other boat in their day's travel; and the white caps rolled wildly about them. They were a brave lot. They took in on their rounds the Hermitage, and other noted places, stopping a short time at Excelsior and at Wayzata.

Personals.

Robert Otto visited the Cities Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bibbus, of Minneapolis, who had been to Montrose visiting, passed through town on Mouday on their way to her father's, C. C. Hohl, at Rockford, for a few days with the family.

Graduating Exercises.

The patrons and friends of the public school are cordially invited to attend the graduating exercises of the class of '95.

The bacalaureate sermon will be delivered Sunday evening June 2, by the Rev. T. Davies, the music being furnished by a double quartette of local musicians who have kindly consented to assist.

On Friday evening, June 7, the regular graduating exercises will be held. These will consist of orations by the class and an address by Prof. Maria L. Sanford, of the State University, interspersed with music.

Let no one stay at home because they receive no printed invitation, as only a few invitations are sent out by the class and these principally to friends out of town.

PROF. F. N. LEAVENS.

County Cullings.

Several Wright County Editors are finding lots of fault with the Commissioners and their doings. The proceedings of a County Board, that pays half a cent per folio, for publishing them, can't be expected to contain any very broad gaged views.

Herald. E. E. Leuzinger returned Friday from Chicago, where he has made arrangements for the manufacture of his patent hame tug which is to be put on the market by a company recently incorporated. He has great faith in the device.

Ex-Senator Eaton and Ex-Register of Deeds Gutzwiller are having a terrible time about the proceedings of the County Commissioners. Gutzwiller thinks Daye Flannigan is getting to much of the county funds, and accuses Eaton of taking the wrong side because he has been engaged as Attorney. Eaton says Gutzwiller is mad because he hasn't got his nose into the trough. Possibly the whole of them are about correct.

After quoting the GAZETTE article of last week about our effort toward securing the Fourth Hospital for Insane at Delano, the Wright County Times makes an effort to arouse an interest in the citizens of that place to capture the prize. The times says: "Let us arouse ourselves. Make a common fight for the town and set to work and shame the sneers and gibs that Monticello is dead. Let us awake out of our Rip Van Winkleism, and do something." Delano is already in the field with a committee appointed to hunt up a location that can be secured, and ascertain the requirements of the Board appointed for the purpose of locating the institution.

TARIFF IS A TAX.

Minnesota Now Has Two U. S. Senators who are aware of that fact.

THE St. Paul Globe has purchased the Morning Call, thus ridding the field of a lively rival. The Globe will now, doubtless, keep up its reputation as a first class democratic newspaper.

THE free silver fellows have recently found a convert that puts them in a position to rejoice, in this Congressional district. Last fall Mr. Towne was paraded as the smartest man in the country by the republicans and elected to Congress and now he is said to have come out for free silver.

THE St. Paul Globe should be a trifle more guarded in her editorials and not abuse Democrats for holding early conventions and meetings to announce themselves as favoring free silver, while in the next column exhorting voters everywhere to hold sound money conventions as soon as possible. The Globe is solid for bi-metallism. That's right. But she must allow everybody to have early meetings if she does any body.

THE St. Cloud Times reads the Journal rather a sarcastic letter for letting out space in its columns, taking trade in pay. The Times says the Journal bargained for $100. add for a dentist, agreeing to take pay in trade, and similar bargains are mentioned with other professionals. The Times shouldn't be so severe on its neighbor for practicing the doctrine preached by its party. Prof. Laughlin says, "From 92 per cent to 95 per cent of the transactions are performed by this machinery without the use of money." And he and his party preach the doctrine of doing business on the Exchange plan.

IN criticising the speech of William M. Harvey, "Coin," in the noted debate between him and Prof. McLaughlin, recently occurring in Chicago, the Pioneer Press, among other things says: "When a man stoops to the demogogic baseness of an appeal to what he assumes to be a national prejudice against Great Britain as the foundation of an argument on a purely economic question, it stamps him with thorough dishonesty in his treatment of it." A few years ago the republicans flooded this state with small pamphlets, favoring protective tariff, on which was printed a United States flag and an English flag, with the question, "Which flg are you for?" Why didn't the Pioneer get off some of its moralisms on that occasion?

PROF. LAUGHLIN'S reply to Mr. Harvey on the financial question is being praised by republican papers generally, those of the "sound money" sort. While "Coin" may bear some criticising we fail to see how Prof. McLaughlin made much of an impression on his arguments. The Prof. claims, more money is no more needed than are more yard sticks in a store. Now we all know when a man sets up in a small way in business he may get along with one yard stick. But as business grows and help has to be hired, and more goods have to be measured, more yardsticks are required.

Mr. Laughlin claims that most business is done on the system of exchange; that little money is needed; that from 92 to 95 per cent of business is done without money. That in retail business 54 per cent is done without money, and that the system is growing. That is a fatal defect in the Professor's argument, for this part of the country. People, here, are getting down to a cash basis, as fast as possible. Merchants do as nearly a cash business as they can. Farmers get cash for their wheat, their cream, eggs and other products; more and more cash bargains are made each year. Instead of coming to town loaded with butter, eggs, potatoes and cabbage to spend half a day peddling them about town and exchanging them for what they want, they prefer to sell for cash and then they can buy for cash. And, in this neighborhood, they do not prefer to return to Prof. Laughlin's old fashioned style of during business. If statistics really show the Professor to be right in his statement, the condition, so far as retail trade in country places, it comes from necessity, and not from choice. But, because farmers can find no cash market for their products, they are compelled to dicker and trade, as they can. This argument may do, somewhere, but about here, people prefer the money to do business with, rather than to be continually paying exchange on small amounts.

He claims that because silver has not the same purchasing power in '94 as in '73 free coinage would not be a just way of paying debts. Perhaps if it was remonetized it would have as much purchasing power as it had in 1873.

He claims free coinage of silver would mean monometallism. But it does not always act that way. People of this generation mostly know that gold, silver and paper have been on a par for years, with gold and silver both as standards. What is the reason it can't continue as it was previous to the tinkering with it?

It doesn't matter so much what the money is, so it is stable. It is the continual tinkering and scheming to make a few cents, by those who manipulate the most of it, that makes people afraid something might happen to bankrupt the country. The Professor has something to say about a depreciated standard of value. How can he expect to prove to people who are every day doing business with these same big silver dollars, selling for cash and buying with them what they need or exchanging them for gold, oftentimes giving five of them for a five dollar gold piece, that they are "depreciated." And, if now, when silver is not money at all, as some claim, and is so "depreciated" according to others, it will buy as much as gold, dollar for dollar, how could it be injured by placing it where it was before it was demonetized in 1873? Mr. Laughlin claims it would be dishonest to restore silver to its former place that it would raise prices and reduce labor wages. In this western country, with farmers, that would help them get rich in two ways. But in the cities, of course it would be good argument. Then he claims the railroads could pay their debts with "depreciated" currency and save about half they would of paying in gold. What difference could it possibly make. If the railroad owes you, you are willing even anxious to have them pay you now, in silver or anything else. The condition beats the theory here, all to death. Bimetallism in the United States has been successful and can be again, if let alone when in operation.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, May 31, 1895.

President Cleveland never had a closer or a dearer friend than the late Secretary Gresham. His grief could not have been greater had his brother died. He insisted that the dead Secretary should have the honor of a military funeral—only one other civilian, (the late John A. Logan) was ever accorded that honor—although Mrs. Gresham at first desired that the services should be private. And, although he had himself not been well for some days before Secretary Gresham's death, he decided at once that he and the surviving members of the cabinet would accompany the remains to their last resting place, at Chicago, which was an honor never before accorded a dead official. While the busybodies have already begun to guess and suggest the name of the next Secretary of State, it is certain that the President's grief has been too deep to give the matter even a thought, and probable that all or the greater part of the thirty days allowed by law will expire before the selection is made. The democratic party is rich in material and President Cleveland enjoys the deserved reputation of being a good judge of men so there is no occasion for any worry about a mistake being made in the selection.

The eulogy of Senator Voorhees on the late Secretary Gresham, although compressed into a short telegram, sent to Sergeant-at-Arms Bright, of the Senate, will hardly be surpassed by any of the many longer ones to be written or spoken. Mr. Voorhees said: "Indiana is in mourning for her most distinguished native-born son. Of commanding ability, stainless honor, and undaunted courage, Walter Q. Gresham lived and died the great soldier, the great jurist, and the great Secretary. No manlier spirit was ever called from earth, no truer heart ever ceased to beat. He loved his neighbor as himself and his country more than himself. His name and fame will continue to live on the best pages of American history as long as that history itself endures. You and I will never look upon his like again. The public service loses a statesman, you and I lose a friend beloved. May God bless the bereaved ones in his darkened home."

Politicians of all parties who happened to be in Washington when the news of the easy triumph of the Foraker men over the McKinleyites in the Ohio Republican State convention was received, agreed in expressing the opinion that the McKinley boom was thereby heavily handicapped, notwithstanding the perfunctory McKinley resolution that was afterwards adopted by the convention. McKinley stock has been dropping for some time, and if the idea once gets accepted that there are a large number of influential republicans in Ohio who, while pretending to be for him are in reality engaged in bargaining with the other candidates for the nomination, it will drop out of sight and the name of McKinley will not even go before the republican national convention.

There is another thing about the Ohio convention that was much commented on by the politicians. That was John Sherman's speech which indicates almost to a certainty the intention of the republicans to try to juggle the silver question through another National campaign by the adoption of a platform that both the silver and the gold republicans will interpret to be in their favor, and which will in reality mean nothing, except putting off a settlement of the question to some indefinite future time.

Among the many things told to the credit of the late Secretary Gresham is the following, given as his remarks to Gen. Grant, who visited him while he was in command at Natchez, Miss.: "Why, General, I regard the enmity of these people as the most natural thing on earth. We are all made by our geography, moulded by our environment. If you or I had been born in the South, reared in the South, you and I would both have been intense southern men. We represent the sentiment of our people and these southern folks represent theirs. To me it all appears very natural. And, to tell you the truth, General, when I find a southern man who is not for the South I experience all that instinctive distrust for him which I do for a copperhead. I don't quite hate him like I do a copperhead, because he's siding with me and I'm too weak to hate people who are on my side, no matter where they come from. But its a fact, General, when I find a southern man who is against the south, I somehow disbelieve in him and can't give him credit for being either manly or honest."

CORRESPONDENCE

BUFFALO BUNTS.

Miss Mary Hanlin spent part of last week with relatives, in Watertown.

Miss Sadie Knight who has been attending school at Mankato, returned home, Saturday.

James Madigan, of Maple Lake, was in town the 30th.

Miss Helen Hellier returned home from Wisconsin, Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Homer spent Saturday and Sunday with friends.

F. H. Lindsley of Delano was a county seat visitor, Friday.

Decoration day was appropriately observed by our citizens.

The I. O. O. F. entertainment was well attended, and a very good programme was rendered.

Dr. M. F. Lowe, our popular dentist, arrived from Annandale Friday, he will be here the first fifteen days of each month, hereafter.

C. E. Oakley who was a delegate to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, held in Pittsburg, returned home last Friday.

Joseph Reems was in town Saturday.

Miss Susie Austin, of Minneapolis was the guest of Dr. Cady and family the past week.

Court commenced Monday. There seems to be quite a large attendance this term.

Dr. Cady and J. D. Cady visited Litchfield Saturday on business.

Dr. Ilstrup of Cokato was a county seat visitor, Monday.

W. H. Frazee, M. A. O'Hair and Dr. Shrader were registered at the American Monday.

LONG LAKE.

On Sunday preceeding Decoration Day the Rev Dr. Tuttle, of Minneapolis, held memorial services at the church in our village.

Last Decoration day at this place was an interesting occasion. It was well attended. The people were well entertained by an interesting discourse delivered by Rev. Wright; and by other intesesting ceremonies at the Town Hall, at the conclusion of which a procession was formed with members of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. in the lead, followed by members of the I. O. O. F. and Rebekah Lodges, and by the scholars of the different schools in the vicinity; all under control of Marshall H. C. Russel, marched to the Union Cemetery, where the ceremonies of decorating the graves of the reposing heroes were conducted with much reverence to their memories.

People of this village have been gratified by seeing Stephen Lyons of Wayzata on our streets on several occasions of late. Mr. Lyons for several years had been suffering from an affliction that has impaired his constitution especially his limbs, under which he was unable to walk or raise himself from a couch or chair for many months. Laterly he has recovered sufficiently to travel with crutches and to drive around alone with horse and buggy. He is one of the veterans of the late civil war and participated in the ceremonies of last decoration day held at this village.

Joshua Williams, hardware merchant of Minneapolis, and family who are residing in a cottage on Orono Point, Lake Minnetonka for the summer, had a peculiar experience with lightning on the 2nd inst. Mr. Williams and wife on this occasion were standing near a window in one of the apartments of the cottage within a few feet of each other, and suddenly they were startled by a peal of thunder resembling an artillery report, and at the same instant they noticed an object resembling a ball of fire, of the size of a base ball, passing between them. Fortunately all escaped without the slightest injury despite the fact that it was a bolt of lightning that had struck the cottage, the effects of which Mr. Williams found plainly visible about the building. The presence of a water pipe or pump in one of the apartments connecting with a well or cistern serving as conducter, Mr. Williams thinks saved them from more disasterous results.

DIED.—At her home in Medina, Hennepin County, Minn., June 3. 1895, Mrs. Olive Vanderwarker, wife of James Vanderwaker, aged 76 years and 6 months.—Pioneer Press.

The deceased with her husband and family removed to Medina about 1870, where they have resided ever since.

The deceased was an intellectual and agreeable person, without dissimilation and was generally well informed on topics of the day on which she formed and expressed her ideas without reserve, respecting those of others however. She was a good neighbor and sincere in her friendship.

REV. TABOR DAVIES.

But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. II. Corinthians, Chap., II; Ver. 18.

Before going right into the heart of my subject, which is the chief glory of man, it will be better by way of preparation to pass in review some things which are not his chief glory and to dismiss them.

A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things which he possesseth. Riches, material objects, then, are not the chief glory of man, not even a constituent part of man. That is an old theme of philosophers and preachers and yet so common is the mistake that men require to be warned against it as much as ever. Socrates said that he did nothing else than go about among the people of Athens, urging them not to care for their bodies or for their possessions before or so earnestly as for their souls, so that they may be the best possible, because virtue does not consist in possessions. Had riches been the chief glory of man Croesus, King of Lydia, could have attained it, but so far from riches being even his chief glory, we are informed that we would scarcely have heard of him if he had not come into contact with Solon the Wise. It is a stage of life through which most people pass, to imagine that if they only had enough of this world's goods they would have attained their chief end. Some people remain at that stage all their lives, their chief concern is always what they shall get, and the few that attain their ends, possession the chief glory of their lives, are the poorest specimens of mankind, their highest powers frequently being ruined in the process.

There is another type of human glory which dazzles many and that is the physical type represented in man by strength, in woman by beauty. The chief glory of a young man surely is his strength. The chief glory of a young woman surely is beauty. It is reckoned so in some circles of society. But if physical strength and physical beauty alone be the chief glory of man or woman we shall find the history of those who have made it their chief aim in life somewhat disappointing. Hercules is the great leader among the strong men and there is a good deal in his story which had best remain untranslated in its original Greek language. Among his followers we have the gladiators in the Roman age and in our own day they are represented by Corbett, Sullivan, Sandow and others who do not draw out the noblest feelings and impulses in their admirers. They are on very slippery ground and the line between strength and brutality is very undefined and is continually being overreached, if not by the above mentioned ones, yet by their followers. Well said Paul to Timothy, "Bodily exercise profiteth for a little time." On the female side those who have found their chief glory to consist in beauty, we have a long list of names more or less famous or infamous, be ginning with white-armed Helen, of Troy, who caused such a disturbance between the Greeks and Trojans. I shall mention no more names but we have them in the Roman age, in ancient and modern history and in our newspapers today, women whose chief glory is their beauty and where there has been no more to them than mere beauty it has proved a curse rather than a blessing. Well said Peter of the women, "Whose adorning [let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair and of wearing of gold or of putting on of apparel. But] let it be the hidden man of the heart in that which is not corruptable, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price." Beauty, alas, often lies very near to vanity. The gymnasium, the athletic club, the dressing table have their place and uses in our training but we greatly err when we give them the chief place. They do not belong to the highest glory of man. There are other objects which sometimes seem to constitute man's glory, objects which men have suffered and died to obtain. Leaving out the more selfish objects such as pleasure and display, we might speak of freedom, of good conditions of living, equal laws for mankind. But men have attained their chief glory and shed a lustre of imperishable fame down through history who have been in most unequal and adverse conditions of life. The downtrodden, the oppressed, the slaves, the prisoners, the persecuted ones, these are they who have most frequently won glory for themselves and for their race. Surely glory does not consist in or depend upon any accident of life, such as birth or station or country or privilege or circumstance, nor can it be deeply effected by any of these. It is equally attainable by the captive in his dungeon and the king on his throne and in every case it depends solely on the person himself whether he gains or loses it.

We come now to something which more closely concerns our object in coming here this evening, something which is a step higher towards the chief glory of man, Knowledge. Here a wide and interesting field opens out to our view, a field which it is well worth while to seize and occupy and linger over. It is not necessary for me to praise knowledge or even to urge you to seek it. It is a far higher and more worthy object in life than any I have mentioned, more ennobling and more enduring than riches or pleasure or circumstances of life, it steadies youth and furnishes a solace and retreat to old age. It raises the person above the commoner chances and vanities of life. Those who have really tasted of it find a joy and a charm in it which is its own reward for the pains of seeking. They will follow the pure-eyed goddess of Learning for her own sake without needing the hope of reward or the fear of punishment to be continually set before them.

To you who have begun to climb the steep steps of knowledge and who at this time are passing over a very important step, I would say climb on, climb higher. Doubtless the day will come when you will look back to the height on which you now stand and what you know will appear very insignificant, just as the tottering footsteps of an infant seem ridiculous to the mighty stride of a strong man. And yet from those small infant steps grew that great stride. Climb on, and yet there is a higher height than knowledge. We must look for the chief glory of man somewhere else. For knowledge as the sense of learning has its defects as well as its excellencies.

They are briefly these:

All may not attain it. Few, very few of all that start up the steep ascent ever get above the first two or three steps. It may be from inability, it may be from adverse circumstances, but if high intellectual attainments be the goal of mankind then 99 out of every 100 miss the chief glory of life. It is evanescent. Every day some old theory is being exploded and a new one is taking its place. Knowledge is vanishing away. It requires a man's whole time and study to keep himself from falling behind in any department. A man may be very learned and yet his life and actions may be impure, unjust and dishonorable and the very learning he possesses many only make him more clever to do evil.

Knowledge does not even give common sense. Some very learned men do not know how to put two and two together and are utterly lacking in the practical business of every day life. If man's chief glory had consisted in any of the things I have mentioned the race would have entered into that glory in the persons of the ancient Greeks. They were the ablest people the world has known. It was at Athens that the human form attained its most exquisite and winning beauty, there that human freedom put forth its most splendid power, there that human intellect displayed its utmost subtlety and grace, there that philosophy found the most perfect expression of its loftiest and deepest thoughts. Had earthly wisdom been the chiefest good of man, had permanent happiness lain within the grasp of sense or been among the rewards of culture, had it been possible by man's unaided power to win salvation by the gifts and qualities of his nature, then such ends would have been achieved at Athens in the day of her glory. But the certain corruption and decay of that race stands as a monument to all time that there is no permanent glory in any of these. The experiment has been tried and failed and that is one of the lessons, perhaps most important that Greece has to teach us. the failure of these things to satisfy the deepest needs of our nature; that not by these do we enter into our glory.

What is the chief glory of man? You will see my drift now and perhaps have answered the question already. It is character. The best thing about you is not what you possess, not your appearance, not even what you know, but you yourself, your character, what you are. Woe to the man whose money is the best part of him, or the woman whose beauty is all she has, or the person whose knowledge is greater than his common sense or modesty or goodness. Blessed is the man who himself is greater than all his possessions or his reputation, circumstances or attainments. Blessed is he whose character is his chief glory. Let us substitute the word character for glory in our text and we shall see that it fits very well. "We all with open face beholding as in a glass the character of the Lord, are changed into the same image from character to character even as by the spirit of the Lord. In many places where glory is used character may be substituted. The Heavens declare the glory (character) of God. The earth is filled with the glory (character) of the Lord. When Christ was transfigured the disciples saw His glory, ie. His true character. Jesus manifested the glory (character) of God. Character is the chief glory of man, the most valuable thing he can possess and the question is, How to make it the best possible? How to gain the best character? There are two ways mainly. The first is by rule. A man sees that justice, goodness, truth, virtue and character are objects worthy of his attaining, and so we have rules and precepts innumerable for the purpose. You have had them from your childhood up; the headlines in your copy-books urged you to be virtuous that you might be happy, to avoid every appearance of evil, warned you that evil communications corrupt good manners. Rules of conduct are plentiful enough. Let us examine some of these to show that if character could have been formed by rule we have enough precepts and maxims to make it perfect. Pythagoras, the old Greek philosopher, prescribes self examination. Every night review the doings of the past day.

"Let sleep not come upon thy languid eyes
Before each daily action thou hast scanned;
What's done amiss, what done, what left undone,
From first to last examine all, and then

That is very good advice, the only defect is that we cannot always control our conduct, cannot always keep it up to the mark we set ourselves. Night after night we stand literally self condemned. We have done the thing we ought not to have done. Most people have started out on their moral career with some set rules for conduct, some set of principles but alas, they have found the strife too difficult. They find it a hopeless task to thus examine themselves and thus improve and so have ceased to live by rule and to have any particular principles. The average life of the community they live in is good enough for them even if it be a frivolous or immoral or drunken or godless one. The philosopher Epictetus has an excellent set of rules for conduct which are well worthy of our consideration here, and I could ask nothing better than that they might be set up and obeyed by this community.

Sustine et abstine. Bear and forbear. Bear whatever God assigns to you, abstain from that which he forbids. As rules of practice prescribe to yourself an ideal and then set up to it. Be mostly silent, or if you converse do not let it be about vulgar and insignificant topics such as dogs and horses, racing or prize-fighting. Avoid foolish and immoderate laughter, vulgar entertainments, impurity, display and egotistical remarks. Set before yourselves the examples of the great and good. Do not be dazzled by mere appearances. Do what is right quite irrespective of what people will say or think. Remember that your body is a very small matter and needs but very little, (just as all the foot needs is a shoe and not a dazzling ornament of gold, purple or jewelled embroidery). To spend all ones time on the body or on bodily exercise shows a weak intellect. Do not be fond of criticising others and do not resent their criticisms of you. Everything has two handles; one by which it may be borne, the other by which it cannot. If your brother be unjust, do not take up the matter by that handle, the handle of his injustice, for that handle is the one by which it cannot be taken up; but rather by the handle that he is your brother and brought up with you and then you will be taking it up as it can be borne. Be selfdenying, but do not boast of it. Be independent and moderate, regard not the opinion or censure of others, but keep a watch upon yourself as your most dangerous enemy. Never relax your efforts but aim at perfection. Let everything which seems best be to you a law not to be disregarded; and remember that when anything painful or pleasurable, glorious or inglorious is set before you remember that now is the struggle, now is the time of the Olympian contest and it may not be put off and that by a single defeat or yielding your advance in virtue may be either won or lost." These are noble words and remind us of those sacred and far more deeply reaching words, Be ye perfect even as your father which is in Heaven is perfect. Behold now is the accepted time; behold now is the day of salvation.

The teachings of Epictitus, Marcus Aurelius, and Seneca approach exceedingly near to the Sermon on the Mount. Yet the sermon on the Mount has conquered the world while the manual of Epictetus and the thoughts of Aurelius have remained mere barren pieces of literature. If character could have been formed by rule we have rules enough in our midst, among the ancients to say nothing of the Jewish law, but the story of the failure of all these is written large enough for all to read, in history and in our own lives.

What are the defects of the system of rules and commandments? They are chiefly two. Want of sufficient authority in announcing them. Why should we obey the rules laid down by Plato, by Epectetus, by Marcus Aurelius or even by Moses? Who were they? They were men as we are and what right have they to lay down the law for us? Let them show their authority and we will obey them. We break our own rules because we made them. We are bewildered by the number of voices in the world and dont know which to obey. Professor Huxley gives expression to this bewilderment when he says "I protest that if some great power would agree to make me always think what is true and do what is right on condition of being turned into a sort of clock and wound up every morning I should instantly close with the offer."

The second defect is the want of an absolutely faultless and vivid example of their practice. Seneca, Epictetus and the rest all failed to keep the rules they made and he who would teach morals must practice what he preaches. And that is what God offers. And thus we are brought to the true and only method of obtaining the best character. Keep the rules and commandments by all means. They are good in their way and a standard to go by although not the highest.

Personal influence. The authority and power exercised by one life on another or as the Apostle puts it in the words of the text, by reflection we are changed from character to character from a poor, imperfect character to a better one, ultimately to a perfect one by the influence of the perfect character of Jesus upon us. The law of influence, of reflection, is very well known. Live with a person whom you love and respect and you cannot help becoming like them. Have their life and example continually before you and unconsciously you become changed into their likeness. If you lived with Socrates, beheld him with unveiled face, you could not help becoming wise. If you lived with Aristides you would become just; unconsciously your character would reflect his. If you lived with another man you would become noble; with another, brave, in that degree in which their characters influenced yours. If you lived with Christ as your companion you would become Christlike. His truth, His purity, His meekness, His graciousness, would be reflected in your life and your character would be changed into His glorious image. And so I need not prescribe any rules for your guidance. I might say to you, Be true, be good, be pure-minded, be strong-hearted, be zealous, be loving, be meek, be perfect, but it may all be summed up in a single word, be Christlike. For Christ is all these and more than I could tell you. As students who have a mind to cultivate you do well to take the great and wise of the world as your models, read their words, imitate their lives and become like them in wisdom and knowledge. As men and women who recognize that you have a work to do in life, a character to be formed, I should urge you to take the noblest and richest character the world has ever known as your example, make his friendship, live with Him day by day, come under the gracious influence of His person become like Him, reflect Him, or as the words of our text say, Be changed into His image from glory to glory. May the blessed spirit of the Lord sent to be our guide and comforter so work in you as to keep you from failing and present you faultless before the face of your Father in Heaven with exceeding joy.

ODETTE TYLER, the actress whom Howard Gould did not marry, is writing a book. All kinds of accidents make authors in these days.

AN English commission on tuberculous cattle, after laboring five years, has come to the grand conclusion that it is, all things considered, safer to drink milk cooked than raw.

MISS AGNES P. MAHONEY, of Hawthorne, N. J., who carried off the first prize in materia medica of the New York college of pharmacy, is the first woman whose name has been inscribed on the roll of honor in that institution.

THE Boston school boys are formed into companies and regiments which are regularly reviewed by city and state officers. The country is going to have plenty of good soldiers for future emergencies.

A BROOKLYN woman convicted of cutting her brutal husband's throat, though not fatally, was allowed her freedom under a suspended sentence, with an injunction from the judge that she must not let it occur again.

THE woman who fell from a fourth-story window in Brooklyn and immediately asked if her bonnet was on straight demonstrated that the new woman never loses her presence of mind in the most perilous moments of her existence.

THE transcontinental lines are going to refuse to carry bicycles and baby carriages free. This is rather taking advantage of the babies; but as for the 'cyclers, they can protect themselves and get even by traveling the whole distance awheel.

IT is somewhat strange that the state where woman was once degraded, through polygamy, should be one of the first to bestow on her the right of suffrage, for the Utah constitution, woman suffrage and all, is pretty certain to be accepted by the people.

THE New York World says there is a law in that state which makes it a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment in the penitentiary, to knowingly give reporters false information for publication. There ought to be such a law in every state, says the Minneapolis Tribune.

HARPER'S WEEKLY suggests that a cup of tea is a much more refreshing and harmless mixture than the "cocktail," and that there ought to be in every city tea houses where the beverage can be procured at all hours, as there are in London. The English are inordinate tea drinkers, and they are a robust race. A sup of tea is ordinarily a much better thing to drink two hours before dinner than a cocktail.

THE supreme court of Maine has refused a white woman a divorce from a negro on the simple ground of color. This may excite some persons, but Maine simply follows the nation by refusing to recognize the color line in its citizenship. If the white woman regarded a negro as unfit for her husband because of his color she ought to have made her decision before marriage. He was just as black as a lover as he was as a husband.

IN Newark, N. J., Michael Patrono has been wrestling with the problem of perpetual motion. Capitalists have actually invested $200,000 in his undertaking, which shows that even capital has foolish moments. An exhibition of the motor was to have been given a few days ago, but all of a sudden Michael discovered a missing principle, which he calls an inexhaustible force. That missing principle may be as hard to find as the missing link of the Darwinites. Perpetual motion seems to be only a perpetual folly.

THE navy department, after many years of experimenting, has at last adopted a type of rifle with which the service and marine corps will soon be provided. The new rifle is the invention of J. P. Lee, of Connecticut, and is believed to be superior to the Krag-Jorgenson rifle which is now supplied to the army. It is lighter, and enables the sailor to carry fifty more rounds of ammunition than the soldier. Ordinarily it is capable of forty rounds a minute and a possible speed of fifty. The chief of ordnance believes the Lee rifle to be the best yet tried in the United States.

SINCE the adjournment of the North Carolina legislature it has been found that a bill which was tabled in the senate and was never before the house has been enrolled, ratified and signed. A suit was then brought to determine whether the bill was a law and the decision was rendered that the ratification and signatures of the presiding officers made it a law, though there was a gross fraud in the business. Under this ruling there is, of course, no further use for members of the legislature in that state. This is one of those decisions which help to bring the law into contempt.

SOME recent naval experiments show that a material made from the pitch of Indian corn stalks is superior to coca cellulose as a packing between the exterior and interior hulls of war vessels to prevent sinking in case the hull is penetrated by missiles. The coca cellulose has been used because the packing closes up after the passage of the projectile, leaving no hole for the water to pass through. The corn pith is lighter and more elastic, and seems to be a far better protection. If this invention proves a success, another heretofore waste product will acquire a commercial value.

It defines exactly and clearly the position of Archbishop Kain as coadjutor, making more definite the powers conferred upon him a year ago.

THE formal transfer of Formosa to Japan occurred June 2. Ex-Secretary John W. Foster will sail for America at once.

THE COLIMA DISASTER.

Some Particulars of the Awful Wreck Are Given.

The Big Steamer Was Badly Overloaded —Officers Were Brave and Stuck to Their Posts—Struggle for Life.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 4.—A special telegram from Maztlan says:

"The steamer San Juan has arrived here with the twenty-one passengers picked up Tuesday from the wreck of the Colima. All the rescued people are badly bruised. They were picked up from pieces of wreckage and rafts. They are not in condition to tell a connected story of the wreck and the experiences of their escape, but many interesting particulars have been obtained.

"The steamer was heavily laden and had a large deck load of lumber. When the storm struck her she made bad weather of it. the captain having great difficulty in keeping her head to the sea. The wind increased in fury until it is said to have been the fiercest storm known along this coast in twenty years. Waves washed the vessel and started the deck load. The gale tore part of the deck load of lumber from its fastenings and whirled the heavy planks about with appalling violence. Many people were struck and maimed. At least one passenger was killed by having his head crushed by one of the flying timbers.

"In their terror the passengers made few mental notes of their surroundings at this juncture. The survivors say, however, that the officers of the steamer were brave and active. Capt. Taylor stood upon the bridge, his first officer, D. E. Griffiths, with him. At an order Griffiths rushed aft to superintend the launching of lifeboat No. 5. Second Officer Langhorn was at lifeboat No. 3, and succeeded in getting it launched and filled with passengers. Then down went the ship and Langhorn's boat was capsized. All in the boats were supposed to have been drowned.

"Capt. Taylor went down with the ship. As the ship pitched downward he blew three blasts of the whistle, supposedly as a signal of good-by. Then he disappeared beneath the waves. The engineers and firemen remained at their posts. Freight Clerk Berry was in his room at the time of the final plunge. Third Officer Hanson was saved. As the steamer sunk he cut some of the lashings of the deck lumber. Then he jumped or was thrown overboard on the weather side of the vessel and reached the top of the deck house. This had been torn off and washed away. There Hanson clung for twenty-one hours. He saw men and women sink about him but was powerless to aid them. Hanson says that as the steamer foundered the boilers burst. The deck blew out under his feet as he left the ship. Ten other men were thrown into the sea with him. The bursting of her boilers tore off the deck and threw part of it over at least a dozen men who were struggling in the water, killing them all.

"Two life rafts were seen to be afloat. On one were eight men and on another six, including J. A. Childburg, of Seattle, Wash., who seemed to have been a leader in the work of launching the rafts. There was no hope for women or children and small chance for men in such a storm. Many of the women and children must have remained in their cabins. The completely nude bodies of the stewardess and two other women came floating by the deckhouse some time after the steamer sunk.

"Prof. Harold Whiting of the California university made a heroic but futile effort to save his wife and four children and the nurse. He got into a boat in which were A. J. Sutherland and others. The boat was soon swamped. Then it was righted, but again went over. Five times she was righted after being overturned. The women and Prof. Whiting were soon drowned, despite all efforts to save them. Sutherland floated with the bottom of the boat serving him as a protecting shield.

"The survivors drifted about for twenty-four hours in what Capt. Pitts, of the San Juan says was the hardest storm experienced on the coast in twenty years. Of course, none but the stoutest could survive. Many of those saved were badly hurt by the wreckage and lumber. Among those most severely injured is C. S. Cushing, Jr., of Oakland. His brother was drowned.

"The Colima is in 600 fathoms of water. The location where she went down is given as 18 degrees 38 minutes latitude, longitude 104 degrees 14 minutes west. Though the direct cause of the disaster was the tremendous sea and the fearful southeast gale, it is generally believed that the Colima was badly overloaded. All the passengers praise the captain for his coolness and heroism. The last they saw of him he stood at his post."

MISS EMILY FAITHFULL.

Death of the Noted English Advocate of Woman's Employment.

LONDON, June 4.—The Times announces the death of Miss Emily Faithfull at the age of 60 years.

[Emily Faithfull was born in 1835 and was presented at the English court in her 21st year. Becoming interested in the condition of women she collected a band of female compositors, and in 1860 founded a typographical establishment in which women as compositors were employed and for which she obtained the approval of Queen Victoria, who appointed Miss Faithfull printer and publisher in ordinary to her majesty. In May, 1863, Miss Faithfull started a monthly publication called the Victoria Magazine, in which for eighteen years the claims of women to remunerative employment were earnestly set forth. In 1868 she published a novel entitled "Change Upon Change." She achieved a marked success as a lecturer. In 1872-3 Miss Faithfull visited the United States. After a third tour in America in 1882-3 she published a book entitled "Three Visits to America," containing vivid descriptions of various feminine industries and life as she found it among the Mormons in Salt Lake, Colorado and California.

Four Are Killed.

OMAHA, Neb., June 5.—A special from McCook, Neb., says that about 9 o'clock Sunday night while searching for washouts between Edison and Oxford the engine of the repair train plunged into a washout about 2 miles east of Edison and of the five men on the engine four were killed. The dead: B. V. Haley, roadmaster; Frank Jeffries, engineer; C. C. Rowell, fireman; Samuel Mundy, conductor. Frank Harries, private secretary to Superintendent Campbell, of the Burlington, miraculously escaped with slight injuries. All but Mundy were married men whose families reside in McCook, where the dead men were brought Monday morning.

The Next Congress.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The World prints the result of a telegraphic poll of the next congress on the silver, tariff and income tax questions. Answers were received from about one-half the members. Out of 116 members 55 are unqualifiedly in favor of free coinage, 44 for bimetallism with international agreement, and 17 for a single gold standard. Only 28 members are opposed to all changes in the tariff schedule, while 35 favor moderate changes and 38 are pronounced for radical changes. Forty-nine congressmen favor the principle of the income tax, 47 oppose it, and many evaded or failed to answer on this item.

Road Race Winners.

CHICAGO, June 5.—The judges and officials of the Chicago road race Monday night heard evidence with regard to fraudulent riding. Fairmon was awarded the first prize, Spike being given first time prize. Twenty-five men who claimed to have come in near the front were ruled out for not having covered the entire course.

Big Telescope Finished.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 5.—The great 40-inch lens—the hugest telescope glass ever made—designed for the Yerkes telescope in Chicago, has been completed.

WITH SOLEMN RITES.

Monument to Confederate Dead at Chicago Dedicated.

CHICAGO, June 1.—Under a sky now gray and now blue, as light clouds veiled the sun, blue and gray—federals and confederates—united Thursday in dedicating the monument to the confederate dead in Oakwoods cemetery. The distinguished officers of the southern army in the late war, in company with famous leaders of the union troops, proceeded to the cemetery by train on the Illinois Central railroad at 8:45 a. m.

In the throng were men whose names are historic. There were Longstreet and Fitznugh Lee, Gen. John C. Black and Senator and Gen. John M Palmer, Marcus J. Wright, of Tennessee, and Gen. Joseph, Stockton, of Illinois; M. C. Butler, Eppa Hunton, Gen. John C. Underwood, the projector

At 10:45 the distinguished party and escort, consisting of G. A. R. veterans, detachments of Illinois National guard, etc., reached the monument, but it was considerably after 11 o'clock when the military band began the opening selection. Col. Joseph Desha Pickett, chaplain of the Kentucky Orphan brigade, invoked Divine blessing. Gen. John C. Underwood, who originated the idea of the monument, sketched the inception and progress of the movement and introduced Rev. H. W. Bolton, past commander of U. S. Grant post No. 28, G. A. R.

Gen. Wade Hampton was the orator of the day. He said the lofty column dedicated here stood as a silent though noble emblem of a restored union and a reunited people. The brave men in Chicago in this dedication have done honor to the dead here, not as confederate soldiers, but as brave men who preferred imprisonment and death, rather than freedom obtained by a dishonorable sacrifice of the principles for which they were willing to die. Four cannon, captured from the union forces in the battle of Murfreesboro, used on the confederate side in many important engagements, recaptured at the battle of Nashville, and used on the union side during the remainder of the war, were spiked amid very impressive ceremonies. The guns having been monumented the monument was decorated and the Illinois national guard paid the final military tribute by firing three volleys.

BURIED AT CHICAGO.

Secretary Gresham's Body Interred with Military Honors.

CHICAGO, June 1.—Chicago on Thursday interred the nation's dead. The funeral train bearing the body of Walter Q. Gresham from Washington arrived at the Woodlawn (or Sixty-third street) station shortly after 2 o'clock. When the train stopped in the depot the troops, which were drawn up in parade formation, presented arms, and the drums gave forth a long roll followed by a bugle salute. Eight sergeants took the body from the train and placed it in a hearse. The procession was then formed as follows:

Seventh cavalry U. S. A.
Battery light artillery.
Platoon of police.
Fifteenth infantry U. S. A.
Honorary pallbearers in carriages.
The officiating clergyman, Rev. Dr. McPherson.
Hearse and escort.
Family of deceased.
The president of the United States.
Members of the cabinet.
Justices of the supreme court.
Members of the senate and house of representatives.
Judges of federal courts and federal officials.
Military order of the Loyal Legion.
Chicago Bar association.
Grand Army of the Republic.
Union League club.
Representatives of the Illinois legislature.
Mayor and members of the city council.
County officials.
Citizens.

On arriving at the entrance to Oakwoods cemetery the funeral cortege was met by the cavalry detachment. The troopers presented sabers and the trumpeters sounded a salute. The line proceeded to the cemetery chapel. The services there were simple and brief, Dr. McPherson officiating. The body was deposited in a crypt in the chapel, there to remain until the family decides whether to have the final interment in Rosehill cemetery or at Corydon, the home of Mrs. Rumley, the mother of Gen. Gresham.

Killed by His Mistress.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 1. — A special to the Times-Union from Lake City, Fla., says: About 7 o'clock Friday evening Minnie Adams shot and instantly killed Will Douglass. Both are colored. The woman was Douglass' mistress, but they quarreled and he had determined to leave her. He went to her room Friday evening to get his trunk, when she shot him through the head. The murderess is in jail.

For Absolute Divorcement.

CLEVELAND, O., June 3.—After the reading of the set addresses on Friday morning's programme of the National Municipal League, a number of five-minute addresses were made by delegates from various parts of the country. The tenor of all the remarks was that before a very material progress could be made along the lines of municipal reform, there must be an absolute divorcement of national and state from municipal politics.

For Secretary of State.

CHICAGO, June 5.—The Inter Ocean's Washington correspondent says that President Cleveland has offered Richard Olney, now attorney general, the portfolio of the state department, and that Olney has accepted the appointment. Assistant Secretary Uhl, it is said, will be retained as at present. No one has been decided upon as successor to Mr. Olney as attorney general.

THE RECENT DECISION.

Debs Says It Is a Cruel Wrong—Altgeld Is Bitter.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., June 4.—Eugene V. Debs, president of the American Railway union, has addressed a circular letter to members of that organization in relation to the recent decision of the United States supreme court. The circular says:

"A cruel wrong against our great and beloved order, perpetrated by W. A. Woods, United States circuit judge, has been approved by the United States supreme court; but though prison walls frown upon myself and others whom you chose as officials of your order, I assure you that neither despondency nor despair has taken the place of the course which has characterized us and our order since the storms of persecution first began to beat upon us. We have not lost faith in the ultimate triumph of truth over perjury, of justice over wrong, however exalted may be the stations of those who perpetrate the outrages."

President Debs then reviews incidents leading up to and the results of the great railway strike, and says:

"In Russia the victim of autocratic displeasure is denied a trial by a jury of his peers. William A. Woods carries out the Russian practice. In Russia the doomed man or woman is arraigned before the supreme despot or one of his numerous satraps. Truth, justice, mercy, are forever exiled. Age, sex, character, innocence, name and condition count for nothing. It is enough to know that the brave soul yearned for freedom, and the penalty of exile, imprisonment, torture or death is inflicted, and it has come to this at last in the United States of America that the law of injunction is the will of a despot, and by the exercise of this Russian power American Railway union officials go to prison and the hope is that by the exercising of this power the American Railway union will be crushed. In this supreme juncture I call upon the members of the American Railway union to stand by their order. In God's own good time we will make the despots' prisons, where innocent men suffer, monumental."

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 4.—Gov. John P. Altgeld in an interview on the decision of the United States supreme court remanding Eugene V. Debs and his friends to jail, said:

"Remanding Debs to jail is in itself a matter of little importance, but the principle established is of transcendent importance. This decision marks a turning point in our history, for it establishes a new form of government among men, that is government by injunction. Under this procedure a federal judge sitting in a rear room can, on motion of some corporation attorney issue a ukase which he calls an injunction forbidding anything he chooses and which the law does not forbid. Where the law forbids a thing no injunction is necessary. In other words he can legislate for himself and having done so he can turn around and arrest and imprison as many people as he pleases; not for violating any law, but on the mere pretext that they disregarded his injunction; and, mark you, they are not tried by a jury according to the forms of law, but the same judge who issued the ukase and who claims his dignity was offended himself tries the case and whether anything is proven or nothing is proven, he can send men to prison at pleasure and there is no remedy."

WILL FAVOR BIMETALLISM.

Chairman Carter's Prediction on Republican Action.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Thomas H. Carter, chairman of the republican national committee, in a public statement, says:

"In 1896 the republican party will stand for protection and the restoration of bimetallism on a substantial and enduring basis. There may be differences of opinion in the party on the tariff schedules, but not upon the principle of protection. There will be differences of opinion as to the best course to pursue to secure the free and unlimited coinage of both gold and silver at a fixed ratio, but there will be no difference of opinion as to the desirability of bringing about that result.

"It is advisable to scrutinize with the greatest possible care the present tendency of the few republicans favorable to the gold standard who seek to commit the party to an unqualified support of the present administration in its warfare on silver. I have been not a little surprised to learn that certain Washington correspondents of republican newspapers were recently instructed to cordially support President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle and the Memphis convention in what the president is pleased to call his 'sound money campaign.' It does not require much discernment to disclose to an ordinary mind the fact that the president and his administration may gain much by directing public attention from the acts and policies of the administration. Of course, the administration desires to talk about sound money rather than its foreign policy or lack of policy; to talk about anything rather than the lamentable failure of the last congress to deal intelligently with the receipts and expenditures of the government. It is undoubtedly more agreeable to the administration to support the financial views of the fast-failing Rosebery ministry rather than the private sale of our government bonds at 15 per cent. less than the market value."

"Upon one question there will be neither difference of opinion as to the general principle involved, or as to the means to be employed. That is with reference to the restoration of a vigorous, thoroughly American foreign policy. I am persuaded that the republican national convention will pledge the party anew and with the greatest earnestness and force to this line of policy. The people demand it. They are conscious of their strength, and they realize that this republic can no longer be referred to as merely a nation. They know it has become and is a nation."

HILL CRITICISES SHERMAN.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 3.—Senator Hill on Friday was asked whether he had read Senator Sherman's speech on the money question. He replied:

"Yes. I have carefully perused Senator Sherman's Zanesville speech on silver. If an Ohio democrat had made the speech there would have been condemnation all along the republican ranks. The implication startled me that there are, in a prosperous state like Ohio, republican voters who wish to degrade our dollar standard, repudiate one-half our public debt and pay their debts in cheaper money than they promised to pay. I have not met such voters in New York. It is difficult for me to believe that a majority in any American state or in any American congress will vote to create a new dollar merely in order that thereby debtors may evade the payment of one-half or one-quarter or any percentage of what they owe and have promised. That would be worse and more indefensible than the creation in 1862 by Senator Sherman's party of the full legal-tender greenback dollar. Then the country was in the agony of civil war, but now there is profound peace. Repudiation of private contracts had not been attempted in our history until 1862. Whether our standard dollar was silver or gold, or both, it was from 1792 to 1862 an honest standard, an undegraded standard.

"If I could have my wish I would not have the treasury purchase another ounce of silver or coin another silver dollar under existing conditions till the possibility of international bimetallism on a ratio of 15½ has been fairly tested by the whole power of the United States exerted earnestly and in good faith by their congress, their president and cabinet, their secretary of state, their diplomatic and consular agents everywhere."

Twenty-Two Deaths.

PHILADELPHIA, June 4.—The tropical heat that has prevailed since Thursday has reaped a terrible harvest of death in this city. The prostrations from the heat number several scores, and on Friday there were two deaths, three Saturday, and the climax was reached Sunday, when seventeen persons died from heat prostration. The thermometer Sunday in the weather bureau office at its maximum at 2 o'clock registered 95 degrees.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—There were seventeen cases disposed of by the United States supreme court Monday, and then it adjourned for the term. It will assemble again for the term of 1895 on the second Monday of October.

USELESS HOARDING.

The Annoyance of Old Laid-By Articles of Clothing.

The temptation to hoard is not confined to that class of beings picturesquely described as misers; it assails women at every turn of their lives, and in certain directions finds easy victims among men. Who does not know the emotion with which during periods devoted to house-cleaning, when storerooms, attics and top shelves render up their hidden treasures, we discover garments laid aside, old boxes, parcels carefully tied in a prehistoric era, bundles of papers and pamphlets yellowed and dust-grimed, letters written by people who have passed out of our lives, the flotsam and jetsam of years, which belong to the category of articles too good to be destroyed, yet of no use to any one on earth? The familiar and well-worn proverb, "Keep a thing for seven years and you will find a use for it," is responsible for much of our stupid hoarding for the lumber and rubbish which cumber ourselves afford admirable lurking places for germs of disease and a nucleus for dirt and cobwebs, the plain fact being that we carry far too much luggage on the road of life, and would be much better off were we to travel lightly burdened.

The housekeeper who wishes peace of mind will do well each year to reduce her stock of garments held over for contingencies, which may never arise, to the lowest possible amount. The masculine mind rebels against the giving away of half-worn coats, hats, and trousers, and diplomacy is needed by the wife, who has grown weary in the struggle to preserve intact from the fretting moth that portion of her husband's wardrobe which he will never wear again. With children's clothes it is different, and where there is no further chance of refitting and remodelling—cutting down Louise's last summer's frock for Emily, and turning Gwendolen's brown spring jackets for Gladys—at once the mother should dispose of them. None of us has a right to hoard other people's property, and an altruistic spirit dictates that what has served its turn for us, and is still sufficiently presentable to be valued by a neighbor less fortunately endowed than ourselves, is no longer our own; the neighbor has a valid claim to call it hers.—Harper's Bazar.

Weak and Run Down

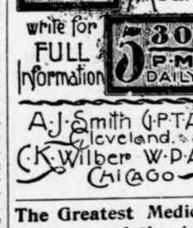
After the grip or other serious illness, you find Hood's Sarsaparilla exactly the medicine to build up and give strength.



"I feel thankful to Hood's Sarsaparilla for benefit derived from it. I had the grip and failed to regain health. I did not have any appetite and in fact, was a mere shadow of myself. I at last resorted to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and soon began to improve. I could soon eat without distress in my stomach. Four bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and a box of Hood's Pills took away all signs of the grip. I want to say to all who suffer in a like manner, take Hood's Sarsaparilla, for it will surely do you good." GEORGE MARLET, Green Oak, Michigan.

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, of ROXBURY, MASS., Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor.) He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

MILL BROOK.

All along the winding stream
Down from Mead's mill—
Back through boyhood's wayward dream
Fancy roams at will.

Up and down the stream to-day,
Through the shady glen,
Bare feet plashing all the way—
Just a boy again.

Onward runs the liquid song,
On through shadows cool,
Only pausing where they throng
Darkly o'er some pool.

Squirrels call the tree tops through,
Idle crows reply;
In the airy upper blue
Sails a gray hawk by.

Downward through the songful dell
Slides the stream away,
While beyond the sound of bell
Roving truants play.

Angling in the deeper stream
Where old tree trunks cross,
And the brook trout dart and gleam
Underneath the moss.

Wet and wading all in line,
Building castles grand,
For the waves to undermine
In the fringing sand.

Down between the sloping hill—
Dusky with its pines,
And the meadow's wooded frill
Slides the stream and winds.

On the limpid water runs—
Idle, wayward stream:
Through the cycle of the suns,
To the ocean's dream.

Green of summer turns to brown,
Dreams of boyhood flee;
While we drift on down and down,
Toward the silent sea.

DANIEL'S WIFE.

BY MRS. M. L. RAYNE.

AN'T say I believe in superstition myself."

"Nor me. Though I've seen the time when I wouldn't look over my left shoulder for fear of seein' the new moon."

"But you can't change the law of the universe to suit yourselves, an' I for one know that a dog howlin' is a sure sign of death."

"I broke a lookin' glass once and didn't have no luck for a year."

"Now, I don't b'lieve in any of them signs, but if I spill the salt I'm bound to get into a quarrel with a neighbor. Never knew it to fail."

"If a fork drops from your hands and sticks in the floor it's a sure sign that somebody's coming. And you can tell by the way it slants where he's coming from."

"Hush! Here's Daniel's wife comin' in from the kitchen. Don't let her hear you."

They were a company of plain country folk who had assembled at a neighbor's deathbed, that of a decrepit old man, Uncle Abner Field, who had just passed away. He was feeble and childish, but as a relative of their young neighbor, Daniel Field, he commanded some respect. For himself he was covetous, grasping and ill-tempered, and as no one cared to have him about he lived alone in a tumble-down house, when Daniel's wife—pretty Loretta Price, that was—took pity on him and invited him to make his home with them, Daniel agreeing to everything that she suggested.

"It's too dreadful to have the old man living and dying alone there when we have a room to spare and a bite and sup for him. He's your own flesh and blood, Daniel, and we must do as we would be done by," Loretta had said.

Of course the people who attend to everybody's business but their own said that Loretta expected to get something for her goodness, but she laughed at the suggestion that poor old Uncle Abner, who had always been the personification of poverty, had any money. She would have demanded it peremptorily if only to make him more comfortable, for her husband was poor, farming not being his vocation. Like herself, Daniel was educated, and longed to see the world, but she was more practical and did not disdain present opportunities. But she was working beyond her strength before she took Uncle Abner in.

And never once did he try to lighten her labors by any consideration on his part. As long as he was able to be about he spent much of his time in the old house which he owned, as well as the three acres of ground pertaining to it, and this he deeded to Daniel with much formality and many specifications. The whole property was worth a few hundred dollars, if ever a purchaser could be found.

"We'll tear down the house and plant an orchard on the land," Daniel had said, but his wife had no interest in it one way or another. More land was not one of her hobbies; less would have pleased her better.

Now Uncle Abner was dead, but in dying he had evolved a strange and portentous omen from the realms of superstition. He had lain for many hours in an unconscious state, with all the friends and neighbors of the family gathered about him, as the custom obtains in rural districts, and several times he had actually ceased to breathe—when in one of his returns from the border land, he opened his eyes and looked upon the faces of those about him, then said, in his shrill voice:

"Daniel's wife!"

Loretta stepped hastily to him, and took the cold hard hand in her soft warm palm, but with those words he ceased to breathe. There was no more coming back—Uncle Abner had gone the way of all flesh since Adam, and the only one to shed a tear for him was she whose name was last on his lips, in that form of address customary with him.

But the effect of his words on all gathered there, excepting Loretta herself, was most remarkable. They left the deathbed with precipitate haste, and grouped together in the other room began to talk in hushed tones over Uncle Abner's last words and to discuss their different forms of superstition which had proceeded so far as the spilling of salt, when Loretta herself appeared among them, and immediately became an object of the greatest interest.

"Don't take it to heart," suggested one.

"He just wanted to see you," remarked another.

"It doesn't always come true," said one neighbor in a tone that indicated exactly the opposite of what she expressed.

"What doesn't always come true?" asked Loretta, who did not catch the drift of their vague insinuations.

"Why, you know," stammered an old lady who was rather afraid of Daniel's wife, who was considered very clever, "when folks are a-dying, it is said that the last name on their lips will be the next one to go; it's said to be a sure sign,'cause the dying have dying knowledge; but I daresay he had forgot something he wanted to say to you, Loretty."

"If that's all, you needn't worry about me," said Loretta, quickly. "I shan't die till my time comes, and that won't be set by Uncle Abner, I'm very sure."

"N—o," said another of the company, "but the dying are often gifted with fore-knowledge. There was my husband's sister's second son; he died out in Californy just the same time to a minute that his mother died here, and he said her name with his last breath—he knew."

"Yes—maybe," said Loretta, "but we'll eat a warm supper now, and you'll all feel better, and"—with decision—"we won't talk about Uncle Abner's last words any more."

This only added fuel to the suppressed flame, but at least the friends were polite enough not to talk about the matter before Loretta. They carried it to their homes, and discussed it there, and talked of it at the general store on Saturday nights, and it was not long before Daniel's wife was looked upon as a doomed woman.

Did she know it? Yes, Daniel himself told her of the reports, and they laughed over them together. Loretta declared three was not a grain of superstition in her nature, and she would not die any sooner for being "called."

When we say we have no superstitions we deceive ourselves. It may not be in your way—or ours—or yours

HER HUSBAND WAVED A PAPER.

—but in my own way, I am full of superstition. You laugh at the potency of the new moon seen over your left shoulder, but you will stand an hour on the walk rather than cross between the carriages of a funeral procession. I smile at your superstition, but if I met a black cat on the threshold of a journey I would postpone the journey.

Daniel's wife was not superstitious, but from the hour of old Abner's death she began to pine and fail in flesh and spirit. She knew it was foolish, but she heard that rasping voice calling her everywhere, and at all hours: "Daniel's wife!" "Daniel's wife!" and in the night she would rise hurriedly from troubled slumbers and go over the house as if in obedience to the "call," and return pale and trembling, the cold perspiration bathing face and hands, while Daniel slept on undisturbed by her waking idiosyncracies.

But he, too, saw that his wife was affected by the strange happening, and to divert her mind and give her something else to think of, he suggested tearing down the old house, and planting the new orchard.

She assented indifferently. Farming was not to her taste, but she loved her husband and tried with wifely interest to take part in all his schemes. So a couple of neighbors were invited to assist, as the custom is in farming communities, and the old-fashioned window casements and the doors were removed, and soon a sound of ripping and tearing saluted Loretta's ears. It brought back the presence of the old man, and his last cry; she could hear it as distinctly as if he were in the next room. Often in the night when she heard it in dreams she awakened with a glad feeling that she was still alive, a breathing, hoping, loving woman, not a clod out in yonder place where he lay. She loved life even under its present disappointments, for always while there is life there is hope.

"Daniel's wife!" That was no ghostly voice, but a real living cry from warm lips. Other voices took it up, and Loretta hearing the call ran out into the sweet May air and saw her husband waving a paper he had and men running toward her with curious little parcels in their hands, and one and all they shouted: "Daniel's wife."

What could it mean? Daniels had to explain it half a dozen times before she could "sense" it. The poverty-stricken old man, Uncle Abner, had died enormously rich, and the old house was his bank. It was filled between the walls with a lining of gold and silver, and deeds of vast possessions that no one had ever heard of, and there, too, was a will written on a letterback to save paper, but duly signed and attested, and it left everything, silver, gold and lands, to Daniel's wife.

If the bad news of his "call" had flown fast, the good news of his wealth flew faster. More people knew Loretta than Loretta knew. The golden lever moved off the incubus of superstition with material haste. There is nothing supernatural about gold or silver or bank bills.

And Uncle Abner's "call" proved the open sesame to all the joys of the world for Daniel's wife.—Detroit Free Press.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Money Lost.

Until one week ago Peter Skolman was the owner of a very fine farm in Wright county about six miles from Le Carle. He had grown old on the farm and the life was distasteful to him, and he sold out his farm to a man named Bergholt, who resides at Le Carle, for $1,500 spot cash. The deal was consummated late in the afternoon and at an hour when it was impossible for Skolman to reach town and deposit the money in a bank. He was afraid to keep it in the house over night, and consequently secured a pretty tin box, put the money in it and burried the box among the roots of a tree about a quarter of a mile from the house, intending to go get the $1,500 money in the morning and take it to the bank.

Skolman was very careful that no one should see him bury the money; at least, he thought he was careful, and retired to bed in a contented frame of mind, feeling that his money was secure. Bright and early the next morning Peter arose, dressed and before breakfast went out to the tree and dug down for the box. To his horror no box was to be found, and the $1,500 clear cash was gone and represented to Peter the loss of his farm, stock and home as well.

Arrest the Dog.

Strange things occur at police headquarters, but one of the strangest incidents occurred in Minneapolis, when a colored man walked in and wanted a warrant for the arrest of a dog. It seems that the colored individual, who is a coachman and boards at the Pullman house, came home late at night, and stumbled over the watchdog. He was perfectly sober, and claims that he did not see the dog. The dog saw him, however, and took a slice out of his leg. He thought he was murdered, for a time, but finally collected his senses and made a bee line for the police station, and actually asked to have the dog arrested.

He Gambled.

George L. Stroupe, a former merchant of Virginia, has sworn out two complaints against the owners of saloons in Virginia. He claims to have lost large sums of money gambling, and as the man who ran the games did not have any property that he could attach he has sworn out complaints against the owners of the saloons in which the gambling took place. The saloon people who are brought into the suits are: John O'Connor, P. McNaughton, Charles Johnson and James Lockey. Stroupe claims to have lost $750 in one place and $85 in the others.

Youthful Highwaymen.

George O'Day and Eddie Bushaw, two mere boys, the latter one the son of an attorney, were arrested at Minneapolis by Sergt. Henry Getchell and Mounted Officer Fay, on a charge of highway robbery. It is alleged that the two boys "held up" two other boys named George Brennan and Oscar Peterson, and robbed them of 60 cents in money and two jackknives.

Killed.

While driving along Superior street Duluth, soon after the parade. Decoration Day. Wm. J. Dunoon, a well known groceryman, met his death in a peculiar manner. He was riding a sulky and the horse became frightened and ran the distance of a block, and threw Dunoon against a telegraph pole. He was so severely injured that he died in 30 minutes.

Henry Baumgertner, of Waltham, aged 70, while unloading grubs from a wagon, fell off, striking on a loose grub head foremost, breaking his neck. He died instantly.

Some three years since George Gunderson, a druggist of Duluth, died and was taken to Kenyon for burial. A few days ago his mother decided to have the remains reinterred in the town cemetery, the burial having occurred in the churchyard. The workmen were astonished at the weight of the corpse, and when the lid was removed the remains were found practically petrified and almost lifelike in appearance. It required the efforts of six strong men to lift the casket to the dray.

VENTILATION OF SEWERS.

How to Prevent Contamination of the House Air.

The modern sanitarians agree that there is little dependence to be placed on the orinary sewer trap as a means of keeping sewer gas out of the house. The chief means of surety lie in thorough ventilation. The ordinary house sewer should measure four inches and no more, because a larger pipe is not so easily or thoroughly flushed out in every part as a smaller pipe. The pipe should be ventilated just outside the house or at its lower end, and the pipe should be extended its full length to at least eight or nine inches above the peak of the roof, and capped by a regular ventilating plow. By this means air will be continually pumped through the pipe. There are a multitude of patent devices that save plumbers work, and are supposed to take the place of this simple method of ventilation, but all are makeshifts. Do not let the plumber persuade you that it is not necessary to extend the pipe its full size, but that a two-inch pipe will do for ventilation. It costs but little more to extend the pipe to the roof in full four-inch size. Now, that nearly every village has a system of sewerage and a water supply, it is especially necessary that all persons understand that safety from sewer gas is not in shutting it out by water trap, but in purifying it by the introduction of a current of pure air. Main sewers should be as thoroughly ventilated as house sewers, as the simplest precaution against the dangerous accumulation of gas. Yet this is too often neglected.—N. Y. Tribune.

A LIVING SHADOW.

Remarkable Transformation of a North Carolina Man.

Strange, But True, Story from the Lumber Regions of a Southern State—Verified by Personal Investigation.

(From the Greenville, N. C., Reflector.)

The following interview has just been given our reporter by Mr. G. A. Baker, the overseer at the farm of Col. Isaac A. Sugg, of Greenville, N. C. It will interest anyone who has ever had Typhoid fever. Mr. Baker said in part:

"I was living in Beaufort county, and on the 2d day of October, 1893, I was stricken down with typhoid fever. I had the best of physicians to attend me and on the 15th day of January, 1894, I was allowed to get up. I was emaciated, weak and had no appetite. I could only drag along for a short distance and would be compelled to sit down and rest. This continued for some time and I began to give up hope of ever getting well. I lost my position in Beaufort county and having secured one in Pitt county, clerking in a store, I undertook it, but was so weak I could not do the work, and had to give it up. The disease settled in my knees, legs and feet. I was taking first one kind of medicine and then another, but nothing did me any good. I was mighty low spirited. I moved out to Col. Sugg's about four or five months ago and commenced taking Dr. Williams' Pills. I took three a day for about three months. I began to regain my appetite in a week's time, and then my weakness began to disappear, and hope sprung up with a blessedness that is beyond all telling. At the expiration of the three months I was entirely cured and could take my axe and go in the woods and do as good a day's work as any man. I was troubled with dyspepsia and that has disappeared. It is also a splendid tonic for weak people. I say, Mr. Editor, God bless Dr. Williams. May he live for a long time. I know he will go up yonder to reap his reward, for he has done a wonderful lot of good. Tell everybody that asks you about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People that if they will come to me I can certainly satisfy them as to their merits. I always carry a box of pills with me and whenever I feel bad I take one."

We were forcibly struck with the earnestness of Mr. Baker and his statement may be relied on.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female, and all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

For the Woman Traveler.

The best advice to give the woman who is traveling is that she must not be in a hurry. Hurrying will tire her out before she starts, will make her face red, and upset her nerves. Let her arrange as to time, know exactly how much she has, and study the art of reaching her train punctually, which does not mean an hour too soon or three minutes too late, but just ahead of the hour set. It is her duty to look well, but not to be overdressed. It is her duty to have with her the belongings she may require, but she should not have so many unnecessary things in the way of bundles and bags that the public feel that she is an unpleasant care upon them. It is her duty to preserve her temper, to look for all agreeable things, to ignore the disagreeable ones, and then, indeed, will she find pleasure as she goes abroad "strange countries for to see."—Chicago Tribune.

The Old Trouble.

"It seems that this coffee is very unsettled, Mrs. Gammidge," said the growling boarder. "A little care would fix that. It's a simple proposition in cookery. An egg placed in the coffee will settle it."

"Norah," said Mrs. Gammidge, "wrap an egg up in this gentleman's bill for last month, and see if it will settle that."—Harper's Bazar.

A Tender Wife.

"Husband very ill; may die at any moment."

Whereupon she answers, not to him, but to her dying husband:

"If you die, see that you are buried by the Odd Fellows."—Humors of the Scot (Inglis).

FIGHTING DISEASE GERMS.

Cleanliness, Pure Air and Pure Water Are Absolutely Essential.

It is of the greatest importance for every housewife to understand the working of the various disease germs, and be able to combat them intelligently. It is often the case that our best friends become our worst enemies. Thus it is with water and air. Both are capable of doing much good and also, under favorable conditions, of doing great evil. Both are necessary to life and both have the power of taking life. They are the great sanitary agents. On the one hand they have the power to prevent disease; on the other, they are the two great vehicles for transmission of disease germs. The germs of typhoid fever, cholera, dysentery, and many other diseases, are conveyed by drinking water more frequently than by any other agency. Knowing the power of water to hold and convey disease germs, it becomes a duty to use only pure water. Water contaminated by surface drainage must be avoided, as also that which has stood over night in a close room. Although disease germs will stand a great deal of cold and not be destroyed, they are not able to stand heat above a certain degree. Taking advantage of this fact, we can render drinking water perfectly pure and safe by thoroughly boiling and filtering it. It might be interesting to give directions for making an analysis of water and the various methods of detecting its impurities, but space forbids. The most effectual way of purifying the air is by thorough ventilation. Every house should be provided with a good system of ventilation. One of the simplest and best appliances is the fireplace. The great objection to windows as ventilators is the danger of producing draughts. This is a very important item in sick-rooms, as a draught of air may produce serious consequences. This may be obviated by fitting a board under the lower sash, so as to raise the window four or five inches. This will leave an air space between the upper part of the lower and the lower part of the upper sash sufficient for good ventilation. In the various elaborate systems of ventilation now in use, the great caution to be observed is to be sure that the air supply is absolutely pure.

In addition to what has been said regarding cleanliness, there may be mentioned certain chemical agents that aid greatly in preventing disease. These are disinfectants and antiseptics. Many make the mistake of confounding these substances with deodorants, and the distinction is not always made clear, even by the medical profession. Prof. Gilman reports the case of a physician of "considerable reputation" who had attended a case of contagious disease, which terminated in the death of the patient. He reported that he had "personally superintended the disinfection of the house," and that the work had "been done thoroughly." The board of health made inquiry into his method, and disclosed the wonderful work of "sprinkling coffee-grounds on a pan of coals and disseminating its pleasant aroma throughout the premises." It is needless to say that the board took the matter into its own hands and gave the task of regenerating the premises to a competent individual. An antiseptic is a substance which prevents decay in material that is liable to undergo decomposition. Sugar, salt, vinegar, alcohol, smoke, heat and cold are familiar domestic examples, while in surgery we find carbolic acid, corrosive sublimate, boracic acid, and various other substances in common use. A disinfectant is a substance that destroys germs after they have been formed, and renders inert that which produces decomposition or disease. All disinfectants are antiseptics, and all antiseptics, if sufficiently concentrated or used in large quantities, are disinfectants. I will briefly mention a few of the most important disinfectants now in use and the method of using them.

Copperas is a good and cheap disinfectant for many purposes; it is easy to obtain and readily dissolves in warm or cold water. It should be used in the proportion of two pounds to the pailful of water. Chloride of zinc is superior to copperas as a disinfectant, but it is more expensive and therefore not so available where large quantities are required. The proportion is half a pound to the gallon. This is a very effective solution to use in kitchen sinks, house drains, etc., also in vessels used about the sick-room. Corrosive sublimate in a solution consisting of one part of the salt to a thousand parts of water is one of the most effective disinfectants known. It can be used for any purpose when a disinfectant is needed, but being a dangerous poison it should be handled with care. Quicklime and chloride of lime are valuable to scatter around wet places, under buildings, in stables, etc. The offensive odor of the latter, however, is their chief disadvantage. A solution of sulphate of zinc, one pound; carbolic acid, two ounces; and water, four gallons, answers every purpose for washing soiled clothes taken from a sick-room; after washing the bed linen and other clothes in this a thorough boiling will destroy all disease germs.

By fumigation we are able to reach every nook and corner where disease germs may lurk. Many substances may be used, but chief among them is sulphur. Have all the windows, fireplaces, flues, keyholes, doors and other openings securely closed by strips of paper pasted over them. Then in a washtub containing an inch or two of water place a pan of live coals, supported upon brick. Upon these throw two or three pounds of sulphur. Previous care should be taken to remove all living things and any paintings or delicate ornaments which may be injured by the sulphur fumes (these, however, should never be allowed in a sick-room to collect the dust and disease germs), then place the bedding, curtains, etc., in such a position as to secure a thorough exposure to the fumes. After twenty-four hours the rooms may be opened.—Philadelphia Press.

Drying the Umbrella.

During the frequent use of umbrellas in the spring showers, we should keep in mind the oft-repeated caution concerning care in drying them. They will last much longer if they are always placed when wet with the handle downward to dry. The moisture then falls from the edge of the frame and the fabric dries uniformly. When it stands handle upwards, which is commonly the case, the top of the umbrella holds the moisture, and not only takes a long time to dry, but it soon injures the silk or other fabrics used for the cover, and rusts the steels. This is the cause of this part of the umbrella wearing out before any other part. Umbrella cases are also responsible for the rapid wear of the silk. The constant friction causes the tiny holes that appear so provoking early. When not in use leave the umbrella loose.—Philadelphia Press.

Change of Time on the "Big Four Route"—New Train to Cincinnati and Washington, D. C.

Sunday, May 26th, the "Big Four Route," in addition to their regular service, put on a new train between Chicago and Washington, D. C., leaving Chicago daily at 12:05 o'clock noon, arriving at Indianapolis 6:10 P. M., Cincinnati 9:05 P. M., connecting direct with the Washington Express on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway, arriving Washington 3:45 P. M. next day. This is an elegant electric-lighted vestibuled train with parlor, sleeping and dining car service. Take this train for Washington and the cool summer resorts of the Alleghany and Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia and the Seashore.

PROSPECTIVE MOTHERS

and those soon to become mothers, should know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription robs childbirth of its tortures and terrors, as well as of its dangers to both mother and child, by aiding nature in preparing the system for parturition. Thereby "labor" and the period of confinement are greatly shortened. It also promotes the secretion of an abundance of nourishment for the child.

Mrs. Dora A. Guthrie, of Oakley, Overton Co., Tenn., writes: "When I began taking Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, I was not able to stand on my feet without suffering almost death. Now I do all my housework, washing, cooking, sewing and everything for my family of eight. I am stouter now than I have been in six years. Your 'Favorite Prescription' is the best to take before confinement, or at least it proved so with me. I never suffered so little with any of my children as I did with my last."

DELANO DIARY

—Tomorrow will be Delano Fair Day. It is expected a big crowd will be in town.

—On Monday one of the heaviest rains of the season visited the place. Farmers, gardeners, and others interested in out door pursuits, begin to think we are to have abundance of water this season.

—The Y. P. S. C. E. will hold an ice-cream sociable in the City Hall Monday evening, June 10. A program consisting of a farce, a classic scarf-drill and music has been prepared. An admission fee of 10 cts will be charged, which also entitles you to a dish of ice cream. Everyone is cordially invited.

—The High School scholars held a picnic Tuesday, on the shores of Lake Sarah. The day was cold and rainy but that did not deter 26 of them from the trip. They demonstrated that they were not superstitious by going 13 in a load, two loads. They claim to have had a nice time, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather.

—It seems to be the intention of our citizens to celebrate the 4th of July in good style this year. Committees have already been appointed to further the project and commencing, as they have, early, it is hoped to give those who attend the celebration at Delano, a day of enjoyment. Good speakers, fine music and games of various kinds are to aid in making the occasion one of pleasure.

—During the heavy rain Monday the torrent that poured down River Street and broke through the narrow crust of earth left by the unskillful engineering of the street committee, and burst-ed in the cellar window to Mrs. Berneck's store, flooding the cellar several feet deep. Joe Berneck and several others assisted in removing some goods, but the damage is considerable, for her, and should be promptly payed by the negligent committee. There is a proper way to do things and it is not to drain the village into people's cellars.

—There seems to be a feeling abroad that the last year's village council pledged $150 of the village funds to erect a creamery here. On consulting one of that honorable body we were informed that nothing of the kind was ever done. No such pledge was made by that council, and of course, the present council are at liberty to guard the village funds as they should. To use them for the expenses of the village, the purpose for which the funds are placed in their hands, and, doubtlessly they will look after the village interests. Thats what they are for.

Rev. Dr. Bridgman, President of Hamline University preached the Baccalaureate sermon for the graduating class of that institution last Sunday. It was a fine sermon, full of words of instruction to those now about to enter life as business men and women, as leaders from reason of their ability, in the society where they move. The whole programme of the occasion was well rendered. The singing by Miss Benham, of Redwing, was something far above average. The influence of Hamline University on its students seems to be for the elevation of their characters as well as the instruction of their minds, and everything seemed to tend to do both, and to have met with success, as attested by the appearance of the fine class of twenty three young men and women in the graduating class who now return to their homes in different parts of the state to take with them the lessons learned at old Hamline and which will guide them through life.

—Rev. Withington will preach in the Presbyterian church next Sunday at 10:30 a. m.

—The wind recently laid low the high board fence back of the St. Peters school.

—August Berneck is home again from Buffalo. His trial has been postponed till week after next.

—Mr. Drew of Minneapolis, got around before fair day, and shipped a lot of calves this morning for Minneapolis.

—The Junior class and others gave the graduating class a reception at the City Hall, on Wednesday evening, a good time is reported.

—The crossing from the GAZETTE office to the town pump has again been put in order. But the old pump has not yet been put into running order.

—We are in receipt of a copy of the corrected edition of The Latest Negro Absurdity, The Fancy Colored Ball. Thanks to W. J. Dyer & Bro. St. Paul.

—Let everybody turn out to the C E. sociable at the City Hall next Monday evening. They have arranged a nice program and a good time is assured.

—The Eagle worried some a week or so ago about children being obliged to attend school during the hot month of June. It don't seem so hot now it is here.

—Auditor Dunn has some posters out warning people against setting prairie or forest fires. Be careful or you will have a penalty to pay for your carelessness.

—The recent rains have supplied sufficient moisture for lawns, gardens and streets, so that the village water has not been drained out for these purposes for some time.

—The case of J. T. Hanna vs The Provident Accident Insurance company, was tried at Buffalo yesterday. The company did not appear and Mr. Hanna was given a verdict for amount claimed, $425. and interest.

—Hieberson & Anderson, of Watertown, received this week a large traction engine, via Delano. It had been to the shops in the cities for repairs. Why don't Delano have a foundry of her own? It would save lots of freight bills to machinery men.

—Landlord Young will retire from the hotel for a season, and become a Granger, living on his farm adjoining town. The hotel will be run by Mr. Meister, of Grove City, formerly of Minneapolis; He expects to remodel and rearrange things generally.

—The Grand Jury found an indictment against August Berneck for manslaughter in the first degree. Charley Murphy was released from custody, the evidence not being sufficient to hold him. August's case will probably be tried week after next.

—Mrs. L. M. Maxfield, wife of the Secretary of the Board of Education, one of the fortunate few to receive an invitation to the Reception given by the Juniors to the Seniors, last Wednesday evening, called this morning and requested us to say that the reception was a little the nicest thing of the kind she had ever attended in Delano.

—The neglect of the Juniors to invite the Delano Teacher's Examining Board to their reception is not to be wondered at. If they expect recognition on such occasions they should hold Teacher's Examinations and impress their importance upon the community in a way to be remembered. Served 'em right, Juniors, even if it was an accident.

—It seems as if it might be rather a difficult matter for all of Delano's saloonkeepers to find acceptable bonds men for the next year. Several of our citizens have recently had to pay for a little experience in the bond business and during these hard times at least propose to be very careful, besides their credit is not improved in business circles by being on bonds for anybody.

—An entertainment will be given at the City Hall, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, June 18 and 19 by the pupils of St. Peter's school. An interesting porgramme for each evening has been arranged. "Sunflower chorus or Grandmothers Garden." Drama--"Germaine Cousin," Farce--"Ripples," Drama--"Precious Pickles," Pantomimes songs and recitations, will be given. A good entertainment is looked for, and a big crowd expected.

—Dlano's first Baccalaurate sermon delivered at the City Hall on Sunday evening by Rev. Tabor Davies was a grand success. One of the finest audiences ever brought together in the village filled the hall, and listened attentively to the words of wisdom and instruction, as they fell from the lips of the eloquent preacher. The singing by the double quartette was splendid. Rev. J. W. Powell offered the opening prayer. The graduating class is to be congratulated on their success in life so far as that entertainment is concerned. We give the address in another place.

County Cullings.

Waverly is building a new Presbyterian Church. Buffalo a new I. O. O. F's Hall. Surely the county is building up in spite of hard times.

Clerk of Court O'Leary smilingly waits on all comers for marriage license just the same as if Court warn't in session, while "Billy" runs the Court records.

Hotels were crowded, and fishing tackle and bait in great demand at Buffalo, this week. While court is in session the County Seat is quite a lively village.

From this morning's Globe we learn that John Johnson who pleaded guilty of burglary, at Buffalo, was sentenced to Stillwater for five years and six months.

Court convened at the County Seat, Monday morning June 5. Judge Pond presiding. Sheriff Carpenter went through the usual ceremonies, "Hear yeas! Hear yeas! Hear yeas! The district court for the County of Wright and the 4th Judicial District is now open." Clerk of Court, O'Leary and Deputy Billy Cochrane were on Hand with the record of cases.

The Waverly Tribune threatened to give us Bret Harte's "classic" "parody" on Maud Muller but gave portions of it only, from which we judge it is of a class not fitted for newspapers generally. Besides they seem to have forgotten the lines they gave in the first place as a quotation. The Tribune laid the quoting to a gentleman who we suspect Holmberg, S. O. Helmer, Henry Lammers.

Among lawyers in attendance at the term of Court at Buffalo on Monday we noticed. F. H. Lindsley and M. A. O'Hair, of Delano; David Cochran and Mr. Casey, of Waverly; F. H. Latham and J. J. Woolley of Howard Lake; A. Y. Eaton, Carl Pidgeon, W. H. Cutting, W. E. Culkin and J. T. Alley, of Buffalo; J. E. Madigan, of Maple Lake; A. G. Sexton, of Annandale; J. C. Tarbox, of Monticello, and a couple of strangers, from Minneapolis. Quite an array of legal talent.

Judge Pond, in his charge to the Grand Jury at Buffalo, on Monday, set forth some sound arguments in favor of the American Jury system, which do not coincide with the talk of some of our local legal lights who have expressed themselves as favoring the abolition of the Grand Jury. He said that evil doers didn't like the system of secret investigation of wrongs by a large body of men, together, like the Grand Jury. But he thought it a great help in ferreting out crime. One man gets laughed at when he, alone tries to work out a reform, but an organization is respected.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied to the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the fairer sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and it will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of a whole family.

THE MAN BEHIND THE PLOW.

BY OUR OWN POET.

I am not so much at singing as those high falutin chaps,
My voice it may be husky and a little loud perhaps,
For I have been a plowing with a lazy team, you see,
That's kept me busy with my "get up, whoa, haw, gee,"
But if you'll pay attention to what I have to say,
About a great mistake you make and do it every day.
In doling out your praises, and I wan't to tell you now,
Too often you forget the man who walks behind the plow.

CHORUS:
Talk about your learned men, your wit and wisdom rare,
Your poets and your painters they get praises everywhere,
They are well enough to make a show, but will you tell me how
The world would ever do without the man behind the plow.

'Tis very nice to go to school to learn to read and write,
'Tis nicer to dress up fine and sport around at night,
Your, music, painting, poetry may all be hard to beat,
But tell me what you're going to do for something good to eat?

You say my boots are muddy, my clothing is too coarse,
I make a good companion for the oxen or the horse:
My face is red, my hand is hard, too true I will allow,
But don,t be too quick to spurn the man behind the plow.

I like your great inventions, am glad you're getting smart,
I like to hear your music for it kind o'stirs my heart;
But 'twill never touch the stomach of a hungry man,
And so I call attention to the kind of things that can.

Then, boys, don't be too ready to leave the good old farm,
Father's getting feeble now he'll need a youthful arm;
If honest in your purpose at your feet all must bow,

—Farm Journal.

THE St. Peter Herald says: "Silver and gold will and must serve as money and the extremists of either metal will make nothing by attempting the complete annihilation of the other." That's where Brother Johnson is sound.

A FEW short years ago a man or a woman with a diploma from a college, a degree of any kind was, in this part of the country a curiosity. Year by year graduating papers have become more familiar to our people. First doctors, lawyers, ministers, teachers and professional men generally, came into our midst bearing with them the tokens of honor from the various schools and colleges through the land. Our own state made ample provision for good schools, and founded the State University, whose fame is already abroad in the land. Our system of High Schools has, as it by magic, sprung up; even in our own village. And to-day many young men and young women stand on the threshold of a busy life armed with a diploma from our Universities, colleges, or High Schools. They are equipped with the knowledge that they need not fear to attempt any field they may choose in the busy world; they have mastered the rudiments of an education; they have in their hands the evidence that they have applied themselves successfuly to the requirements of a graduate. They have selfassurance that many would lack, but for the fact that they can renew it for themselves by referring to their papers; and can call to mind the many happy hours spent in obtaining an education; as well as the toil and trouble they have been to to fit themselves for life. It remains for them to grasp the opportunity, whenever it presents itself. It may not be to their liking at first, but when they are doing good in the world they will take heart and progress rapidly in their life's work. Don't wait for opportunities to come to you, you may have too long to wait. Prepare yourself to meet opportunities when they do come within your reach, and then don't fail to grasp them. Do well what you do at all, and never be idle and you will succeed.

Graduating Exercises.

The Delano High School Graduating exercises were held at the City Hall Friday evening last. A large audience, containing many from abroad, was in attendance. The hall was tastily arranged for the occasion. Potted and cut flowers were in profusion.

The graduating class; speakers of the evening; teachers, and Messrs. Borsch, Vorse, Erickson and Frazee, of the Board of Education, had seats on the platform. The music by Prof. Flannigan and Miss Flannigan, of Waverly, was splendid; singing by the High School Chorus, excellent. Rev. Tabor Davies offered prayer.

The oration "Woman in Literature," by Miss Grace O'Hair, was well received, showed broad research, was well arranged and delivered in an earnest manner. At the close, applause and a shower of flowers were in order. Miss Frances Bauman followed with an oration, "The Influence of Art," which was well prepared, ably handled and delivered with a clear voice. Applause and flowers followed this oration also.

Miss Maria Sanford, Professor in the State University, made the speech of the evening. It was full of good wholesome advice and words of encouragement to the young and to the old, in behalf of education. She referred to the time, forty years ago, this June, when she, like the young ladies now graduating, received her diploma. The subject of her oration was "What of the Future?" and in looking over it now she is proud to see that it contained some good thoughts. The audience was fairly carried away with Professor Sanford's speech and cheered loudly, several times, and at the close. She too received flowers.

Professor Leavens in a few brief words presented the graduating class to the Board of Education for their diplomas. He stated that they had been faithful and especially earnest in their studies and that it had been a pleasure for their teachers to labor with them in the pursuit of knowledge.

President Borsch, facing the graduating class, in a brief but earnest speech, hoped the future of the graduates, and the school, would be successful; and that Delano High School should progress until it is second to none in the state. He then presented to Miss Frances Bauman and Miss Grace O'Hair each a diploma, a reminder that they had completed the course of the Delano High School. And the audience shouted, and applauded, showing their approval.

Rev. Tabor Davies was equal to the emergency and called for cheers for the Teachers, School Board, Prof. Sanford, and the Graduating Class, meeting with hearty response in each instance.

The evening was pleasantly and profitably spent by the large audience. And many were the hopes expressed that Delano might see numerous returns of such enjoyable occasions.

Independence Celebration.

It is Philadelphia, of all cities in the Union, Philadelphia, where the Declaration of Independence was signed, whose finance committee has voted not to make an appropriation for a Fourth of July celebration this year.—Pioneer Press.

Philadelphia has set an example worthy the emulation of every city and town in the Union. Why should public monies, collected by taxes upon the people for the purpose of administering the government of a city be voted away for the purpose of celebrating holidays? Haven't American people, and those imbued with a spirit of independence enough to bring them to our shores to make new homes, sufficient patriotism to turn out and aid in celebrating our national holidays without having their expenses paid from the public treasury? Washington, the chief figure in the struggle for liberty, would take no pay for his years of toil and hardship, in the cause of liberty. Why should those living in peaceful homes, made possible by his efforts, sit by and see the funds of the city given away to defray the expenses of celebrating for one day in a year? Is that the kind of patriotism they would inculcate into the minds of the rising young Americans? Would they teach the youth of our land that the gouernment should celebrate its own birthday? That a lot of officials in the pay of the city or United States government should parade the streets while the people from a respectable distance observed the proceedings? What kind of a Fourth of July would that be? Would it not be beneath the dignity of our citizens? Let every individual contribute his mite toward doing justice to the remembrance of the deaths of our forefathers. Let him freely give, as he feels able, to pay for necessary expenses. Let him feel that he is an independent citizen of a free country. Compel no one to contribute to the celebration of our national birthday by taking money from public funds raised by taxation. If a man is unpatriotic enough to remain at home and wait till the city or the country hires him to come out, at so much per day, to keep alive the sparks of patriotism, let him remain at home. Paying from public funds for Fourth of July celebrations is the best way to annihilate every spark of patriotic feeling from the hearts of our countrymen. When the Philadelphia Finance committee voted to make no appropriation, they did the right thing; and their action deserves credit rather than censure.

COMMENCEMENT ORATION.

Delano High School.

MISS GRACE O'HAIR.

Woman in Literature.

Is there anything which has influenced more lives, touched more hearts, oftener quickened syampathies and aroused feelings lying dormant in the human heart than the thoughts of great minds expressed in permanent form. There is no way of appealing to their higher nature so effective as through the writings of those men whose lives are spent in penetrating the deep things of humanity. There have been men who have set the world on fire by the brilliancy of their genius. It has been startled by their wonderful intellects. What they have done for humanity cannot well be estimated, and if man has been great why may not woman also be great; What she has done up to the present time in literature is not to be lightly esteemed. True she has not yet equalled some of the greatest masculine writers, as Shakespeare or Milton but that is only because she has not had equal advantages with man.

It is only of late years that she has been able to obtain a broad and liberal education, since she has had these opportunities for culture and training she has advanced rapidly in many directions and especially in the field of literature. If we look back over the past we shall find a few women who, superior to their advantages and opportunities, have made for themselves an enduring name in the world of letters. Sappho, the Grecian poetess, took her place among the first of the writers of her day, and that too in an age when women were looked upon as the slaves of the household.

Of brilliant intellects among women we have many examples especially in modern times. Foremost in the ranks of these, stands Elizabeth Barret Browning. Her poems are truly the conceptions of a wonderful mind. George Elliot's works are the productions of a mind far from inferior to some of our greatest male writers, she shows in her works an extraordinary power, her strength in writing has surprised many and has won the praise and admiration of great men and her portrayal of character is something remarkable. For strength, fire, and vivid imagination, no better example can be found than Charlotte Bronte.

Although a strong intellect is required to make a successful writer there is something more than that necessary, it is a deep and far reaching sympathy for ones fellows. To understand this we have only to look at the mission of literature. This is:—To bring out what is highest and best in man, to lift his mind from the common level of thought, to give it a broader scope; to create within him a desire to be something besides a mere machine; to teach him to live instead of merely existing and to use the powers given him as his maker meant them to be used. True success is impossible unless the writer knows human nature and is in entire sympathy with its needs and aspirations, its thoughts and feelings. We must feel the thrill of joy, the weight of sorrow, the wild swell of exultation, the throb of pain or the glow of anger.

Woman is shrewd by nature and discerns by intuition what man can not discover by all his power of reasoning. Then should not she who is constantly in the home where she has an opportunity of seeing the inner lives of those around her, be the one who reads human nature correctly. As a result of this discipline she will be able to feel with the characters of their imagination. The most beautiful sentiments that exist are those concerning home life and love. Who has given us a more perfect picture of this than that dear woman Louisa M. Alcott in her book entitled "Little Women." The thoughts are so pure, so sweet, and so elevating that one can not help being better after reading it, and who could have written it but a woman?

To my mind Louisa Alcott stands forth as one of the brightest lights in American Literature. Frances Hodgson Burnett who attained for herself a world wide fame by writing "Little Lord Fauntleroy" received her inspiration from watching closely the development of her little son.

Woman seems to be the natural champion of the weak and oppressed, and when we think of her in this light our minds very naturally revert to Harriet Beecher Stowe, who was one of the greatest women the world has ever known. Her whole nature rose in revolt against depriving any human being of his liberty, and what was more instrumental in bringing about the war and a consequent freeing of the black man than her "Uncle Tom's Cabin." It is said by some not to be a true picture of slavery, but be that as it may it shows what a woman can do by her pen. Truly it may be said of her in the words of Stedman "He alone moves hearts who himself has been moved." Helen Hunt Jackson living in the West where she could see the injustice done to the red man wrote in something the same spirit as Mrs. Stowe and with the same purpose. We can see by studying the lives of these women and reading their works to what an extent a womans sense of justice can be aroused and what she can accomplish by her pen. Madame De Stael, the great French writer, at the time of the Revolution in France was appalled by its awfulness and directed her force toward the suppression of those terrible massacres regardless of the enmity which she thus incurred. Some say that woman's place is in the home and that if she does take her place in the literary world she will neglect her other duties. We have only to look at the lives of our greatest women writers to see that that danger is not at all to be feared.

No better mothers, sisters, and wives can be found than those engaged in literary pursuits. Some of them in order that they might not neglect home duties have snatched odd moments from their work to write.

The lives of those noble women, Alice and Phoebe Cary, were filled with privations and they were obliged to attend to their own house work, and although both of them were devoted to literary work, home duties were never neglected and their home was said to be one of the brightest and cheeriest places one could visit. There are in the present day hundreds of women who are aroused to the fact that they are needed to help put down the many and great evils that exist, not only by writing but by speaking.

These women are thoroughly in earnest and some day we shall realize what a wonderful work they have done. In literature woman is not yet at the zenith of her power but is fast approaching it and when she does reach it her weak intellect will be a thing of the past and her triumph glorious.

The share of land falling to each inhabitant of the globe in the event of a partition might be set down at twenty-three and a half acres.—Scientific American.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, June 7, 1895.

President Cleveland surprised a great many people when he tendered the Secretaryship of State to Attorney General Olney, but there was nothing surprising about it to those who are familiar with the workings of the administration. On the contrary, it appears to them to have been the logical thing to do. Attorney General Olney is thoroughly familiar with the foreign policy of the government. Indeed, it is not stretching the truth to say that he had a hand in the formulation of that policy, as he was in constant consultation with President Cleveland and the late Secretary Gresham whenever any important move was contemplated. What then was more natural than that he should be selected to fill the vacancy? He is thoroughly familiar with all the unfinished negotiations now pending with various countries, more so than an able outsider could possibly become after months of study. It is altogether probable that Mr. Olney would have preferred remaining at the head of the Department of Justice had he considered it merely as a question of personal preference.

Secretary Carlisle will return to Kentucky deliver the speech which was postponed on account of Secretary Gresham's death, and it is possible that he may, while there, make other speeches. The news from Kentucky is not altogether pleasing to democrats who desire the success of the party. The republicans of the state are said to be enthusiastic over their prospects of succes, which would not exist if the democrats were united as they ought to be. There have been several conferences of prominent democrats to discuss ways and means for bringing the democrats together, not only in Kentucky but in other states where there seems to be a disposition to think there are enough democrats to form two parties.

Gen. A. L. New, of Denver, who is collector of internal revenue for the district composed of the states of Colorado and Wyoming, and who is one of the most popular democrats of his section, is in Washington on official business. Speaking of the political situation he said: If Colorado keeps on increasing her gold output in the same ratio that she has of late, I wouldn't be surprised to see her classed as a single standard gold state within five years. The discoveries of the yellow metal at Leadville and Cripple Creek have been astonishing, and the people are gradually ceasing to talk about the demonetization of silver. I doubt very seriously whether the democrats could carry the state in the Presidential election for a free silver candidate."

The opinion is general among democrats who come from New York and Brooklyn that the voters in those towns have had quite enough of the professional reformers and will restore the control to the democrats at the next election. Mr. W. H. Beiford, of the latter city says: "In Brooklyn there is deep disgust at the way things are run. On Sundays the whiskey shops are in full blast, yet it is impossible for a man to get shaved. The conditions are ripe for a return of the democrats to power on both sides of the East River, and if they put up good candidates they will win without any trouble."

"Look out for a big row at Cleveland," remarked a prominent republican who occasionally gives a newspaper man a pointer. He was referring to the National convention of the Republican National League, which begins a three days session at Cleveland, Ohio, on the 16th inst. And well he might say look out for a big row. One is certainly brewing, and nothing but the most careful management can avoid it. It has been clear for some time that an attempt would be made to commit the convention on the silver question: also to use it to boom one of the quartette of leading aspirants for the republican Presidential nomination. Unless both of these attempts can be sidetracked, a fight that may result in splitting the republican party seems inevitable.

President Cleveland this week removed from office Mr. Charles B Morton, Auditor of the Treasury for the Navy Department. No official explanation has been made, but it is understood that the removal was in part brought about by letters written by Mr. Morton in which the names of President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle were used in a disrespectful manner. It is probable also that a long line of difficulties which Mr. Morton has had with naval officials, about which Secretary Herbert had complained to the President had something to do with it; likewise some deals reported to have been made by Mr. Morton in connection with Federal offices in Maine.

HAMLINE UNIVERSITY.

Commencement Oration.

CHARLES S. HAWKER.

The Scholar in Politics.

Of all the phenomena of life there is none so important or interesting to man as his own evolution in society. What are the conditions of his moral progress? Behold man in the dim ages of the past holding his own against fierce competitors. It is true his progress has been slow and painful; but step by step, age by age, he has become master of the forces of nature and changed the face of continents. Science talks of evolution in nature. There is evolution; the flower out of the bulb is evolution; the magnificent jacqueminot rose out of the wild rose is evolution, but it evolves from something and that something be it flower or man is life and that life is from the Creator.

Picture a perfect man, fanned by the balmy air of beautiful Eden, conversing with his Maker. The panorama changes, the world's first and most awful tragedy is enacted. Man is ejected from his home. An angel with a flaming sword guards the entrance. Evil courses in his veins. Death stamps his brow. Since that time man has been slowly developing and as his social nature expanded, he arose from family to tribe, from tribe to nation securing a greater perfection in civilization and a loftier ideal of life's grandeur and sacredness. But wrong still exists. Municipal government has been surrendered to misrule, because pure men have been selfish and refrained from exercising their duty as citizens. Class legislation and sectional strife stalk like ghosts through the land (Golden pavements wend their way to our capitol.) Mobs and anarchy with frenzied madness deal blows at the government. Shall this long continue? From the door of the shanty, from the portals of the palace comes the answer. No; creeping over the plains, climbing up the mountains, rushing through the valley the echo resounds. No. What can check our political wrongs? From every corner of the world the response is borne "the Cristian Scholar." The educated man must be a politician, educated men must manifest their patriotism not only as citizens but as teachers and leaders. They may have to suffer, but suffering for country only endears it. The Irishman's heart beats faster at the mention of "Emerald Isle." The Scot loves with an eternal zeal the home nestled among the crags of the highland. The Swiss, clamboring over the rocks of the Alps down into the secluded valleys, has never had that spirit quenched which loves its home, yet history tells how intense has been their suffering for the maintenance of their rights.

Train and instruct the rising generation of Americans in the duties of citizenship and many of the wrongs which now shame us will not be possible in the future. The apathy, the ignorance and the partisan blindness which have furnished the soil for the germination and growth of McKaneism and Tamany Hall government and other foul upshoots, will be swept away by an advancing billow of scorn when the spirit that inspired and stimulated the brain and soul of Charles Parkhurst seizes upon the heart and conscience of the American People. This spirit will lead men to take as much intelligence, conscience, and sense of moral obligation to the ballot box as to the counting room, church and family altar. Men will then vote as they pray and pray as they vote. The reproach implied in the name politician will fade away, as the morning mist before the rising sun, when it means every American citizen doing his duty toward the state with unselfish devotion.

With such views the scholar will not shrink from enterprises of reform, he will brave wrong, public opinions, use his privelege as a citizen, dedicate his voice and his pen to services of the oppressed and lowly. But his prime effort will be for the spread of the kingdom which enthrones the spirit of love in the heart, and overthrows the evil, the outcrop of selfishness which breaths in the words "no man liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself."

In self-devotion there is positive happiness of the purest kind. We find our life when we give it up. Joy springs not from self-seeking but from self-renunciation. When is the poet inspired? In that blissful moment when he is posessed by thoughts that are above him and lost in them, he is only an organ for their utterance.

When is the joy of the artist at its height? It is when he is conscious that the ideal which he wishes to transfer has taken his soul captive and made him a medium for its expression. What is the joy of eloquence? It is the experience of the orator when he feels that he is not his own but has been caught up and borne away by his theme.

What is the sweetness and glory of dying for one's country? It is the bliss of self-renunciation, of being engrossed in something greater and more beautiful than ourselves. This is genius. But it must be disciplined or it will remain a wayward force. But when developed it creates with the ease of spontaneity.

Let the Christain scholar place his influence on the side of honesty, justice and equality in government and there will be a grander evolution in society and a development toward higher ends in nature and man. The life of man may seem to go on about the same, but a nobler purpose is creeping into his work on earth. The level of manhood is higher than it was in the dark ages, raising, raising the level of human society and that because a God is in it.

The world's ages are like the rungs of Jacob's ladder. We cannot see the top rung but it rests against a throne.

The dawning light of the twentieth century is beginning to color the Eastern sky. And as the light penetrates farther may it illuminate man climbing up the ladder of social progress and as he steps from the last rung and approaches the blazing throne, the clear, melodius notes of an angel's triumph ring out, "This is man" moulded by the ages trained by conscience purified by God's spirit, prepared to dwell with his Maker.

GREAT financiers lose money as well as little ones, but as their purses are longer do not get "cleaned out" so soon. The late multi-millionaire Fair, of California, engaged in a wheat deal a short time before his death, and the last of his wheat has just been closed out at a loss of more than $2,000,000.

OSCAR WILDE works a treadmill in prison and is obliged to climb the equivalent of 6,000 feet at one jog, then he gets a rest of five minutes, then another climb of 6,000 feet, and so on for six hours out of the twenty-four. This kind of training kept up for two years ought to enable him to meet the marquis of Queensbury under his own rules.

WHILE Massachusetts is trying to discover some way to get rid of the tramp nuisance Connecticut is importing Poles and other foreigners for farm hands. If the farmers of New England have to go abroad to find farm hands there is little excuse for the tramp, and the best way to get rid of him would be to invite him to the woodshed or the stone-pile before giving him his breakfast.

WHO says that Mexico is absolutely poverty-stricken? Money has been put up at Boston for a new American daily at the capital of our sister republic. That fact plainly shows that there must be a dollar or two, at least, still left in the country. Yankee financiers rarely make investments without reasonable hope of a fair return therefrom. The halls of the Montezumas must be resuming at last the festal aspect of the good old times.

THE sweet girl graduate in her white muslin and pink ribbons is on deck. She is sure to tell us how to run the universe, and remind us that, although we have been awfully wicked, we still have a chance to make our lives sublime. Yet who would dispense with the sweet thing? It is true that she knows a good many things that are not so, but when she grows older she will be less ambitious to sway the destinies of mankind, provided she is not carried away with the craze for bloomers.

MISS TADZU SUGIYE is the name of a Japanese young woman who, after studying at Wellesley college, became a teacher in a Christian school for girls in Osaka, Japan. "I teach," she says, "three classes in Chinese literature, two in English, one in the history of Japanese literature and one in botany. Besides, I have to correct the Japanese compositions produced from the classes, and to give a lecture each week on the Japanese rhetoric. Added to all these I have to give lessons in Yankee cookery."

TWO JERSEYMEN who had been victimized out of $600 by New York green goods men were foolish enough to return and attempt to get their money back but failed, for the victims lost $150 additional, barely escaped with their lives, and were finally sent to jail, while the green goods men went free. The moral of this is apparent. The man who permits himself to be swindled by green goods men is fortunate if he has to pay only $600 for the experience. He goes into the scheme with the intention of swindling others, and finds himself the victim of sharper rascals.

"I CAN'T see anything unwomanly or outre in the Knickerbocker costume," says a young woman who rides the bicycle. No more there is. But let us be on our guard against eccentricities of speech. A loose employment of adjectives in English speech is more to be deplored than a loose pair of knickers. "The use of the knife to eat oysters," says that great philologist, Bill Nye, "is, I am persuaded, if not absolutely outre and ensemble, at least pianissimo and sine die." There are enough words between the covers of Webster's dictionary to serve all our legitimate uses.

THE Pomona (Cal.) correspondent of the New York Sun says there is alive to-day but one of the men who worked for Sutter in the mine at Coloma, where, on January 24, 1848, James W. Marshall discovered gold. That survivor is James Brown. He is nearly 70 years of age, and makes his home with a grandchild in Pomona valley. He is the only man living who was present when Marshall washed the yellow grains in the camp dough pan; and he is the man who first tested the flaky scales with fire, and going forth from the shanty to the men at the millrace cried: "Boys, here's gold."

PREVENTS A TRAGEDY.

A Child Stops the Hand of a Desperate Man.

J. K. Emmet, the Actor, Influenced by Liquor, Attempts to Kill His Wife and Himself—"Baby" Sinnott the Heroine.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 11.—J. K. Emmet, the actor, made an attempt Saturday night to kill his wife, who is known on the stage as Emily Lytton. The shooting took place a short distance from their temporary residence in this city shortly before 8 p. m. Emmet had been indulging in strong drink and after his wife returned home a quarrel ensued. The woman ran into the street, her husband following, revolver in hand, to the door, which she closed in his face and locked from the outside. "Baby" Sinnott, the 8-year-old protege of the couple, was playing in the yard. As Mrs. Emmet ran down the sidewalk her infuriated husband leaped from a window and started after her. In his hand was a revolver. Half way down the block the woman stopped and looked back. She saw her husband and the revolver, and with a scream resumed her flight. She cried loudly for help as she ran.

At this point the pathetic feature appeared in drama. "Baby" Sinnott, hearing Mrs. Emmet's cries for help, joined in the race, fear and desperation lending speed to her little feet. "Baby's" face was white and set, but she did not give utterance to a single cry. Near the corner Emmet caught up with the terror-stricken woman and as she turned the corner he drew his pistol and fired. With a scream Mrs. Emmet fell to the sidewalk wounded. Once more he advanced toward the woman as though to finish his bloody work, but as he leveled his pistol the baby sprang upon him and seized the hand that held the weapon.

The actor paused and looked at the little one in astonishment, for he had not seen her before. Pushing her from him, Emmet stepped back a pace or two and slowly placed the muzzle of the weapon against his temple. "Baby" Sinnott again sprang upon him. She seemed to climb up his limbs. In an instant a little hand was gripping the barrel of the pistol, which she dragged away from the man's temple. She clung to his arm so that he could not use the weapon again. Emmet stood for a moment as if bewildered and then with his left hand he threw the weapon into the garden on the corner.

Then it was that the 8-year-old little heroine collapsed and fell to the sidewalk in a faint. Bystanders quickly gathered, and one picked up the child. No one would touch the man, who walked up the street and sat upon his doorstep until an officer arrived. Mrs. Emmet was assisted to a doorstep near by, where she sat moaning until officers took her to the receiving hospital. There it was found that a bullet had struck her in the head, but had glanced upward along the bone, inflicting a serious though not dangerous wound. Emmet is under arrest.

Emmet was released on giving bail in the sum of $2,000. He immediately took the pledge, and says he will never drink another drop. An affectionate scene occurred between Emmet and his wife after his release. All was forgiven.

WHITNEY ON SILVER.

The Ex-Secretary Thinks It Is Liable to Split Both the Old Parties.

BOSTON, June 11.—Hon. William C. Whitney, ex-secretary of the navy, who recently returned from Egypt, is making a brief visit to his mother and brother in Brookline, Mass. Sunday he granted an extended interview in which he discussed the silver issue, the presidency and the administration. In answer to a question as to his presidential aspirations he said, quite emphatically: "I am not and will not be a presidential candidate." He added:

"The money question will undoubtedly be the issue in the next campaign, and unless some hard educational work is put in before the next campaign it will prove a serious matter for the democratic party, and the republican party too, for that matter. If the silver men should carry the next democratic convention it would split the party. The democrats must stand for sound money.

"We had the same experience in another form after the panic of 1873, when greenbacks were regarded as a panacea for all the evils in the country, but the good sense of the people asserted itself and we have not heard much of greenbackism since. I think Hayes' election was due to the fact that he was regarded as a hard-money man at that time. I believe the people will eventually treat this question as they did the greenback question, for they want sound money now just as much as they did then."

He did not believe the republicans would care to open up the tariff question again, and expressed the opinion that the money question would dominate everything in the next convention and campaign. Mr. Whitney, in speaking of presidential possibilities, said that the indications seemed to point to Harrison as the republican candidate, but would say no more as to a democratic candidate than that the party had plenty of men to choose from in the country who were for "sound money." The impression conveyed in his conversation was that Cleveland would not look for a third term and that some western man would be preferred as a leader.

THE COLIMA SURVIVORS.

Thirty in All Rescued—Hope for Safety of Others Abandoned.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—A special from Mazatlan says: The Colima survivors found by the steamer Mazatlan have arrived at Manzanillo. They consisted of two passengers, W. H. Bryan and N. O. Wens, and three of the crew, Joe Pegueros, Santa Angel Maria and J. Aikman. These five are undoubtedly survivors of boat No. 5 and the last to hear from, making the total saved out of 204 to be thirty, as follows: Twenty-one by San Juan, four at Acapulco, and five at Manzanillo.

There is no hope of picking up or finding more, and the recovery of bodies is extremely doubtful owing to the great depth of water. However, a few may come ashore. The inhabitants along shore are patrolling the coast.

Revolutionists Win.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—News of the success of the revolutionists in Ecuador came to the navy department Thursday in a cablegram from Capt. Watson, of the Ranger, which warship is now at Guayaquil. The cablegram is dated at Guayaquil Wednesday, and reads as follows:

"The insurgents have possession of the city. Gov. Gen. Flores has resigned. Ignacio Robles, liberal, has been proclaimed military and civil general. Everything is quiet at present. Communication with Quito by telegraph is interrupted."

SHOT FOR REVENGE.

Two Stories Told of the Ish-Chapple Tragedy at Omaha.

OMAHA, Neb., June 12.—A dispatch was sent from this city Sunday to the effect that a man named Chapple called at the residence of James C. Ish Saturday evening ostensibly to repair a sewing-machine. While there he made indecent proposals to Mrs. Iish, a prepossessing young woman, and followed it up with an attempt to assault her. According to the dispatch Mrs. Ish procured her husband's revolver and shot Chapple, who after the first shot drew his own revolver in self-defense, but Mrs. Ish also secured this and emptied its contents into Chapple's body. When the shooting was over Chapple was found to have been killed.

Later developments show the tragic affair, it is alleged, to have been a murder by Mr. Ish, because he believed his wife false. On Chapple's body were found several letters from Mrs. Ish, showing her to be in love with Chapple. She denounced these letters as forgeries. Mr. Ish was arrested Monday for the murder. Ish in an interview admits committing the murder, but did not think a jury would convict him when the facts became known.

Briefly, as Ish related it, the story of the crime is this: When Chapple came to his house at the remarkable time he did, ostensibly to fix the sewing machine, Ish was satisfied that he had come to meet Mrs. Ish criminally. Afterward, when Ish left the room to go downstairs, he went only part way, returning immediately to see if Chapple would attempt familiarity with the woman. Looking in the room, he, having armed himself with his revolver, he saw the man apparently attempting to kiss Mrs. Ish, they being in one another's embrace. He fired, the shot taking effect in the back of Chapple's head. In falling Chapple attempted to use his own revolver, but the shots went wild. As the despoiler of a home lay upon the floor Ish pumped bullets into his body. Mrs. Ish ran out to the kitchen and excitedly told the first comer that she had killed the man for assaulting her, and on her prayer to save her name, Ish corroborated her story.

SLAUGHTER IN CHINA.

Confirmation of the Reports of a Recent Massacre.

SHANGHAI, June 12.—The report of the total destruction of the missions of Cheng Tu, Kiating and Yoachohu has been confirmed. The local officials refused protection to the missionaries until the mob had completed the work of demolishing the buildings. The mission stations at other places have been threatened. About twenty adults, besides a number of children, have taken refuge at Cheng Tu, and Yamen-Viceroy Ling is blamed for the affair.

LONDON, June 12.—The news of the reported massacre of the English, French and American missionaries at Cheng Tu has created great excitement in this city. The meager dispatches thus far received indicate that not only the missionaries, but the women and children at the mission houses were killed. There are fears that other missions will be attacked.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—State department officials, after investigating the reports of the Chinese massacre, say that they think an error has been made in the transmission of the name of the place where the massacre is said to have occurred. It is believed that this name instead of Cheng Tu should be Chang Te, the capital of Hunan. In this place there are a number of foreign missionaries, and the anti-foreign feeling is very strong.

CHICAGO, June 12. — Among the American missionaries at Cheng Tu, and whom it is feared have been massacred, are:

Rev. H. O. Cady and wife—born Hattie Gates—of Elburn, Ill., who were married at that place only last year. Mr. Cady was a brother of Rev. Dr. M. E. Cady, of Aurora, presiding elder of the Joliet district, and immediately after his marriage returned with his bride to the mission field where he went originally nearly ten years ago.

Rev. J. F. Peat and wife: Mr. Peat being from the conference of Illinois and going out to the mission some three years ago.

Rev. Mr. Manley, who went from the Upper Iowa conference in 1892, at first to Chung King.

THURSTON'S SUCCESSOR.

Mr. Castle Will Not Be Hawaiian Minister Very Long.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 12.—The steamer Australia brings the following correspondence from Honolulu: This government has commissioned William R. Castle as the minister to Washington. Mr. Castle will proceed to his post in August, with his family. On account of business interests here he does not expect to occupy the position for any great length of time. He was second of the commission of which Thurston was the head, which negotiated the treaty of annexation with President Harrison in February, 1893. This government desires to avoid any needless irritation. It has, therefore, refrained from discussing Mr. Thurston's course. It is not therefore to be interpreted as censuring him; on the contrary, it is deeply sensible of Mr. Thurston's great fidelity and ability in their support at the critical period of December, 1893, as well as on many other occasions, when he was obliged to assume an attitude necessarily unpleasant to the administration.

MINERS ACCEPT THE RATE.

Big Coal Fight in Ohio at Last Brought to a Close.

COLUMBUS, O., June 12.—The vote of the Ohio miners as to whether they would accept or reject the proposition of the operators to pay fifty-one cents for screened coal per ton for mining resulted: For acceptance, 5,091; against, 4,351. The state miners' officials say in their circular Monday to the miners of Ohio:

"You will thus see that the provisional agreement, made between the operators and your delegates June 1, 1895, has been ratified and accepted by the popular vote of the district. This makes the agreement valid. Locals will govern themselves accordingly and will resume work under the provisions of said agreement. It must be borne in mind that, distasteful as the terms of the agreement are, we have hopes of its being only temporary."

A Tremendous Cloudburst.

STUTTGART, June 8.—A tremendous cloudburst occurred Wednesday evening over the Wurtemburg portion of the Black forest. The downfall of water caused the river Eyach to rise and many houses at Ballingen, Frommern, Dirrwangen and Lanfen were swept away. Many persons are missing and it is feared they were drowned in the flood. Ten persons were drowned at Ballingen, seven were killed at Frommern and nine other persons are missing. At Lanfen ten persons were killed.

A STEADY GAIN.

Demand for Goods Keeps Pace with the Increase in Wages.

NEW YORK, June 10.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

"The tide of business is rising, even as it was falling just two years ago, with surprising rapidity. The gain has gone so far and so fast in some branches that the more conservative fear it may not be maintained. But the period of dullness which comes in each market after an unusual rise brings as yet nothing like a corresponding decline. Industries gain much, halt, fall back a little and then gain once more. The demand for consumption steadily increases as the employment and wages of the people increase. Demand for money expands, one bank reporting 29 per cent larger discounts for the country, and another 25 per cent. more commercial loans than a year ago, and all but two report some gain. One serious question remains, whether the crops will be full enough to sustain a large business. But the worst reports to-day are better by far than the estimates recently current.

"Wheat rose 2 cents, fell back 2 with realizing, and has again risen 3, with a western estimate of a crop 80,000,000 bushels smaller than last year. It is pertinent to remember that official and most unofficial reports, down to a late period last fall, put the yield about 80,000,000 bushels lower than it is now known to have been. There is neither holding back by farmers, nor anxious haste in the purchasing by foreigners, to support belief in scarcity.

"Iron pushes upward like the great buildings into which so much of it goes, and the advance in finished products has become general. Of structural steel, 12,600 tons were turned out in May by the Homestead works, breaking the record, and prices rose one-third cent for beams and one-half for angels. The Eastern Bar association has raised the price of refined iron to 1.1 cent, and the Amalgamated association demands of Pittsburgh and western makers a change of wages with 1.1 cents as the basis. Coke producers are said to have substantially agreed upon sales by an agency and allotment of output, and an advance in price to $1.50 or higher. This and purchases of 50,000 tons by the largest producer of pig iron have raised Bessemer to $12 at Pittsburgh, and southern pig has again been advanced 25 cents, making 75 cents in all. Chicago works are in full operation, though the demand from agricultural implement makers lags because the coming harvest is in doubt.

"The flow of money hither from the interior has not ceased but has much lessened, and banks report general increase in discounts for the country, largely for the south, and in commercial loans here, mainly in manufacturing paper.

"Failures for four weeks of May show liabilities amounting to $9,329,181, of which $3,401,875 were of manufacturing and $5,345,306 of trading concerns. Last year the total was $9,787,921, of which $4,061,302 were of manufacturing and $4,281,886 of trading concerns. The failures during the past week have been 195 in the United States, against 216 last year, and 25 in Canada, against 40 last year."

TAKES THE OATH.

Olney Qualifies as Secretary of State, and Begins Work.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Mr. Olney Monday became secretary of state, succeeding Walter Q. Gresham. Chief Justice Fuller, who had come to Washington from Richmond, administered the oath of office to the secretary in the diplomatic room at the state department.

Mr. Olney came alone to the state department at 10:15 o'clock, and after a few moments' conversation with Mr. Landis, private secretary to the late Secretary Gresham, he was joined by Assistant Secretaries Uhl, Adee and Rockhill, and received their congratulations. After waiting half an hour Chief Justice Fuller appeared, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs.

JUDGE JUDSON HARMON, THE NEW UNITED STATES ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Aubrey. Secretary Lamont also came over from the war department, and the party, which had been chatting in the secretary's office, repaired to the diplomatic room adjoining, and the oath was administered to Mr. Olney. The secretary then received the bureau chiefs of the state department and settled down at once to the routine of his office.

OUR FINANCES.

Treasury Receipts Keep Pace with Business Revival.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The treasury receipts are partaking of the general business revival, and while they do not as yet quite reach to the point of equalizing the expenditures, are getting nearer striking an even balance each day. For the ten days of June the receipts have aggregated $8,455,000, or $1,000,000 a day, Sundays excluded, and the expenditures have been $10,004,000, or only $1,469,000 in excess of receipts. The deficit will be wiped out before many days and the end of June is likely to show for the month an excess of $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 receipts over expenditures, a condition not reached in any month for several years by the treasury. The deficit for the year, which now stands at $48,326,000, will be reduced to $45,000,000 or below by June 30. This turn in affairs in the treasury's condition is accounted for by the fact that business is adjusting itself to tariff conditions and that large revenue is now being received from articles that heretofore yielded little as they were in "stock."

With all the principal lines of business adjusting themselves to the present tariff conditions and with an increased volume of business apparent, still the revenues of the government are not quite sufficient to meet fixed expenditures. The increased revenue of $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 provided by the senate over the house tariff act, principally on the items of sugar, iron ore and coal, makes the deficit just so much less, but leaves the treasury still short by about $23,000,000 or $30,000,000 a year of equalling expenditures. This will have to be provided for by the next congress.

The Yaqui Rebellion.

PHOENIX, A. T., June 12.—Advices from Hermosillo, Sonora, state that Saturday afternoon Lieut. Col. Flores Hermooso, with fifty regulars of the Mexican army, came upon a large band of rebel Yaqui Indians in Chichiquete canyon, upper Sonora and routed them with heavy loss. Darkness terminated the fight. On the Mexican side a colonel and fifty soldiers were wounded and one corporal was killed. A large amount of booty was recovered from the Indians. The Yaqui rebellion is the most serious ever known, and the Mexican forces are making little progress against it.

ENDURANCE OF THE CHINESE.

Instances of Their Apparent Insensitiveness to Physical Pain.

"Remarkable though the statement is concerning the endurance of Chinese soldiers, I can quite understand it," said an ex-police surgeon of San Francisco to a New York man recently. "The correspondent says that, though the men in question were shot through the chest and the head, they walked great distances. In one case, if I remember aright, it was one hundred miles.

"During four years of service as police surgeon in San Francisco I saw some pretty severe cases of wounded Chinamen—yes, and China women, too—and I declare their insensitiveness to pain seemed to be almost absolute. Part of it, I have no doubt, is due to racial, inherent stoicism; but I am also inclined to the opinion that the Chinese do not feel pain as we do. Now, I remember the case of a woman who was brought down to the city prison ward from Chinatown with her head literally split open in five places by one of the highbinders' hatchet men. From the very first to the last—I think she died—she gave no indication of pain, and did not even refer to her injuries. The Chinese dislike our surgical appliances, our knives and saws, not, however, because of the pain they produce, but because that sort of treatment is foreign to their ideas. Let one of their doctors put a pitch plaster over an injury, no matter if it be a broken leg, a lost nose or a hole through the lungs, and the man will be perfectly satisfied and will accept whatever will come without a word of suffering or complaint. They're certainly a queer people."

Getting at the Figures.

Jimmieboy is studying arithmetic and has done very well so far. The other day his father took him in his lap, and giving him a squeeze, said: "Dear little boy, you don't know how much I love you."

"Yes, I do," said Jimmieboy, "I love you two million dollars worth. You weigh three times as much as I do, so you love me three times as much as I do you. That's six million dollars worth."—Harper's Young People.

Precaution.

The emancipated woman was just leaving the club.

"Here," said she to the cashier, "take this roll of bills and lock them up in the safe for me."

"You are very cautious," said a companion.

"Yes. My husband has gotten into the way of going through my bloomers whem I am asleep, and I have to be." —Washington Star.

Nervous Prostration

Is due to impure and impoverished blood. The true way to cure, is to purify the blood. Read this:

"My wife was troubled with palpitation of the heart, numbness, dizziness and general nervous prostration. Our home physicians failed to give her relief. Then she decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After taking a half dozen bottles, we saw a decided improvement. She has now taken about eighteen bottles and feels the best she has for years. She looks so much better that people wonder at her improvement." O. C. HIMES, Cedar Creek, Indiana.

HALF-FRIENDSHIP.

O, this half-friendship! how I hate the thing!—
Giving so little, promising so much,
Professing, never doing—there's the sting—
A false-faced weakling—I'll have none of such!

True friendship is a perfect, priceless gem.
Its greatest glory is its flawlessness.
My friends must give to me, as I to them,
Their best or nothing—I'll accept no less.

I want the perfect music, or no song:
I want the perfect love, or none at all;
Right is not right, when coupled with a wrong;
Sweet is not sweet when touched with taint of gall.

The forger's gilded coin lacks gold's true ring,
And this half-friendship—how I hate the thing!
—William H. Anderson, in Overland Quarterly.

A NOISELESS BURGLAR.

BY JAMES PAYN.

HOTELS are not, as a rule, good places for ghosts. There is too much "to-ing and fro-ing," as Le Fanu calls it (the best judge of the ghostly we ever had in the flesh), too much jerking of bells instead of solemnly ringing them, and not a room on popular occasions, such as the race week, a ghost can have to himself.

On the other hand, hotels are very convenient for robbers, not, of course, of the black-craped and "money-or-your-life" description, but of the quiet, gentlemanly-looking kind, who, if they meet the night chamberlain in the passage at two in the morning, express their satisfaction at finding somebody who can tell them the number of their room, which they have unhappily forgotten. It must be a strange life, that of pretending to be somebody else, generally a captain very much unattached, and, after mastering a more or less difficult role all day, to pass the small hours of the night in trying other people's doors and taking the consequences, which may be anything disagreeable, from the inquiry of "who the devil's that?" down to the presentation of a revolver. His hope, of course, is to find the gentleman he visits, whose very names, and far more their habits, are utterly unknown to him, in a deep sleep, but never dreaming—if dream they do—that their purse and watch upon their dressing-table are at that very moment changing owners.

One can hardly picture a more anxious life than that of the hotel thief; more at the mercy of circumstances, more subject to what the old stage directions call "alarms and excursions," and generally less at ease in his inn.

No reflection, however, respecting the discomfort of hotel thieves ever occurred to Aunt Deborah; like the French vivisectionist who was asked whether his experiments hurt the animals, she might have honestly replied that that consideration "never entered her mind;" she was a tender-hearted woman, but her pity did not extend to the class in question. They were in fact her bete noir; her sister Susan and herself passed a good deal of their time in hotels, and always with the fear of being robbed at night before their eyes. They never went down to the table d'hote without connecting some innocent and respectable person with this larcenous profession, and if a footstep passed their door after they had retired to rest they plunged their heads beneath the bed clothes and awaited the worst.

As a matter of fact, my aunts were never robbed at a hotel (except in the course of business by the landlord) though they always expected to be—until last year, when—but I must let Aunt Deb tell her own story. No one she says, can tell what Sue and she suffered on the occasion in question, or can properly describe the horror of their situation but themselves: and as Aunt Sue, according to her sister's account, was insensible through terror during a part of the time, it seems only right that Aunt Deb should be the spokeswoman. Aunt Sue is a sprightly young thing of fifty-two or so, and though not "flighty" (except as regards a desire to escape from robbers) is scarcely equal to deal with a subject at once so serious and delicate as a night alarm.

"Sue and I had two bedrooms at the 'Imperial,' but as usual, when at hotels, we slept together for protection, and one was only used as my dressing room. In this we kept the gas burning, though very low, all night, and the door open between the two rooms, so as to avoid being in darkness. I need not say that all the other doors were bolted; to lock a door at an hotel is simply to invite the robber, as with a little instrument, such as dentists use, he can turn the key from without; if on the other hand you take out your key he puts in one of his own well-oiled ones, and opens the door with noiseless facility. Perhaps there is no bolt, but in that case Sue and I have a patent door fastener which sticks into the floor, and it is practically immovable. It sometimes strikes me, if anything should happen to Sue, how very dangerous these precautions would be to a sound sleeper like myself, in case of fire; but it is not likely, considering our ages, that she will be taken first.

"Well, I had turned the gas low in the dressing-room, and was lying awake listening to the breathing of sister Sue and wishing it was not quite so loud; as a general rule I don't mind her snoring; it is intermittent, and might be taken by a stranger for conversation, which is so far a protection, but as it happened I was not thinking of burglars at all that night, but only wanted to get to sleep. Then all of a sudden a most horrible thing happened. I found myself suddenly in total darkness. Somebody in the dressing-room had put out the gas.

"I woke dear Sue as gently as I could but she is not a good waker; in reply to my terrified whispers she answered: 'Eh? What? Did you speak?' And even: 'Don't pinch,' for I was driven to that expedient, but when I had breathed into her ear what had happened she was quiet enough. 'Perhaps you turned the gas off yourself,' she murmured. 'No,' said I, in hushed anxiety—indeed, we were talking under the bed clothes—'I left more than a bead.' 'Is the dressing-room door bolted?' 'Yes,' I said; it was in deed made fast by the machine, but what was the good of that, when the robber must be in the room; indeed it must be worse than useless, for he would not know how to get out again, which would probably make him desperate.

"'I think,' said Sue, 'we ought to light the candle.' It stood with the matches at my bedside, and what she meant, as I well knew, was that I ought to light it. This might precipitate matters and was therefore a dangerous office, but somehow I accomplished it. Upon the whole it had a good effect upon my nerves, though Sue was not an encouraging spectacle. She had endeavored to take off her nightcap, under the impression it was a delicate thing to do in contemplation of the visit of a stranger, and the strings had got in a knot, at which she was tugging convulsively. This gave her a color, but it was not a healthy one, and her eyes looked as though they would have come out of her head. However, I took the candle and tottered with it into the next room with a vague idea of asking for mercy on condition of giving the man all our valuables and showing how to undo the door fastener. And here the most dreadful thing of all happened, for just as I crossed the threshold somebody blew the candle out, and we were left in darkness with the positive certainty of there being a robber within a few feet of us. There may have been more terrible positions in the history of human life, but if so, I have never heard of them.

"The tension of our minds was such that a little more would have made gibbering maniacs of both of us, when a most providential affair happened.

I PUT A MATCH TO IT.

We heard a tray rattle in the passage without and a cry of 'Go along with you,' which we recognized. It was the voice of our chambermaid Mary Ann, and addressed to our waiter who, notwithstanding he was carrying plates and glasses, had endeavored to snatch a salute from her. When we had heard the same thing before we had been shocked as in duty bound, but on this occasion it gave us the most heartfelt satisfaction; for it showed that there were honest (if rather disreputable) people about, and that the household was still afoot. It gave me courage at once, and rescued Sue from the very brink of hysterics. A sort of desperate audacity caused me to see this mysterious matter out, and the more so because the effect of this relief was, I regret to say, to cause Sue to entertain some doubt of anything having happened at all. 'Are you quite sure, my dear,' she said, 'that you left the gas alight in the next room to begin with?' It was a cruel observation to make, and, so to speak, put my back up. 'Since you don't believe it,' I replied, 'I must give you the trouble to investigate the matter for yourself,' and thereby secured her very unwilling companionship. Again I lit the candle and entered the drawing-room; it looked empty enough, and going straight to the gas lamp, I put a match to it which caused it to flame up at once. As I had not turned the screw this showed of course that it had been left alight. How it had been put out and how the candle had been blown out, remained still unsolved problems. Our nerves were, however, now tolerably quieted, only we turned the gas a little on in our room 'for company,' as it were, and lay marveling at what had happened and our own courageous conduct. As we did so an incident took place which explained the whole mystery and revealed the disturber of our peace. Suddenly we saw a great white moth fly right at our gaslamp, and getting beneath the glass attack the slender flame. Had it but been a bead of light, so resolute was the onset, it would certainly have extinguished it, but as it was the poor insect perished by suttee. We pitied its fate, though it had twice left us in darkness, and given us a most terrible half-hour."—Chapman's Magazine.

Another Application.

A certain schoolmaster occasionally compares the achievements of his pupils with the work of noted men in their boyhood days, much to the scholars' disadvantage.

"Now, John, have you solved the problem?" asked the teacher the other day.

"No, sir," replied the boy; "I can't."

"How old are you, John?"

"Sixteen," was the answer.

"Sixteen," repeated the instructor. "Sixteen, and can't solve a simple problem like that! Why, sir, at your age Geosge Washington was surveying the estate of Lord Fairfax."

The pupil looked thoughtful but made no reply.

After the class was dismissed a classmate inquired of him if Washington ever did anything else remarkable when he was sixteen.

"I don't know," responded the boy. "He was a surveyor when he was as old as I am and when he was as old as our teacher he was president of the United States."—Philadelphia Call.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Suicide.

John Sopp, of St. Paul, by throwing himself in front of a rapidly moving interurban car, committed suicide. Sopp was deaf and dumb, and in addition to his other infirmities, was in very poor health and despondent. He was seen by a number of persons standing on University avenue, near the intersection of Gaultier street, and just as car 714 from Minneapolis was passing him he threw himself across the track directly in front of it. The fender of the car caught him and he was dragged nearly a block, the motoneer not knowing what had happened until his attention was called to the matter by persons on the sidewalk. When Sopp was taken out from under the car he was in a dreadfully mangled condition, but still alive. He was taken to the hospital in the patrol wagon, but expired soon after his arrival.

Cloudburst.

A heavy wind storm passed over Faribault, accompanied by a cloudburst. Water flooded the streets, gutters and cellars, and caused washouts. The wind blew down trees and broke off large limbs. It contained the power of a cyclone. A man named Offerman, passing along the corner of Maria and Third streets stepped off the sidewalk into the gutter in two and a half feet of water. With difficulty he was rescued from drowning by passers-by. Many gentlemen were down town to business when the storm, lasting a couple of hours, came up, and had much labor reaching home, on account of the flooded streets and floating sidewalks.

Bad Eggs.

A Sauk Rapids man named Hartoon came to St. Cloud and informed merchants there that his wife had stolen silks from them ank asked them to go to Sauk Rapids and identify the goods. A number went over, and their visit attracted much attention and indignation among the people. They threw rotten eggs at the St. Cloud policemen and storekeepers. They also threatened to lynch Hartoon and a hundred men started to find him, but he made his escape. Sauk Rapids people say that Hartoon is a wife-beater and utterly unreliable, and they would not believe him under oath.

The U. of M.

Fully 4,000 people gathered in the exposition auditorium at Minneapolis to witness the commencement exercises of the 23d graduating class of the state university. The candidates for the various degrees conferred by the seven colleges which constitute the university numbered 287, and as they marched to the seats reserved for them, they presented a decidedly imposing appearance, over 100 being robed in the Oxford cap and gown. Clarence B. Miller was salutatorian and Julius Boraas valedictorian.

The Gallows.

Commissioners Nash and Ryberg, Sheriff Holmberg of Minneapolis went over to St. Paul to get the promise of the St. Paul gallows for use at Harry Hayward's obsequies. They looked at the St. Paul gallows, and were dumbfounded to discover that it was the same trap as that used to hang the Barrett boys. It was sent to Alexandria from the Barrett hanging, and from there was loaded to the St. Paul authorities. It will be brought back in a few days.

News in Brief.

A valuable gold watch was stolen from N. B. Soper, a farmer living near Crookston, and Chief Creamer arrested the supposed thief at Ada, in the person of John Petosky, who has been in the employ of Soper for some time.

The stock of Forde & Davidson, at Belview was sold at sheriff's sale to O. T. Bamsland & Co. The creditors were St. Paul and Minneapolis houses.

Daniel Melster, 18 years old, was killed at Luverne by being thrown from a pony and having his back broken.

Martin, the 15-year-old son of Charles Wise, was drowned in Lake Pepin while bathing near a lumber raft in the vicinity of the government breakwater.

Thomas Saubey, a lumberman, said to live at Crookston, attempted to make a moving train at McGregor station, and missing his hold, was thrown under the wheels and killed.

The board of prison managers granted paroles as follows: Robert Blanz, T. Simonson and Annie Doolittle, Stearns county; W. S. Norton, St. Louis county; T. P. Miller and John Miller, Hennepin county; John McDermott and Dr. S. J. Pearce, Ramsey county; Frank Lundgren, Nobles county.

Binding twine prices for the season were fixed by the board of prison managers at quite a reduction from last year. Prices are: American hemp, 5 cents per pound; Standard, 5 cents; Sisal, 4½ cents; Manilla, Sisal, mixed 5½ cents; pure Manilla, 6¼ cents.

Julius Adams, president of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, has issued the official call for the semi-annual meeting of the federation, to be held in Duluth June 23. The call exhorts all labor organizations to be represented by delegates and points out the importance of such representation.

Chas. Foote, a young farmer living near Royalton, attempted to commit suicide at an early hour one morning by taking an ounce of aconite. He had just eaten his breakfast and at once began to vomit. Doctors were summoned and he is now thought to be out of danger. It was brooding over a love affair that drove him to the deed.

The west-bound freight on the Soo line pulled into New Paynesville three hours late recently, having been delayed by a traveling army of caterpillars between there and Eden Valley. The trainmen said they were an inch thick and several rods wide, and were traveling northwest.

The Hessian fly has made its appearance in some parts of the state, so says Prof. Lugger of the experimental station, but he apprehends they will do little damage from the fact that the late frosts we had killed the eggs.

A young son of W. D. Cotta, living near Stephen was standing in front of a mower when the horses suddenly started and before he could get away his right foot was cut off at the ankle.

The propeller Belle Cross, loaded with lumber, sunk in Duluth harbor Saturday night. The boat will be pumped out and raised.

Result of the Conference of Silver Democrats of Iowa.

DES MOINES, Ia., June 8.—The conference of silver democrats held here Thursday took a course which makes it important in the political history of the state. While the attendance was not large, only about 100 being present at any time, those who did attend were thoroughly in earnest and represented the party workers of their respective sections. Some of them came armed with credentials which could not be ignored. State Senator Taylor, for instance, brought petitions from each township in his district instructing him as to his course. Speeches were radically in favor of free silver and indicated a determination to make that the leading issue regardless of party action. What amonnts to practically a new state central committee was named, and the best informed politicians regard Thursday's action as practically the formation of a new political party. The fight is now on for the control of the regular state convention which will meet at Marshalltown August 7, and the silver men express themselves as certain of being able to have their own way.

Ex-Lieut. Gov. S. L. Bestow, of Charlton, was made chairman and W. I. Alexander, of Grundy Center, secretary. Mr. Bestow and Senator Taylor spoke briefly, declaring themselves in favor of free silver above all other political considerations.

After the appointment of a committee on resolutions a resolution was then adopted under which a state central committee was elected with J. J. Shea, of Council Bluffs, candidate for clerk of the supreme court last fall, as chairman, and a representative from each district. The duty of this committee is to organize the silver sentiment throughout the district and to see that the silver men do not neglect to secure their proper representation at the state convention.

Resolutions were adopted affirming that gold and silver coins are the constitutional money of the country, declaring in favor of the free coinage of both on terms of equality, and reaffirming that the free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold at the ratio of 16 to 1 without waiting for the action of other nations is a cardinal principle of the democratic faith, and that such coinage shall be a legal tender for all debts both public and private. A resolution was also adopted declaring in favor of the repeal of all laws which permit the making of contracts which discriminate against payments in any kind of legal money.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., June 8.—The Bankers' Association of the State of Illinois concluded its convention here Thursday. Expression was made on the financial question by the adoption of resolutions of which the following is a synopsis:

Pledges support to every proper effort for the enlargement of the use of silver; favor use of both gold and silver for monetary purposes under such regulations as shall maintain the same at a parity, so that every dollar, whether gold, silver or paper, shall be at all times equal in purchasing or debt-paying power; with these ends in view declare unalterable opposition to free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 in the absence of an international agreement, believing that such a course would result in silver monometalism and bring upon the country through the affliction of a degraded standard and contracted volume of circulation a panic more disastrous than any this country has experienced.

THE WEATHER.

Forecasts to Be Daily Displayed in Post Offices.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Postmaster General Wilson and postmasters throughout the country will cooperate with Secretary of Agriculture Morton and the weather bureau in giving the public the fullest possible advantages to be derived from the daily weather forecasts. Secretary Morton submitted a plan to Postmaster General Wilson by which a much wider dissemination of the daily weather predictions will be had through the cooperation of the post office department. It is proposed to telegraph daily to postmasters at distributing offices the weather forecasts, to be bulletined in their offices for the benefit of the public and also to be mailed to outlying offices which can be reached in time to make the predictions of value. A simple device by which the forecasts can be easily duplicated and stamped upon the postal cards will be furnished postmasters by the weather bureau as well as the necessary postal cards for use in this connection. Postmaster General Wilson has requested postmasters to lend their efforts in this service.

Quick Time on Wheels.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The great relay bicycle race of the red and the blue between Chicago and this city was finished at 1:57 o'clock Tuesday morning. The actual time of the race was 64 hours and 57 minutes. They broke all American records for a relay race. The start was at Chicago at 9:00 o'clock on Wednesday morning. The race was organized practically by Gen. Nelson A. Miles to demonstrate the effectiveness of bicycles in military service. The "blue" riders represent the military, the "red" the postal service. The red message was followed at 2:39 a. m. by the blue message.

Great Damage Done by a Cyclone.

ROME, June 10.—A cyclone swept the district of Motola in the province of Lecce. Property to the amount of 1,000,000 lires was damaged. No fatalities are yet reported.

FIRESIDE FRAGMENTS.

—Lemon Shortcake.—Make a rich cake, split and butter, then take rind, juice and pulp of three lemons grated, one cup sugar, one cup cream, mix thoroughly and spread.—Mrs. W. C. Newell, in Orange Judd Farmer.

—Batter Cakes.—Sift one quart of flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, add two beaten eggs, a teaspoonful of salt, a pint and a half of sweet milk, and a tablespoonful of melted butter or lard. Bake on a hot griddle.—Home.

—Carrots Flemish Way.—Boil six or eight good-sized carrots until tender. Cut them into stars or dice, then stew them with five small onions, a sprig of parsley chopped and a little salt and pepper, three-fourths of a pint of good gravy, or a little melted butter. Serve very hot.—Boston Budget.

—To Boil Bacon Ham.—After cleaning the ham well, place in a large boiler and fill with cold water. Let it boil slowly five or six hours, then take it out and put it into a dish to drain. While it is still hot, or when it is cool, remove the skin and place it in the oven to brown. Mix one teacupful of vinegar, one tablespoonful of black pepper, a little ground mustard, two or three tablespoonfuls of sugar, and baste the ham with it while it is roasting.—Farmers' Voice.

—Something Good.—Beat one cup of butter and one cup of sugar until light. Beat three eggs without separating until very light, then stir them into the butter and sugar, add half a tablespoonful of ground cinamon, two tablespoonfuls of milk and sufficient flour to make a dough—about two cups. Knead lightly, roll into a thin sheet, cut into narrow strips, twist or braid them together, drop them at once into smoking fat and cook to golden brown. Dust down with powdered sugar and serve.—N. Y. Ledger.

—Pearl Barley Cream Soup.—Simmer a pint of pearl barley slowly in stock, with an onion, carrot and seasoning, for two hours. Remove the carrot, and stew the rest till reduced to a pulp, and rub it through a hair sieve, adding as much more stock, or water, as will dilute it to the thickness of good cream. Bring to the boil, and lift it off directly it actually boils, and stir into it the yolk of an egg beaten in a little milk. Scatter chopped parsley over, and serve. This soup may be varied with the addition of tomatoes cut in slices and cooked lightly before being added to it.—Leeds Mercury.

—Crecy, or Carrot Soup.—Take five or six large red carrots, wash and scrape them well, shave off thin slices and outer part, leaving the yellow center. Then peel and slice a large onion and a small piece of turnip. Put them in a stew pan with a heaping teaspoonful of butter, a few sprigs of parsley and two bay leaves. Fry the whole a light yellow color, then add the carrot with a pint of water, and let them stew until perfectly tender. Rub the carrot through a squash strainer. Add a quart of stock and heat again. Add a teaspoonful of sugar and salt, and pepper to taste, and when hot serve immediately with croutons.—Farmers' Review.

LIFE AND DEATH.

Some Scientific Talk About the Machinery of the Human Body.

In the descending scale of animal life, the relations between the organs are less and less intimate, and the misleading suddenness of the arrest of their machinery fades away. The heart of a turtle from which the brain has been removed will continue to beat for days. A worm or a starfish may be cut in pieces, and each piece remains alive, sometimes even producing the whole. Who shall name the point of death of an oyster, or of a sea-anemone? No stoppage of a single organ causes sudden and conspicuous change in the whole; when protoplasmic death of a part occurs, either the part is sloughed away and replaced, or the ripples of destructive change spread slowly from cell to cell, each unaffected part remaining active to the last. In the simplest animals of all, organisms that consist each of a single cell, death may be seen at its lowest terms. There is no composite multicellular body, no bodily mechanism to break down, no possibility of the failure of one set of cells gradually creeping upon others. Each organism is alive or dead as its protoplasm is alive or dead.

Here, in their simplest forms, are life and death; and here, asking if death be inherent in living matter, we find surprising answer. Violence of heat and cold, mechanical forces and the assaults of chemical affinities may destroy these single particles of life; but if not overthrown by rude accident, and if provided with food and drink, their protoplasm lives forever. Each particle feeds, until, outgrowing a convenient size, it cleaves asunder and the one life becomes two lives. So far as reason and observation can inform us, the living particles in the ponds and seas of to-day have descended in a direct continuity of living material from the first dawn of life. No other solution is open, save the possibility of a spontaneous generation of living matter so continual and so common that it could not have eluded the search of science. This is that "immortality of the protozoa" hinted at by Lankester in England, blazoned into fame by Weismann.

Whether or no the protoplasm of the tissues of higher organisms be potentially immortal can be only a matter of inference. The reproductive cells, indeed, form a living chain, binding the animals and plants of the present with the animals and plants of the remotest past. This reproductive protoplasm is immortal in precisely the same sense as the protoplasm of single cells is immortal, and there seems no reason to believe with Weismann that the protoplasm of the other tissues has acquired mortality and is different in kind. It dies, but only because it is part of a complex structure. The machinery of the body is not regulated to last forever; on the other hand, it is to the advantage of the race that it should break down when reproduction has been accomplished, and its break-down results in the ruin of its component parts. There is no reason to suppose that the protoplasm itself grows old. A slip cut from a tree many centuries old may be grafted on a young tree and so enter on a new lease of life. Were the process to be continued, a continuity of protoplasmic life might be maintained. So far as we can tell, death is not inherent in living matter. Protoplasm may live forever, as a flame shielded from the wind and fed from an endless store would burn forever.—London Saturday Review.

A Lightning Stroke.

During a storm in the West Indies, a laborer, who was working in an open cornfield, was killed by a flash of lightning. The flash was of a most peculiar form, seeming to swing quickly back and forth and up and down, sweeping around the laborer and filling the air with flame. Examination disclosed a serious external injury to the right side of the head, the ear was almost torn away and the hair on that side, which was unusually long, was removed as completely as though shaved with a razor. An autopsy, made soon after death, showed an extensive fracture of the skull, the bones being full of fine jagged cracks and fissures running down to the bridge of the nose. The brain was very soft, the blood quite thin and watery, with only a few clots in the region of the heart. It was said by bystanders that the flash seemed to come from the ground up to the man's head. This was thought to account for the extreme shattering of the skull and the peculiar state of the brain.—N. Y. Ledger.

$100 Reward, $100.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

Beecham's pills are for biliousness, bilious headache, dyspepsia, heartburn, torpid liver, dizziness, sick headache, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, loss of appetite, sallow skin, etc., when caused by constipation; and constipation is the most frequent cause of all of them.

DELANO DIARY

--Presbyterian preaching services at 11 a. m. S. S. 12:15. Y. P. S. C. E. 6:45. Next Sunday at the Swedish Mission Church.

—Flag Day is being observed to-day in commemoration of the adoption by the Cotinential Congress, June 14, 1777, of the Stars and Stripes as our national emblem. Leteverybody display the Star Spangled Banner.

--The Delano committee appointed to make an effort to secure the building of the new Hospital for Insane at this place met the committe appointed by the Governor, at St. Paul, on Tuesday, but could do little so early in the movement. Delano seems to stand as good a show of securing the prize as does any other applicant

—The Board of Education have employed Miss Lizzie Kimball, of Hamline as assistant in the High School. The corps of teachers is now full, as follows: Principal, Prof. Charles S. Hawker; Assistant, Miss Lizzie Kimball; Grammar Department, Miss Mary Hager; Intermediate, Miss Annie R. Quinn; Primary, Miss Irene Cheely.

—Several base ball enthusiasts from Delano, struck out for Chaska, Sunday morning about 5 o'clock, (an early hour for some of them to be out of bed,) to enjoy a game of their chosen sport. They had not been long on the road before rain began to fall, and most all day the water came down. We understand they arrived at Chaska about 10:30 A. M., but owing to the inclemency of the weather no game was had.

—On Monday afternoon Charley Mills undertook to drive Harry Youngs new pony hitched to a dog cart. The pony evidently had not been broken to drive single, and soon threw Charley out of the cart and went upSecondStreet from R. R. Aye. past the School House as fast as he could. The outfit was finaly captured and Del Young drove the pony back without the cart. The affair created considerable excitement for a few minutes.

—We took occasion to visit the primary room Monday forenoon, for a short time. Miss Cheeley says there are 58 scholars on the roll, most of them regular attendants. The room is nicely arranged with modern improved methods for learning the little folks in the ways of the world. We were forcibly struck with the outfit for instructing them in manufacturing. By means of pictures of cotton plantations, of mills and other machinery, and a cotton plant dried, in full bloom, they could easily learn the entire process. Many of their parents never have had so fine an opportunity to receive instruction on that and many other subjects.

--Between one and two o'clock on the morning of Tuesday, June 11, the fire alarm bell rang out upon the sleeping tympanums of our village calling them hastily to their doors and windows to behold the Presbyterian church, the oldest edifice of the kind in the village, standing out clear against the midnight sky, like some grand fireworks furnished for their amusement. The hose cart was run out and Mr Sosnick's building on the adjoining lot saved from a similiar doom. The church with the contents were insured for $900, and were all burned. The Rev. Webb held Episcopal services in the church the evening before the fire. There was no fire in the stove, and several agree that the lights were all extinguished before they left. There is no clue to the cause of the fire.

—Come to Delano for an old fashioned good time on the Fourth.

—Charles S. Hawker's graduating oration is good reading; on the first page.

—In another place in this paper appears by request the entire poem "Rock me to Sleep, Mother, Rock me to Sleep."

—If our Fourth of July committees would arrange to illuminate a couple of blocks with colored electric lights they would make a hit.

—We publish this week the graduating oration of Miss Grace O'Hair, of the Delano High School, delivered at the City Hall a week ago tonight.

—The entertainment in the City Hall on Tuesday evening given by the Young People's Christian Endeavor Society was quite a success. Although the evenining was rainy the program was gone through with, and the ice-cream enjoyed by many.

—Measles have made their appearance in Delano. The two boys of Mrs. Councilman, have been having them, since their return to this place. They evidently contracted them elsewhere and brought them here. It has been several years since an outbreak of measels in our village, and there is apt to be a number of cases. Usually among children it is not considered a very fatal disease; but where there are so many to have it as is the case where a town has been free from it so long as has our, there is liable to be some severe cases to deal with. Children should be looked after, and if feeling the slightest indisposition, suspicion should be aroused and they should not be allowed to run out in the rain to get cold. Among the first symptoms of measles is the general appearance of a severe cold, or bronchial attack. The patient is liable to be ill for about four days before the rash appears, so do not be thrown off your guard and allow your little ones to go uncared for until they have had it, as most of them who are susceptible probably will, in this town during the summer.

County Cullings.

Some of our readers are of the same opinion as ourselves, concerning the calling together of Wright County's democracy for the purpose of organizing themselves into a solid phalanx for active work in the next campaign. Some think it early, but why sit idly waiting the movements of other parties, and then, instead of profiting by their blunders, going in with some of them and disgusting all men of honorable and upright principles, of whatever party; driving from our own ranks the best men in them; instead of attracting others, repelling those who would join with us to carry our ticket through to victory, did it represent true manhood, right principle and honest purpose, rather than an ignoble bargain and barter and exchange for paltry place and pelf. Let Wright County Democrats come together, talk over the situation and agree upon the best plan to carry on an honest, fair, square fight for their principles. Let them assert their rights, and have a voice in the settlement of the question of what planks we want on our platform, and organize to elect men that can be depended on. Let them announce principles of which they are not ashamed, and go in to win.

LONG LAKE.

The Minnetonka Dairy at this place is completed and began manufacturing dairy products on the 13 inst., It promises to be a great success.

Rev. Wm. Campbell has returned from Pittsburg where he was attending the Presbyterian General Assembly as a representative from the Minneapolis Presbytery. He reports the meeting as having been an interesting occasion.

Herbert Archibald is now able to move about on crutches, despite the slow process of the knitting of the bone in his fractured limb; it being now nine weeks since his leg was broken by a runaway accident.

J. H. Lydiard failing to obtain the use of a portable engine to operate the irrigating process of his berry crop through the iron piping he put in position last fall for that purpose, was happily surprised by the copious rainfalls immediately following his fruitless efforts to use his irrigation apparatus.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

This is fine weather for crops to grow, we have had plenty of rain lately and no doubt this will help out our wild meadows, and make the weeds grow too, wheat and oats are looking fine and if nothing happens the farmers will harvest a big crop this season, but no doubt the prices will be rather low, but if we have bread and to spare it will be worth something. I never saw the potato crop look finer than it does at this present time; the pesty potato bugs are few in number, so far; hope they have gone to that land from whence no pilgrim ever returns. It is thought the rye crop will be ready to harvest by the first of next month.

About all the day schools have closed in our town. Last Friday there was a School picnic in Bryant's grove near the house of John Rader.

E. P. Mills has been working on Levi Bowen's new house.

Chas. Picharun, G. W. Bradford and E. K. Smith are all on the sick list.

Rev. O. R. Jenks of Minneapolis was in our town one day last week.

Last Sunday the rain came down in torrents and every thing got a good wetting.

W. C. Batdorf and H. L. Bowen and wife went over to Bergen one day last week.

W. W. Mills still has notions of Tennessee.

Walter Fisher of Howard Lake, was in our town one day last week.

Business at Lyndale in South part of our town seems to be quite good, the place consists of two stores, post office, creamery and a good deal of push.

Miss Rilla Hoisington expects to start for Dayton, Washington, this week. She goes to visit her sister Mrs. Wm. Bradford.

Woman's Column.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

"Saloon keeping is a leading industry. It leads its victims to the grave and to hell, and their wives and children to disgrace, proverty and miserry."

"Investment in the education of of the children is the best investment a State can make, it is the one investment that means economy in the maintenance of courts, jails, hospitals, workhouses and reformitories the one investment that guarantees stability to a nation founded on democratic principles."

"By the authority of the people." should be written over the door of every licensed saloon in the land. For without the consent, the permission, the authority of the people, these places of temptation could not be openen. "By authority of the people." explains why so many men are engaged in the business of killing the bodies and damning the souls of their fellow men. "By authority of the people," our citizens are debauched, our homes ruined and our republic endangered. Shame on the people.

That fruitful breeder of crime, the all-night saloon, has been made an object of the mayor's attack, and, as with the gambling houses, he is going about the performance in a very brisk and business-like way. There is justifiable hope that the midnight-closing ordinance will be enforced without regard to "pulls" or side door subterfuges. There is no doubt whatever that a great part of the criminal record of Chicago would never have entered history if the unlawful all-night saloon had not flourished. For the criminal classes, for burglars, thugs, highwaymen, bunko men and murderers it is the place of rendezvous and refuge. It is safe to say that if the new effort is sustained vigorously the burden of the work upon the police courts will be strikingly and almost immediately diminished.

More than all, however, the all-night saloon is essentially and literally unlawful. It is as unlawful as gambling.

The mayor will find that his efforts against the all-night saloon and against the gambling houses Wil help each other, just as the gamblers and the saloonkeepers have in the past created patronage for each other.—Chicago Record.

A tall, broad shouldered young man came into my office the other day to tell me a piece of good fortune which had come to him. He graduates in June from one of the smaller colleges of Illnois, and quite unexpectedly and without solicitation the board of that college has tendered him a place on the faculty for the coming year.

The news was too good to keep and I didn't wonder, as I remember my first acquaintance with him when he was working on a farm in the summer to pay his way through school the next winter. He craved knowledge and had a fairly clear perception of the advantages which culture gives, but had no definite plans for the future and didn't know what he wanted to do. He expected a struggle for a foothold among the successful toilers, but kept his muscle as well as his brain in most excellent working order by a clean life and plenty of hard work. He meant to make a man of himself, whatever he did.

When he got to the sciences in his course of study they took an amazing hold of him, especially biology. It awakened in him an intense thirst to know more. He grew enthusiastic and determined to follow on in that line, with a determination that will not be baffled. And just as he comes to the conclusion, lo! a way is opened and all is made possible; and as he stood before me with his eyes glistening and his mouth settled into a most resolute look I was glad, and I said so. Glad for the up-reaching soul in him; glad for the possibilities before him; glad for the world which is sadly in need of such aspiring young men; glad to believe that such ambition is often met by the helping hand where it is most needed.

Then I thought of a tramp with whom I ate breakfast not long ago. He slouched into the room and sat down with a lang dog expression. He said he couldn't get work though he was strong and well. Said it was no use; fate was against him, but he did not find any difficulty in getting enough to eat and a "feller" could sleep most anywhere these warm nights. He had good wages when he could get a job for he had a good trade, but he admitted that he had spent enough in drink and treating to have kept him through a considerable period of dull times.

Wherein lay the difference between these two young men? I made up my my mind that it was largely a matter of aspiration. The one had that in him which could not be satisfied with inferiority; the other "didn't care." The one made his chance, the other let his slip by; the one kept his head clear and his nerves steady, while the other gradually lost his grip.

Aspirations may come by inheritence, or it may develop out of circumstances, but the youth who has it not is most unfortunate. C. L. G.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.
Square Type.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine pedores especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $330.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher. 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the nuler sex, every one of whom should subscribe to emorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with e merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and u will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put u in the way of saving money by finding in one agazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of e whole family.

Are we Retrograding?

Only a generation ago the broad prairies and heavy timberlands of the Territory of Minnesota were peopled with Indians. The white man came among them and found them roaving about from place to place; Home being wherever they pitched their tents. The whites traded them articles of use, or ornament, for their valuable skins and furs, and whatever they could get from them. After a few years the red man was driven from our State; and the white race flourished amidst peace and plenty; had money in abundance with which to buy the necessaries and luxuries of life. How changed now. People who have had for years comfortable homes, have sold a little here, a little there of their lands; have become restless; their children have sought homes in cities; and those left behind are forced to exchange the products of the farm or the workshop for what they must have to live on. Authorities tell us that over half, of even the retail trade, is done without money. Are we drifting back to the days of Indians?

Tramps infest our country. They rove in bands, as roved the Indians a few decades ago. They have not even the products of the hunting grounds to exchange for eatables but must ask bread of those who have. What has brought this state of affairs upon our once prosperous state of Minnesota? Who is to blame? Does anyone, whether rich or poor, desire such a state of affairs? Can it be beneficial to anybody? Is it not a mistake of the people themselves? Can they not elect to office men in whom they have confidence to do their duty? Can they not think out for themselves that it is necessary to have money enough with which to do business? This downward tendency of our nation must be averted. People must learn to think and to act for themselves. They can see what is for their own individual interest is liable to be for the interest of the county and the state, and what is for the best interests of any state in the union is apt to satisfy the people of the union. People are not so different in different parts of the country as to require different laws on general questions of interest to all. Find out what is for your own best interest, measure your neighbors interest by that standard, and sight along the line to the farther most edge of our continent in any direction and see how you come out. Don't let some wily politician tell you the country will go to wreck if you don't vote to help somebody in Wall Street, or in Coxey's army, and coax you to vote against what your conscience tells you is for the interest of yourself, your family, your state and your country. But act the part of a free and independent American citizen, walk up to the ballot box knowing how you wish to vote, for what measures, for what men; and just how to vote to obtain the ends you desire. Let the majority of the people rule.

When the majority of the voters of this great country are behind the administration then can the administration move fearlessly on in the path of duty to all. But when parties numerous, and factions infest every party and uneasiness and distrust are to be seen on the countenances of all, then is it hard to govern. Let people read, think and act as individuals with minds of their own and not be led through promises of power, wealth, honor or other influence against their own conscientious convictions, then will our country again prosper.

From the "Hermitage."

While on a pleasure trip not long since around Minnetonka, we stopped at the "Hermitage," the history of which is familiar to many.

While at the "Hermitage" I was presented by our kind host with an exact copy of the original poem of Elizabeth (Akers) Allen,—"Rock me to sleep, mother, Rock me to sleep," which is a great favorite with so many and which is so seldom printed in its entirety. Thinking many would appreciate the opportunity of cutting it from a paper to preserve, I have asked the publisher of the GAZETTE to publish it for me and he has kindly consented to do so. C. I. C.

I.
Backward, flow backward, O full tide of years!
I am so sorry of toils and of tears—
Toil without recompense—tears all in vain,
Take them and give me my childhood again.
I have grown weary of dust and decay—
Weary of flinging my heart's wealth away—
Weary of sowing for others to reap:
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

II.
Hushed be my sighing—I see through the mist
Loved ones that cheer me, and silently list:
Hark! 'tis the hymning or angelic song,
Joyfully leading my sad heart along;
Treading the grass that now weeps on your grave,
Let me in spirit your sweet presence crave:
This will now cheer me, no more will I weep,
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

III.
Clouded and sabled, there come with my age.
Records of sadness, to soil the fair page—
Footprints of sorrow to blot it all o'er,
Thinking of those on the echoless shore.
Only, I see you look down on me now,
While humbly kneeling, at his cross I bow:
Come then and dry up the tears I must weep,
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

IV.
As stars in the day are concealed by the light,
And darkness unveils them alone to the sight,
So sleeping I see you, unseen when awake,
And welcome, thrice welcome, is sleep for your sake.
Soft are my slumbers, a glory of beams,
Announcing your coming, illumines my dreams:
Visit me nightly, and when I would weep,
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

V.
Backward, turn backward, then time in your flight,
Make me a child again just for to night.
Mother, come back from the echoless shore,
Take me again to your heart as of yore,
Kiss from my forehead the furrows of care,
Smooth the few silver threads out of my hair;
Over my slumbers your loving watch keep,
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

VI.
Over my heart in bright days that are flown,
No love like mother love ever has shown—
No other worship abides and endures,
Faithful, unselfish, and patient like yours;
None like a mother can charm away pain
From the sick soul and the world-weary brain;
Slumber's soft calms o'er my heavy lids creep,
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

VII.
Tired of the hollow, the base, the untrue,
Mother, dear mother, my heart calls for you:
Many a summer the grass has grown green,
Blossomed and faded our faces between.
Yet with strong yearning and passionate pain
Long I to-night for your presence again:
Come from the silence, so long and so deep,
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

VIII.
Mother, dear mother, the days have been long,
Since I last hushed to your lullaby song:
Sing it, and unto my soul it shall seem,
Manhood's long years have been only a dream,
Clasped to your heart, in a loving embrace,
With your long lashes just sweeping my face
Never hereafter to sigh or to weep,
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

IX.
Come, let your brown hair, just lighted with gold,
Fall on your shoulders again as of old—
Let it fall over my forehead to night,
Shading my faint eyes away from the light;
For with its sunny-edged shadows once more
Fondly will throng the sweet visions of yore,
Lovingly, softly, its charmed billows sweep—
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

X.
Angelic mother, now tenderly smile,
While the fond seraphs my soul shall beguile;
Shed o'er my pathway the spirit world's light,
To guide and to cheer me, all through the night,
I have grown weary of life's changing tide,
Weary of weeping for hopes that have died;
Weary of climbing life's hill-side so steep—
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

XI.
Tired of earth's mockery, and the world's strife,
Tired of penances paid for this life—
Growing more weary of heartless display—
Weary of world's night, I long for the day;
Let then your spirit encompass me now,
While on your bosom in silence I bow,
Tenderly watching my thoughts as they sweep,
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

XII.
Thought cannot linger around the cold tomb,
Sweet spirit faces will break through its gloom,
And when I wipe the fresh tear-drops away,
Clouds turn to brightness, and roseate day
Breaks on my vision—then smiling again
Peace spreads her gentle wings softly to reign.
Voices celestial forbid me to weep:
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

XIII.
Stilled are my tumults, I see in the sky
Loved ones whose splendors have drowned every sigh.
Faces familiar of friends here no more
Fairer and fonder than ever before—
Glorified figures that stoop to caress,
Mighty to comfort, and mighty to bless;
Bright is the vision—no more can I weep,
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

XIV.
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to rest;
Calmed with your smiling the storm in my breast
Stilled are the sorrows you came to allay;
Taught me again as of old how to pray:
Contentions without, contentions within,
Battlings with doubt, and temptation, and sin,
Ceased with your presence, I can not now weep:
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

XV.
Thus with my loved ones I'll watch by your side,
Nor weep once again, whatever betide.
Waiting all calmly the coming of those
Holding the signet of death's cold repose:
Farewell to sorrow—farewell to all ill—
Whispers are stealing, sad heart be now still—
With m dear mother, kind watch I will keep
She charges the angels to rock me to sleep.

THE Republican League meeting at Cincinnati elected Gen. McAlpin President of the League Clubs. They fail to express themselves on live questions.

DELANO is still in the field for the Fourth Insane Asylum. The State has oppropriated $15,000 for the purchase of a site. This will almost buy sufficient land in our neighborhood. And located as we are we can find a farm between the Soo and Great Northern R. R. which are only four miles apart, that would be convenient for the cities as well as a large portion of the central part of the state, and only 38 miles from St. Paul.

John McGary Again.

Most all the papers an a good majority of the people are preaching about the money (silver) question, they will take a text anywhere to prove their solution of the question. Some say there has been an over production of silver, and the bullion has had a heavy drop. Yet a silver dollar goes for a dollar; ane some of these fellows that are howling so much against free coinage would be glad if they could even rub two silver dollars together. And they say we have had an over production of wheat too. If every man, woman, and child in this fair land of ours was properly fed, how much of a surplus of wheat would this country have? Not enough to fatten a goose. They say nothing about our increased population. We see by the papers that Carnagie Steel company will advance the wages to their employes 10 per cent; saying that the outlook justifies it. This is only a made up tale. Times do not justify it any more than they did a year ago.

Wheat went up, what for? for speculation.

After they have bought up all the wheat and there is only a few more bushels in the country among the farmers, then up goes wheat and flower.

Why Independence Day is Celebrated on July Fourth.

Did you ever hear how it happened we celebrate July fourth rather than some later day? For days the members of Congress had differed over the terms of the Declaration. As the hot summer weeks progressed, windows were opened, much to the delight of the mosquitoes and flies of a neighboring stable. The stockinged calves of congressional legs were assailed daily by the diminutive combatants, until at last the persistency of the most stubborn member was worn out on the fourth day of July. "Now that the struggle was over the members became hilarious in their good nature." John Hancock dashed down his great signature in such shape "that George the Third might read it without his spectacles." "Now we must hang together," it was remarked. "Yes," said Franklin, "or we shall hang separately."—From "Colonial Philadelphia," in Demorest's Magazine for July.

Our National Sin.

"Many people claim that there is more drinking under the license system than there would be if we had free whiskey." Thus writes a Union Signal reader who herself takes the stand "that drunkenness would not decrease with free whiskey," and who wants to know our opinion on the subject. We hold it to be a self-evident fact that as long as we have whiskey at all—whisky free or whisky bound—there will be no decrease of drinking or of drunkenness.

Then, both systems being equally ineffective as far as drinking is concerned, the question comes, which of the two should be adopted by a government which regards the liquor business as a "necessary evil"—license or no license, tax or no-tax, revenue or no revenue or a regulation system that that doesn't regulate, or a policy touches not the unclean thing? Surely a Christian government, if it does not touch it to abolish it, would do well to keep its hands off it altogether? If it confesses to an inability to crush the evil out of existence it can at least refuse to lend it a helping hand. If it cannot kill the monster at a blow it can at least refuse to foster and to nourish it.

As has been well said, our great national sin is not drunkenness, but the legalizing of drunkard-making. The great evil of high license is not that it fails to decrease drinking, but that it gives protection to the traffic and blinds the public mind to the fact that "revenue" derived from this source brings with it a curse, which is felt in every tissue and fibre of the nation's social and political organism. If this government—the people—would sever its connection with the rum power, if it would refuse to share its blood money or to "justify the wicked for reward," even if it should take no aggressive steps toward its abolishment, we believe it would not be long before the government—the people—would come to view the liquor traffic from the standpoint of the Prohibitionist, of the Christian temperance man and woman—as an unnecessary evil, an evil the overthrow of which means the adjustment of many a difficulty of these times which are now so painfully out of joint.

The Influence of Art.

Fine art as opposed to the useful arts, agriculture, navigation, medicine or the industrial operations for supplying the common necessities of life, includes painting and poetry.

The artist and the poet aim at the same great end, and that is, to give pleasure. But the kind of pleasure is peculiar and circumscribed. There are many of our enjoyments that no artis would ever think of attempting to provide. The various sensual indulgences are the best examples of contrast to the pleasures of art. There do exist objects that can give us pleasure as their primary end that have no disagreeable or revolutionary accompaniments and whose enjoyment is not restricted to a single mind. For instance the landscape, the glowing sun, the song of the lark, the flowers of the field and garden are an unlimited source of pleasure.

Just as the poet puts his thoughts into words so does the artist embody his ideas in form. But as all ideas can not be put into words, art is in one sense a human necessity and the artist is its interpreter.

Ask the artist, ask the poet what it is in his pursuit that absorbs him and he will reply that in all things and circumstances of existence he traces a hidden life, that if he studies with so deep devotion the forms and features of the material world it is because in them he reads a language of character to which the depth of his own nature responds. The uiverse seems his own, overwhelming him by its sublimity, encouraging him with its beauty and so he loves to write or paint these things that he may clothe in visible and enduring forms the deep thoughts which all these things suggest to him and to interpret to men who have less insight than he, these signs of power and beauty, wisdom and beneficence which the Creator's fingers have left traced and tinted, engraved and stamped on everything.

Art is no light for those who really wish to understand its mysteries. The artist needs the mechanics skilll as much as the poets fire to produce the things which he ideally conceives as real and to bring them within reach of comprehension. The language of painting is simple and may be understood by everybody. Not so, poetry. This is what gives paintings their charm and power. On the material side they may be considered as products of skill and on their spiritual side as interpreters of the intellect, emotions and passions of men. So it is that art approaches so closely to our affections. It may sound like a mere poetical expression to say that art has a soul. But it is as plain as the plainest prose for just as in ourselves it is the life of the soul that gives value to our outward form so it is that mysterious life that gleams from beneath the surface of the painter's art that gives it its value.

The saying that a poet is born, not made, in its strictest sense is not true. If there be exceptions, such as Homer, Dante, or our modern poet Shakespere, beings endowed with genius to create at once a language or literature still history records thousands of names of other men who created the philosophy, the science, and the arts of the world whose trust was only in study and self-help as the one safe maxim of success in life. The same is true of artists. Our modern painters and sculptors feel the enthusiasm of their genius by a life long study among the models and suggestions of the old masters and of beautiful and inexhaustlbe nature.

Although the poet or artist may be a genius he must attend the school kept by nature. He needs a skillful hand, a mind in its purity of health, and a strong body. Clear and fresh is the atmosphere that invigorates the artists life, breathing health into all his impressions, thoughts, and works. Morbid humor and weak sentiment mar them, for just as the strong man's hand touches an instrument of music with the surest delicacy so the artist poet or sculptor with a firm touch as tender as it is strong, is best able to stir to anger or melt to tears.

What good can literature do? What good can art do? Good literature can mould or form our characters, broaden our mental faculties, and elevate us to a higher plane of humanity. Books wind themselves into our hearts, the poet's verse slips into the current of our blood. We read them when old. Through books we are enabled to enter the presence of the greatest minds that have ever lived, and to become participators in their thoughts. The morals and character of a people can be judged by the literature they read just as a boy can be judged by his associates. The poetry of Dante inspired the lives of the Italian nation and accordingly influenced their entire history. Many of our modern writers have a subtle and powerful influence over our lives. If their writings thus influence us why should not the portraits of those whom they describe have a like effect? Suppose the portrait of a noble man be placed on the wall where you can see it daily, every time you look at the picture it reminds you of his noble character. You read his life and looking at his features you feel as if you knew him better and were being silently molded and influenced by him. It would certainly make a good impression on you, for the admiration of great men or women, living or dead, naturally evokes imitation of them. The portrait painter may be likened to the biographer. While the biographer writes about the character of a person and records the events of his life, the artist portrays that which is too intangible for words. For a persons portrait reflects his whole life.

The works of art which affect us the most powerfully are those that suggest rather than define and leave our thoughts room to expand. In the cold mechanical routine of life that necessity may have forced upon them our people need heart relief as much as rest of mind or body. They have souls to satisfy, sympathies that crave response and to such art offers as nothing else can the resources of cheering and congenial enjoyments. But of all benefits which fine art has rendered to mankind the most valuable help is that by which it evoked and cultivated the spirit born faculty of the imagination. It does not matter in what way art may be regarded; whether for its practice or as an element of education or enjoyment there are few things that open the way to as many resources of pleasure or benefit. Art is at once a testimony and an appeal, a witness whose irrisistible force obliges us to recognize it as an element of refinement, and an appeal, ever sounding in our ears, to which we can not refuse to listen.

Among Our Exchanges.

The Anderson bill needs but one thing to make it a law—a majority of the votes of the people of Minnesota at the next general election. On us of the northern counties lies the task of getting that majority. Every man of us owes to his fellow-men his best efforts to that end. The railroads pay yearly some $800,000 of tax. The railroads own in Minnesota some $235,000,000 worth of property. If they paid taxes on it all, as all men else must, they would pay $4,700,000 of annual taxes. There, fellow suffers, from this monstrous injustice of untaxed railroad lands, is the text. From it preach to every friend, relative and acquaintance you have in all the state from now till election day.—Aitkin Age.

Woman's Column.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

One of the most fearless papers in the nation is the Ram's Horn, an independent religious weekly published in this city. It is widely circulated and more frequently quoted than any other religious publication. Last week it had a ringing editorial on prohibition which is given below in part:

Shame on sixty million people that they continue to put their great seal of authorty and approval on that demnable institution which is pictured in this week's cartoon! Shame on fifteen million voters that they hold open the doors to that viperous den where their sons and daughters are daily exchanging joy for sadness, virtue for disgrace, and honor, ambition and immortal blessedness for dishonor, despair and everlasting misery.

Why in the name of religion; why in the name of reason; why in the name of policy and common sense, do we allow rum to trail its serpent blight up and down our land, over and under our government, in and through our homes?

Its bulwark is the saloon. This we know to be a curse. We treat it as an outlaw already, for we license it. We do not license flour mills nor candy factories. Upon no other industry do we lay a restraining imposition. Why upon rum? Because we know it is a public enemy, and if it must forage off our vitals it must render partial tribute.

What a weak, cowardly, criminal relation is this govermental coufederacy with rum! Would we build forts and sell to England the right to destroy them to give her guns practice? Would we plant forests and sell to pirates and marauders the right to despoil the trees if they paid us only for the bark?

Why build homes, those most sacred of altars, and exchange them for the wherwithal to build almshouses and jails?

If our moral natures are too numb to perceive this iniquity, are our eyes of shrewd sense too dim to distinguish the folly of throwing away dollars for drakes? In other words, subtract if you will every heartache and every sigh and every wreck of soul for which the liquor traffic is responsible and cast up accounts in coin. Does anybody doubt that the despicable infamy costs thrice what it pays in license; costs in public jails, in poorhouses, in police protection, to protect it and to pursue its victims?

The saloon is already outlawed. Now why treat it as a favored convict whom we let loose for a consideration? Stop that bargain fellow citizens, and stop it now!

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the gentler sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and you will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of a whole family.

IN France, if a structural defect in a bicycle causes an injury to the person using it, the manufacturer is legally accountable for damages.

THE strength of the bicycle craze in London is indicated by the fact that the authorities, after long resistance, have been compelled to open Hyde park to the wheelers

THE lace and ribbons imported in this country, one has figured out, cost one-half as much as the support to all the churches in the country. But lace and ribbons are also means of grace.

THERE are at present 3,000 languages spoken by the inhabitants of the globe, whose religious convictions are divided between 1,000 different confessions of faith. The number of males is nearly equal to the females.

A CHICAGO alderman proposes to fine women who appear on the streets in bloomers. And now if the women enact some penalty on Chicago aldermen who appear on the streets in liquor things will be evened up a little.

THE British government declines to give its adherence to a plan to compel American commercial travelers in England to pay licenses. It fears that this country might make reprisals, in which case both countries would suffer alike.

A BOSTON woman has given $250,000 to found an emergency hospital and has made a provision that her name shall remain unknown. There is true charity in such a gift, but the act has excited a curiosity that will never rest until she is found out.

THIS is still the country of bread-winners. The census bulletin devoted to labor shows that in 1890 there were 22,735,661 people engaged in gainful pursuits in this country, which was 47 per cent. of the total number of persons over 10 years of age and one-third the entire population.

THE New Science Review says the richness of the African gold fields is proving a surprise even to those who have looked most optimistically upon the dark continent as the most hopeful source of supply of this metal. It is believed by experts that the Witwatersand gold fields alone will yield $1,000,000,000 in the next twenty-five years.

PROF. CROUCH, of "Kathleen Mavourneen" fame, remembers Queen Victoria as a girl of 7 or 8 years. He was at that time in the British royal household as a 'cellist in the band. This band was abolished by the reform bill passed in the early thirties. Prof. Crouch played the 'cello at the queen's coronation. He came to the United States in 1849.

THOSE Danbury, Conn., girls who boycotted all the young men who were not total abstainers are beginning to regard boycotting as unconstitutional, since the girls of other towns have begun to smile on their beaux. They are talking moral suasion and will probably follow the old rule of marrying drunkards to reform them. The boycott, constitutional or not, would be better in the long run.

THE late trouble between the United States and Spain, growing out of the assault made upon the American merchant ship Allianca by a Spanish gunboat, has been settled. Spain has made a frank apology, expressing the fullest disavowal of the conduct of the commander of its gunboat. The reply is entirely satisfactory, and pleasant relations between us and the Dons are now restored and will continue until some other hot-headed Spaniard ruffles up the feathers of the bird of freedom.

DURING the whole war in which the Japanese completely overran the northern provinces of China and reduced that empire of 400,000,000 population to humble submisssion, only 590 Japanese were killed in battle—less than were frequently killed in a skirmish during our late civil war. The pictures of terrific battles and stubborn fighting which were cabled by the correspondents during the progress of the struggle must have been painted from the imagination. It is quite evident that those orientals don't know what serious fighting is.

PHYSICIANS in Cincinnati have discovered a negro boy, Alfonso Smith, 12 years of age, who has the most remarkable head known to be attached to a human person. It is 36 inches in diameter and weighs 46 pounds, 3 pounds more than the balance of his body. The boy has never been able to sit up. He has had smallpox, whooping cough, measles and typhoid fever. The physicians are unable to account for his abnormal-sized head. They think if he lives to reach his thirteenth year that he will live on indefinitely. His mother weighs 380 pounds and his father 130.

THE Massachusetts state commission on the unemployed has been studying the tramp question and recommends that every town provide accommodations for wayfarers, and in return therefor exact work. But the commission confesses that indiscriminate charity is the greatest source of encouragement to tramps, and so long as it exists there can be little done to better the present condition. There are many deserving men out of employment, and some have become wanderers searching for employment, but the great army of tramps is made up of men who are on the road from choice, not necessity.

SILVERITES MEET.

Doings of the Great National Rally at Memphis.

Full Text of the Platform and Resolutions—Isham G. Harris and Others Threaten to Secede—Tillman Makes a Speech.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 14.—Friends of silver, representing twenty-six states of the south and west, began a two days' convention in this city yesterday. Fifteen hundred delegates, comprising democrats, republicans and populists, filled the lower floor and a large portion of the balcony at the Auditorium when the gathering was called to order. On the stage, besides the officers of the Central Bimetallic league of Memphis, under whose auspices the gathering was held, were with very few exceptions all the leading advocates of the free coinage of silver in the United States.

Senator Turpie Presides.

A permanent organization was effected with Senator Turpie, of Indiana, as chairman, and addresses were delivered by that gentleman and Alexander Delmar, of California, in the afternoon, and by Congressman Sibley, of Pennsylvania; C. S. Thomas, of Denver, and Aaron Wolcott, of Indiana, in the evening.

Thursday's Proceedings.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 15.—Notwithstanding the cloud that for a moment threatened to darken the horizon of the free silver convention of the southern and western states in the shape of the secession of a number of prominent democrats from the convention because of the advocacy of the abolition of party lines by one or two of the speakers, the end was harmony and there was no fight over the resolutions after they were read to the convention, for the reason that they carefully avoided any reference calculated to produce discord. The resolutions advocate the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, declare that international cooperation is not necessary, and attribute the recent hard times entirely to the demonitization of silver. Although nothing was said in the resolutions about the abolition of party lines as proposed by Sibley, Stewart and others, the speakers of the day, almost without exception, took care to assert their democracy and to repudiate any affiliation with either republicans or populists. The resolutions follow:

The Platform.

"Silver and gold coin have in all ages constituted the money of the world, were the money of the fathers of the republic, the money of history and of the constitution.

"The universal experience of mankind has demonstrated that the joint use of both silver and gold coin as money constitutes the most stable standard of value and that the full amount of both metals is necessary as a medium of exchange.

"The demonetization of either of these historic metals means an appreciation from the value of money, a fall in the prices of commodities, a diminution of the profits of legitimate business, a continuing increase in the burden of debts, a withdrawal of money from the channels of trade and industry where it no longer yields a safe and sure return and its idle accumulation in the banks and the great money centers of the country.

"There is no health or soundness in a financial system under which a hoarded dollar is productive of increase to its possessor while an invested dollar yields a constantly diminishing return, and under which fortunes are made by the accretions of idle capital or destroyed by a persistent fall in the price of commodities and a persistent dwindling in the margin of profits in almost every branch of useful industry. Such a system is a premium upon sloth and a penalty upon industry, and such a system is that which the criminal legislation of 1873 has imposed upon this country.

Tested and Approved.

"The bimetallic standard of silver and gold has behind it the experience of ages and has been tested and approved by the enlightened and deliberate judgment of mankind. The gold standard is a departure from the established policy of the civilized world, with nothing to commend but twenty-two years of depression and disaster to the people and extraordinary accumulation of wealth in the hands of the few.

"There are some facts bearing upon this question recognized and admitted by all candid men, whether advocates of bimetallism or of the single gold standard. Among these is the fact that the very year that marked the change from the bimetallic to the single gold standard is the very year that marked the change from a condition of rising prices, large profits, general contentment and great prosperity, to a condition of falling prices, diminishing profits, insecurity of investments, unemployed labor and a heavy depression in all branches of trade and industry. It is not a matter of dispute, even among the honest advocates of the gold standard, that general prosperity came to an end with the destruction of the bimetallic system and that hard times, falling prices, idle workingmen and widespread depression came in with the gold standard and prevails to-day wherever the gold standard has been adopted.

A Blunder, If Not a Crime.

"Every international monetary conference that has been called every demand in this country and Europe for an international agreement to reestablish the bimetallic standard, is a confession that the demonetization of the system was a blunder, if not a crime, that its consequences have been disastrous and that the conditions that it has wrought are full of menace and of peril.

"The logic of facts establishes beyond intelligent question that the destruction of silver as primary money by a conspiracy of selfish interests is the cause of the widespread depression and suffering that began with the gold standard. There can be no restoration of prosperity, no permanent relief from prevailing conditions until the great cause has been removed by a complete restoration of silver to its proper place as a money metal, equal with gold.

How to Secure a Stable Standard.

"We believe in a stable value; we believe least of all in an appreciating standard; it is only through the practical operation of bimetallism that a stable standard of value can be secured. A standard constituted of money constantly increasing in value is not a sound, a single nor a stable standard but a constantly changing standard. The effect of gold monometallism is to establish one standard for the creditor and another for the debtor; and there can be no more dishonest monetary system than that which gives short measure to the borrower and long measure to the lender. Under the policy prevailing prior to 1873 there can be no violent change in the relative value of the two metals, for a rise in value of one metal is counteracted by a decreased demand, and a fall in value by an increased demand. Under the operation of this beneficent law a stable relation was maintained between them in spite of the most extreme changes in relative productions. From the first period of our history up to 1873 the right of the debtor to choose whether he should pay his debts in silver or gold coin was always recognized. The subsequent policy has been to transfer this right to the creditor, thus tending to constantly increase the value of the dearer metal and destroy the party between them.

Coinage Free and Unlimited.

"Believing that it is absolutely necessary to reverse this iniquitous and ruinous policy, we therefore resolve:

"That we favor the immediate restoration of silver to its former place as a full legal tender standard money, equal with gold, and the free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold at the ratio of 16 to 1 and upon terms of exact equality.

"That while we should welcome the cooperation of other nations we believe that the United States should not wait upon the pleasure of foreign governments or the consent of foreign creditors but should themselves proceed to reverse the 'grinding process' that is destroying the prosperity of the people and should lead by their example the nations of the earth.

"That the rights of the American people, the interests of American labor and the prosperity of American industry have a higher claim to the consideration of the people's lawmakers than the greed of foreign creditors, or the avaricious demands made by idle holders of idle capital. The right to regulate its own monetary system in the interests of its own people is a right which no free government can barter, sell or surrender. This reserved right is a part of every bond, of every contract and of every obligation. No creditor or claimant can set up a right that can take precedence over a nation's obligations to promote the welfare of the masses of its own people. This is a debt higher and more binding than all other debts, and one which is not only dishonest but treasonable to ignore.

Result of Existing Policy.

"Under the financial policy that now prevails we see the land filled with idle and discontented workingmen and an ever-growing army of tramps, men whom lack of work and opportunity have made outcasts and beggars. At the other end we find that a few thousand families own one-half the wealth of the country. The centralization of wealth has gone hand in hand with the spread of poverty. The pauper and the plutocrat are twin children of the same vicious and unholy system. The situation is full of menace to the liberties of the people and the life of the republic. The issue is enfranchisement or hopeless servitude. Whatever the power of money can do by debauchery and corruption to maintain its grasp on the lawmaking power will be done. We therefore appeal to the plain people of the land with perfect confidence in their patriotism and intelligence to arouse themselves to a full sense of the peril that confronts them and defend the citadel of their liberties with a vigilance that shall neither slumber nor sleep."

An Executive Committee.

The committee on resolutions also introduced a resolution which, like the platform, was unanimously adopted, providing for the appointment of an executive committee consisting of one member from each state to advance the interests of bimetallism, call a national conference, etc.

Think Sibley Too Radical.

The fight over the principles laid down by Mr. Sibley in his speech Wednesday night began early in the day, with no less a man than Senator Isham G. Harris at the head of the faction advocating simon pure democracy. With him were M. C. Galloway, of Memphis, formerly editor of the Appeal, and Gov. Clarke, of Arkansas, besides many others of political prominence in their own parts of the country. These men all said that they would secede from the convention if it indorsed Mr. Sibley's radical sentiments. Mr. Sibley said in his speech that the time had come to abolish the party in favor of the principle, and it was to this idea that the democrats took exception. They declared the democratic party was strong enough in itself to champion the cause of silver, and they did not propose to turn over the convention to the populists and republicans, although these latter were welcome to the ranks of free silver. The fight spread to the room where the committee on resolutions was holding its deliberations, but fortunately it got no further. Nevertheless the compromise was absolute. The platform as it was originally intended it should not, the call being strictly nonpartisan, contains no mention of any party. The convention adjourned Thursday night after speeches by W. J. Bryan, A. J. Warner and State Senator Wolcott, of Indiana

Tillman Talks.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, made a speech somewhat on the sensational order. A portion of his remarks follows:

"I am not here to discuss this question in any partisan way, as you will find out directly. I am a silver democrat, but Mr. Sibley and Mr. Thomas went too far in the announcement of their belief that the democratic party was hopelessly split; though true it takes a very florid imagination to believe that it is possible for them to elect a president next year, and that their party will disintegrate and that we will form a new one. Now, I am not going that far, but I am going a long way toward it, and I am going to tell you why. There are some things I can say that no other man dare say. I have been that way a good while in my politics, boys, and that is the reason people in South Carolina like me.

Hard Words for Cleveland.

"What is the condition of the democratic party? Now, this has no direct bearing on the silver question, and you will see it directly. What is that condition? As a democrat I am almost ashamed to catalogue it or speak of it in an assembly mostly democratic. The president whom we elected by a vote almost larger than that received by any of his predecessors has betrayed the party. There is no use to deny that fact. I use the good old honest language, you know, and I believe he is first cousin to Benedict Arnold in politics, for if that platform on which he was nominated and elected, and which he accepted without any dodging (I did not see in his letter of acceptance any sign of dodging it) meant anything it meant that silver should have the same access to the mints of the United States as gold. They put in some muddle about 'parity,' and they have gone and killed poor silver on that plea of parity. When this was done and we tried through the income tax to get back some of the money wrung out of the people the supreme court, after one justice had slept on it and considered it, reversed itself in three weeks and declared the law unconstitutional. Did they buy him?

"I don't say so. I think, like Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Carlisle, that he is the victim of his environment. He could not stand the social pressure of the Rothschilds and Belmonts and other millionaires, who eat on his mahogany and invite him out occasionally.

"Oh, they charge me with being a new firebrand, preaching sectionalism because I mention the south and west as against the east and middle and New England states. If there is sectionalism in that it is the sectionalism of poverty and wrong on one side against robbery and rascality on the other, and the day is going to come very soon, for come it must, when you cannot stand this much longer, when there will be a day of reckoning with these men. We will have constitutional amendments enough to give us an income tax, and it will be a graduated income tax, such as will not only tax the income above a certain amount a reasonable per cent. on it, but as it goes up the tax itself will go up, and whenever a man gets above a certain amount we will take all it. [Applause.]

"'Socialism!' they will cry. 'Hear that socialist from South Carolina! Hear that anarchist—that agrarian!' It is simply the damming up of the water of indignation, and when it breaks loose it will wash things beyond all reasonable bounds."

Senator Stewart Speaks.

At the opening of the morning session Senator Stewart, of Nevada, was introduced, and spoke in part as follows:

"The object lessons of the last three years show that the American people are face to face with concentrated capital, the enemy which destroyed all previous civilizations. A shrinking volume of money as compared with population and business produces falling prices, paralyzes industry and compels the producers of wealth to pawn their property to continue the struggle against impending fate.

"Silver was demonetized by the republican party and leaders of that party have tried to keep it demonetized. The great mass of the democratic party favored the repeal of the act of 1873, but Cleveland thwarted their desires. The political cyclone of 1893 was caused by republicans who sailed with the wind from money kings. The people, however, have now taken the matter into their own hands and after twenty years of betrayal will seek those who will carry out their desires. They now know that every man who qualifies his determination to fight for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 by the United States alone is an enemy of the cause. All they demand is the 16 to 1 statutes of 1834 and 1837. There were no 'ifs' or 'ands' about those statutes. There are none in the creed of the true bimetallist. The policy of the enemy to impoverish the masses is now well understood. One more gold president might do the work and destroy the foundation of republican institutions, which is independence and prosperity of the people. The only difference between the republican leaders and Cleveland was that he did openly what the hypocrites do secretly."

Favors Graded Assessments.

CHICAGO, June 18.—The supreme lodge A. O. U. W. at its session here has decided to report in favor of legislation being allowed in grand lodges on the subject of graded assessments. It will require a two-thirds vote of the full membership of the supreme lodge to pass.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Coal.

It is well known that innumerable samples of coal have been brought to Duluth during the past year for analysis and to be used to interest capital in developing the finds. Not many people are aware of the location from whence the samples came and although a considerable amount of detective work and spying has been done by explorers and others in the vicinity of Tower and all the north part of the state, no one has been able to detect the source of the packsack loads of specimens which have appeared.

The Little Forks country, lying about 40 miles west of Tower and north of the Mesaba range, has been the scene of considerable coal exploratory work this spring, and with some very satisfactory results. Gardner, of Superior, and others have invested considerable money in explorations in townships 60 and 22—the exact location having never been divulged either by Mr. Gardner or any of his crew. Thos. Burke, foreman of the work, is the last man to appear from the Little Fork country, with about 40 pounds of coal taken from a testpit in which a well defined vein was encountered. Mr. Burke makes the assertion that within a year a considerable amount of coal will have been discovered and bases his statements on the recent discoveries made by himself and crew. He also says the greatest care is exercised in keeping the location of the finds a secret.

Further north also drift coal specimens have frequently been displayed by trappers and Indians, and although it was never doubted that beds of coal existed there, no one has been wise enough to locate them. Opinion generally put them somewhere on the southwest shore of the Lake of the Woods, as the greatest share of the numerous specimens obtained came from that direction.

Fastidious Hayward.

Harry T. Hayward who is now awaiting the date of his execution, in the county jail, does not relish the idea of being hanged with a second hand scaffold and rigging. He has read in the papers, that the machine likely to be used upon him is a very plebian contrivance, manufactured somewhere in the backwoods, and traded about from the family of one sheriff to another, until its record is full of worm holes and bad odor. Mr. Hayward thinks that he should at least be given a new scaffold, and in this he will be accommodated, for Sheriff Holmberg does not purpose to have any old time relic serve him in such an important matter.

Hayward has given the sheriff instruction in regard to testing the rope. He wants the sheriff to test it with a good weight.

"I would prefer a live one, he said, "and would suggest Blixt as a good one to test it on."

As the Blixt idea was out of the question, he asked that a 300 pound drop weight would be proper, and then he wanted the other end used for himself, so as to be sure that the strain in the test had not created a defect.

News in Brief.

At the state firemen's convention at Moorhead the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Thos. E. Smith, Duluth; first vice president, C. A. Langford, Little Falls; second vice president, H. M. Young, Chaska; secretary, R. O. Strong, St. Paul; treasurer, F. E. Joy, Stillwater; statistician, O. L. Cutter, Anoka.

Minnesota does not stand first in spring wheat acreage this year, but well up in the front rank. The average is 99.5, and Minnesota's percentage is 100, Wisconsin's being 107; Nebraska's, 101; North and South Dakota's, 100. But in condition Minnesota outstrips all the states, her percentage being 109, that of North Dakota 99, and that of South Dakota 98. The average spring wheat condition at this time is very high, being 97.1.

D., and Sibley, Iowa, to the number of about 1,000. The camp-fire was held in a large tent on the camp grounds west of Worthington.

Folders are already out advertising the fair of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society,, to be held at Hamline Sept. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, and 14. Entries for the races will close on Saturday, June 15.

The National Association of Train Dispatchers held their annual meeting at Minneapolis.

It is claimed now that the mad dog scare at St. Paul is without foundation.

The Duluth police are satisfied that there is an organized scheme on foot to victimize the merchants by means of forged checks on the big lumber companies, ostensibly for wage payment. A number of these checks have turned up of late.

The Pine Tree Lumber Company, at Little Falls employs 600 men and the Hennepin paper mills, 60. About 300,000 feet of lumber are sawn daily and the annual paper output is 2,000 tons.

The Polk and Norman county fair will be held on Sept. 18, 19 and 20.

Attorney General Childs alleges that the Tontine Savings association of Minneapolis is a swindling concern and a gambling scheme and has applied to the court to have its business wound up, for the appointment of a receiver and for an order restraining the officers of the association from performing any of their functions.

The elevator of Parsons Bros., at Dodge Center, burst and about 1,800 or 2,000 bushels of wheat ran out upon the ground.

The barn of W. J. Hover, a mail carrier of St. Cloud, was burned, together with two horses, carriages and mail cart. Loss about $700.

Lightning struck the house of B. J. Duntley, Crookston, knocking Mrs. Duntley senseless.

Claude Williams, of Rochester, was accidentally shot in the groin while playing the role of a captured horse thief at the annual meeting of the Viola Anti-Horse Thief Society. His injury is serious.

Mrs. Carnegie, wife of David Carnegie, of Argyle, was struck by lightning and instantly killed.

Thieves entered the West side bakery, at Anoka, taking some $20. Arlberg's harness shop was also entered and $10 stolen.

The Coat Flower Marks You Down as an Aristocrat or a Parvenu.

The man who knows no longer refers to the flower in his buttonhole as a boutonniere, but as a coat flower. A Philadelphia florist is authority for this. "And, by the way," he remarked, on Saturday afternoon, during a breathing spell between customers, "to one who is interested in studying human nature no better opportunity could be afforded than right here. You can usually size up a man's position and taste by the flowers he wears," says the Philadelphia Record. "Take this afternoon as an instance. About an hour ago three young men came in and noisily called for chrysanthemums. They selected the largest ones I had and with much boisterous conduct followed their buttonhole bouquets up the street. They were evidently college students. Soon afterward came in an actor and asked for a big bunch of violets for his coat. The violets would have been suitable for his wife. Then a member of the Philadelphia club called and said: 'Please put a few white carnations in my coat.' How much more refined was the last of the three tastes."

SETTING THE TABLE FOR TWO.

Up on the hill in a stately hall,
Servants are moving to and fro;
Solemnly wait, or in voices low
Answer the white-haired master's call.
Beautiful linen, and china frail,
Costly dishes of silver and gold;
Flowers, whose radiant beauty fails
To bring heart's ease to the hours worn old.

Only the master, stern and gray,
Only the wife, with her saddened face;
All, all gone, who with them one day
Sat at that table in youth and grace.
Some of the children they loved are dead,
Others are married. Their years are few;
And thus the servants, with stately tread
Are setting the lonely table for two.

Down in the valley, beside the road,
A cheery lamp in the window shows,
Over the casement clambers a rose;
Its petals white, on the threshold snowed.
Singing softly a glad, sweet strain,
Margery (Margery's eyes are blue),
Some old couplet of love's refrain,
Deftly setting the table for two.

All the future is bright and fair;
Pain and sorrow are far away;
Love is the ruling spirit there;
Margery's song is glad and gay.
Up through the pathway wet with dew,
Sounds a footstep of hope and life;
Somebody smiles on his gentle wife,
Setting the cozy table for two.

THE BEECH TREE.

BY HERMAN BAUMBACH.

There stood in the forest an old beech tree. Her top was shattered by lightning, her sides were hollow, and pieces of fungus grew on her bark. She was the oldest of a numerous family, but she had seen her children, as soon as they had grown up, fall under the woodman's ax, and only one daughter remained to her. This daughter was a young beech tree, with smooth bark and heaven-aspiring crest, and only eighty years old. That is the best year for a forest tree.

The old tree still thrust out her twigs and leaves in the spring, but she felt that her life was drawing to a close, for it cost her great suffering to hold herself upright. And because she knew that she must die she felt her love increase for her beautiful daughter.

Spring was approaching; the branches were still covered with the glittering frost, but the roots began to uncurl and the warm wind melted the snow. The rivers and brooks were swelling with melted ice. In the meadows the silvery catkins burst from their wrappings, and the snowdrops peeped timidly up through the white carpet of the forest ground.

The old tree spoke to the young: "To-night comes the violent thaw-wind; it will throw me down upon my bed of leaves that I have scattered in the course of time, and I shall go back into the bosom of the mother from whom I came. Yet before I go home I will bequeath to you a gift that the gentle Lord of the forest bestowed upon me, when long ago He stopped to rest under my branches. You shall understand men's words and deeds, and share alike in their joys and sorrows; that is the greatest happiness that can fall to our lot, but be prepared to behold more sorrow than joy." So spoke the old tree, and blessed her daughter.

In the night the thaw wind came from the west; it buried ships in the waves of the sea; it rolled great masses of snow from the mountains that destroyed the homes of men in their progress; it roared through the forest, and everything that was old and weak perished. But the strong trees resisted it. It struck the old beech tree to the earth and shook her strong daughter as she wisely bent her head before the blast and the great wind swept on.

Three days the daughter wept sparkling dew for her mother, then the sun came out and dried her tears. Then began everywhere such stir and commotion that the beech tree had no time to grieve. Her buds swelled and burst, and one morning a hundred thousand trembling, tender green leaves sprang into the sunshine. That was joy! Golden-yellow primroses climbed from the ground; they pushed their silken leaves out into the broad sunlight. Red and blue blossoms grew up around the primroses and the sweet woodruff uncurled its delicate-whirled leaves. That was life!

And in the midst of all this bloom and fragrance the young beech tree stood like a queen. A finch built her nest in her branches and a redheaded woodpecker paid her a visit. Once a cuckoo came and once a distinguished squirrel with his bushy tail over his head ran up and down to see if he might not find an acorn. But men she had not yet seen this year, and they would have been the most welcome guests of all since she possessed the power to understand their words and deeds. After all, one morning, came a slender young girl with her long brown braids, who walked through the woods straight to the tree. However, her visit did not seem to be for the beech alone. She glanced at the decaying trees on the ground and said: "Here is the spot." Then she set down her basket filled with May flowers and leaned back against the beech tree without a glance at its green loveliness. The tree held her breath to hear what the maiden would say, but the pretty one was silent. Presently from the opposite side appeared a strong young man. He wore a little round hat with a curling feather like a huntsman. He crept up cautiously, so cautiously that hardly a leaf rustled under his feet. But softly as he stepped the quick ear of the maiden perceived his coming. She turned her head toward him, and the tree thought: "Now she will fly." But the girl did not fly; instead she sprang toward the youth and threw both arms around his brown neck. "My Hans!" "My Eva!" they cried together. Then they kissed each other passionately; called each other pet names, embraced again, and the beech tree found it all very tedious.

Later they sat under the tree and spoke of their love. It was an old story they told, but it was all new to the beech, and she listened like a child to fairy tale. It was a wonderful surprise to her. The youth arose from the ground, drew out his knife and began to carve in the bark of the tree. This caused the beech great pain, but she held as still as a wall.

"What is that to be?" asked the maiden.

"A heart with your name and mine," answered Hans, as he continued to carve.

When the work was finished they both looked at it, well pleased, and the tree was as happy as if a king had hung a golden chain upon her.

"Truly, men are splendid people," thought she.

Now the hunter began to sing. The tree had listened many times to the song of the finch and thrush, but she heard now for the first time something very different from bird songs.

"Listen, Hans," said the girl, when the hunter paused in his song. "Your song reminds me of something. I know—people say—that in the autumn you go secretly into the woods for game. Let the poaching go. The forester is your enemy. You know why—and if he should meet you poaching in the woods, then—heavens! my Hans! if you should be brought to me with a bullet through your breast."

The young man bent over the girl, who leaned caressingly on his shoulder, and kissed her lips.

"People talk too much; don't believe everything they say, sweetheart." And putting his arm around her they went singing through the forest.

When the couple disappeared among the trees a man in hunter's dress crept from the bushes. He carried his gun on his back and a knife in his belt. His face was white and distorted; he went up to the beech-tree and beheld the heart that Hans had carved; he laughed wildly and drew out his knife to destroy the writing, then changing his mind he thrust the blade again in its sheath. Shaking his fist threateningly in the direction where the couple had disappeared, he muttered, grinding his teeth: "If I meet you, you poacher, only once, on forbidden ground, you will have heard the cuckoo sing for the last time." With these words he went into the woods.

And the tree shook her head sadly.

The beech tree got many a sight of the faces of the children of men in the course of the summer—the poor women gathering leaves or dry bark, the berry pickers, foresters and pilgrims. But the most cherished amid the guests who gathered under her leafy roof were the youth and brown-haired maid. They made weekly visits to her, spoke of their love, embraced each other, and day by day the beech tree came to love them more.

One morning before sunrise, when the mountains were just casting off their gray mist caps, Hans came alone. He carried a gun on his shoulder and stepped as lightly through the underbrush as if he would take his sweetheart by surprise. This time his coming had nothing to do with the lovely Eva—but the stag comes this way to drink!

At the foot of the tree the hunter paused and stood as motionless as the beech herself. The cool morning wind blew and the mist disappeared in heavy clouds. The gay birds fluttered and sang about the stream. The underbrush rustled. Hans raised his gun. A shot rang out on the clear air. Hans dropped his gun, sprang convulsively into the air and fell to the ground. A man strode hastily from the thicket with a smoking gun in his left hand. The beech tree knew him well. The huntsman bent over the murdered man. "It is all over with him," and taking his gun he vanished into the bushes.

The bright sun rose and shone upon a still form with set white face. Sorrowfully the tree bent over him and wept bitter tears, and the little robins flew up and covered the dead face and staring eyes with leaves and twigs. In the afternoon some woodcutters came that way and found the body.

"He has been shot while poaching," they said, and taking him gently up they bore him to the distant valley. An old man lingered by the tree. He drew his knife and carved a cross over the heart that Hans had made. Then he took off his hat and breathed a prayer. The leaves of the green crest rustled, for the tree prayed, too, in her own way.

For many summers on the anniversary of the death of the murdered man, the maiden came to the spot, knelt down and wept and prayed, and every time she was paler, more fragile. One day she did not come, and the tree murmured: "She is dead!" and so it was.

Years passed. The beech had become a mighty tree. Her bark was covered with brown moss. The wild vines clustered about her trunk, and heart and cross were both nearly covered. A man came one day and made a mark on the bark, and the tree knew her time had come. She bore the sign of her destruction—she must soon fall. Farewell, thou green and sunny forest! She had not long to wait for the woodmen, who came, and with cruel axes cut into her very life.

A gloomy, glowering man in hunter's dress, with long gray hair and beard, directed their movements. The beech knew him right well, and he appeared to recognize the tree. He came close to her and tearing away both moss and vine he saw that heart and cross were safe. "Here it was," he muttered, and horror shook his very frame. "Back, Herr Forester! Back!" cried the men. "The tree is falling!"

The warned man stepped back, but it was too late. With a deafening crash the beech fell to the ground and buried the forester under her corpse. When they picked him up he was dead. The beech had crushed his head. And the men stood in a circle roundabout and prayed for his soul.—Translated from the German for Chicago Tribune.

Too Delightful.

"Isn't this perfectly delightful!" she asked, as they sat on the sofa with their arms intertwined and the brilliantine on his mustache not very far from the crimson balm on her lips.

"Dorothy," he replied, "when I know that your mother is listening on the stairs, that your father is waiting in the passage with a cane, that the bulldog is loose in the front yard and that your little brother is under the sofa, how can I say that it is delightful?"—London Tit-Bits.

According to Contract.

A man the other day employed a carpenter to partition off part of his study and particularly instructed the workman to make the partition soundproof. The carpenter declared that he could do this effectually with a filling of sawdust. When it was finished the man stood on one side and called to the carpenter on the other: "Can you hear me, John?" "No, sir, not a bit," was the prompt reply.—Household Words.

VALUABLE FREIGHT.

Gold Worth $1,000,000 Shipped in One Train of Ordinary Box Cars.

The record for the greatest single shipment of gold ore ever sent in one train to the smelter has been won by W. S. Stratton. It was the largest single consignment of gold in its crude state that has ever been made in this or any other country.

There was a million of gold in ordinary freight cars, with no guard in sight to look after the treasure, but if any bold road agent had attempted to take a sack or two of the precious metal from the cars that stood on the sidetrack with their doors wide open he would have discovered that there were three men in each car, each with a pair of the dreaded sawed-off shotguns that are recognized as the most deadly weapons at close quarters. This was the shotgun guard hired for the purpose of protecting the most valuable consignment of ore that has come to this market at one time. Each man was selected for the purpose of standing to his guns, no matter what happened, whether it was a wreck or an attack from robbers. They were fighters from the back districts, and many of them had seen service in the Wells-Fargo company on the overland trail in the early days when white robbers contended with red freebooters for supremacy in the matter of ferocity. Some of them had been imported for the occasion from the Pacific coast, where for many years they had sat on the box of the stage and were tried and true as steel to the men who had engaged them for their nerve and fighting qualities. A brace of revolvers completed their armament, but there was no ostentatious display of the fact that they were there for a purpose. They were a modest lot of fellows, who did not yearn for the blood of their enemies.

A stranger, not knowing the nature of the shipment, peering through the open doors would not have detected any signs of life in the interior. He would have seen perhaps a hundred or more sacks that might have contained potatoes. Had he lingered at the door long enough to become accustomed to the gloom he would have caught sight of several pairs of vigilant eyes keeping close watch of his every movement. A stray sunbeam from chinks in the side of the car might have revealed the glint of gun barrels leveled at the entrance.

Not a soul suspected the truth as the ponderous mountain engine puffed its way toward the smeltery. Box cars are common enough in that section, and the only subject of comment was the appearance of the road engine in that vicinity doing the duty that is usually discharged by the switching crew. The runners had come in direct from their night ride from Cripple Creek with orders to go through to the smelting works and not uncouple from the six box cars until they were transferred to the smelter and the railroad had a receipt for the cargo. The ore once behind the walls of the fort-like smelting works, the owner could rest with the certainty of seeing his ore converted into specie within a reasonable time.—Denver (Col.) Correspondence Indianapolis Journal.

Black Pearls.

Black pearls used to be held as of small value, comparatively speaking. At the present day a perfect black specimen commands a much higher price than the finest pink or white pearl. They were first made fashionable by the Empress Eugenie, wife of Napoleon III., who possessed a famous necklace of them which brought £4,000 at an auction after the overthrow of the imperial dynasty. This did not include the single great pearl forming the snap, which was purchased by the marquis of Bute for £1,000. Mexico, Tahiti, Fiji and the kingdom of Madura to the east of Malabar, supply the markets of the world with the best black pearls. One of the most curious pearls from many points of view was that which the traveler Tavernier sold to the ruler of Persia 200 years ago for £100,000. It is still in the possession of the shah of Persia and is now supposed to be worth at least £135,000. The Persian monarch has a square glass case among his bizarre collection of jewelry containing a vast heap of most magnificent pearls, four or five inches deep, into which one can plunge the hand and spill them in cascades and handfuls.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Historic Landmarks of London.

One by one London's historic landmarks are departing. When it is impossible to get rid of them any other way, the powers that be just change their names, and pretend that they have ceased to exist. In this way Ratcliff Highway and Petticoat Lane have gone from us, though it is more than doubtful whether under their new names they smell any sweeter or are any more or less desirable than they were. The proposal made recently at a meeting of the board of works for St. Giles'-in-the-Fields comes nearer home. This body is anxious to convert Seven Dials into St. Andrew's circus. Their argument seems to be that "no little inconvenience and confusion" result to the post office authorities from "such a multiplicity of streets and thoroughfares of the same name in the metropolis." But we have yet to learn where these other Seven Dials are to be found, and we have explored the directory in vain. Parish councils and circuses is an old and popular cry, but London surely has plenty of circuses already without trespassing on the classic dials.—Historic Landmarks.

Tit for Tat.

"Do you ever sell these photographs that you keep in your showcase?" I asked of my friend, the photographer.

"I don't make a business of it," he replied. "The fact is, I got into trouble once for selling one."

"You see," he continued, "it was the picture of a very pretty girl whose father was rich and who moved in good society. The fellow I sold it to used it on an advertising calendar, and it made her father mad. He sued me for five thousand dollars damages, and got a judgment. But I got the money back all right."

"How so?"

"Why, you see, the case got the girl so much notoriety that she went on the stage on the strength of it. Then I sued for ten thousand dollars for advertising."—Buffalo Express.

DOMESTIC CONCERNS.

—Deviled Ham: Take lean boiled ham and chop it very fine, season it well with black and red pepper and dry mustard, press it solid and slice thin.—Farmer's Voice.

—Orange Tartlets: Take out the pulp of two Seville oranges. Boil the peels until tender, and then beat them to a paste with twice their weight in sugar. Then add the pulp and the juice of the oranges and a piece of butter the size of a walnut. Beat all these ingredients well together. Line some patty pans with rich puff paste, lay the orange mixture in them and bake.—Boston Budget.

—Tripe Cutlets: Cut honeycomb tripe in neat shapes, the suitable size for serving to one person. Blend the yolk of an egg with a spoonful of water. Roll the tripe in fine bread crumbs, then in the egg, in the crumbs again. Put a generous tablespoonful of butter in a pan. As soon as it browns lay the cutlets carefully in. Turn and remove from the pan the instant they are brown. Tripe is delicious thus cooked.—Good Housekeeping.

—Beef Rolls: The remains of cold roast or boiled beef, seasoning to taste of salt, pepper and minced herbs; puff paste. Mince the beef tolerably fine, with a small amount of its own fat; add a seasoning of pepper and salt and chopped herbs; put the whole into a roll of paste and bake for half an hour or rather longer should the roll be very large. Beef patties may be made of cold meat by mincing and seasoning beef as directed above and baking in a rich puff paste in patty tins.—Farmer's Voice.

—Bacon Kromeskies: Cut some dry, thin slices of bacon, about one and a half inches broad by two inches long. Lay the slices flat, and place a little minced meat, well seasoned, on each. Roll up the bacon tightly, taking care that the mince does not escape, and put aside in a cool place. To serve, dip each into batter and fry a golden brown, and garnish with fried parsley. This dish originates in Italy, where it is served with pieces of celery, dipped in batter, and fried too.—Leed's Mercury.

—Baked Beans: Put to soak at night in cold water one quart of beans. In the morning parboil, dashing in a spoonful of soda before removing from the fire; rinse well, place again in fresh water. Add one pound of salt pork, fat and lean mixed, boil till thoroughly done, season to taste. Bake in granite pan, placing the beans in the bottom. Gash the pork in nice slices, lay on top, dust on a little flour, two tablespoonfuls sugar; pour over all a cup of sweet cream. Bake in a moderated, steady oven till a nice brown, and serve in the dish in which they are baked.—Mrs. J. W. Davis, in Farm and Home.

NEW WAISTS.

Some Fresh Features in Seasonable Costumes.

For the tan and biscuit colored crepon gowns now in such favor Worth makes waists of black net or very heavy tulle with large white dots and an all-over design of vines of white applique lace. This net is mounted on a fitted lining of pale blue taffeta, the latter being used to line the skirt and sleeves. The net droops in blouse effect in front, and the back is quite full, but is drawn down straight into the belt. A broad cape-collar of crepon, somewhat in yoke effect, is slashed three times along the shoulders, bound there and on the edges with half-inch black satin ribbon, and the slashed openings are laced together with this soft narrow ribbon, a spike of jet finishing each end of the lacing-strings. The sleeves are tucked lengthwise from the armholes to make drooping puffs, and turn back at the elbow in square tabbed cuffs from close lower sleeves of the black and white net. The collar and belt are of black satin ribbon.

For silk waists a novel feature is the looseness of their lengthwise box-plaits, being almost curved rather than flat, and also their trimmings of chiffon in fluted ruffles and in gathered puffy ruffles of doubled layers. For very dressy waists for the house yokes of guipure lace are made up without lining, the pink-white flesh being thus almost left bare. The entire fulness of the front may be held in one double box-plait below the yoke, the plait so broad at the top as to cross the whole front, then folded in easily—not sewed in—and tapered to droop over the belt. Or else it may be in three box-plaits, folded, but not flatly, each plait headed with a chou of chiffon of the color prevailing in the silk. In the case of a single wide plait there is a fluted frill of chiffon falling below the yoke on a wider puffy ruffle of doubled chiffon.—Harper's Bazar.

FEMININE FASHIONS.

Notes on the Latest Additions to Women's Dress.

A dainty dress for a girl of seven years is made of blue serge. The skirt is plain, the waist is in blouse fashion with a front of white serge. There are very wide shoulder ruffles of the blue and a collar and pointed cuffs of white. All of the white material is ornamented with feather stitching and embroidery in blue. A moire ribbon is brought under the sailor collar and tied in a single loop with long ends.

A girl's dress of surah is made with a round skirt, trimmed with moire ribbon extending from the hem about half way up the skirt, and ending in very full fluffy bows. The yoke is in close plaits, with the fullness gathered in at the yoke and belt. Bands of ribbon are set in at the armholes and extend across to the middle, back and front, where they meet large rosette bows. The collar and sleeve trimmings are also of the moire ribbon.

Street capes of brocaded velvet are among the much admired novelties. One exceptionally stylish garment of this kind is lined with ermine, and finished at the neck with a very full ruching of net lace with long ribbon ends.

A stylish dress of black silk has sleeves and full vest of Japanese crape. Around the bodice is a fold of crape, and very long sash-ends fall from one side of the front almost to the hem of the skirt.—N. Y. Ledger.

—Capt. Asbury Adams, of the United States fish commission, says that last year the work of hatching lobster eggs was begun at Ten Pound island, and 100,600,000 young lobsters were hatched and liberated. He says he has seen eels suck eggs from lobsters in the aquarium, and he has become convinced that the greater part of lobster spawn is destroyed in this manner.

A TROLLEY CAR.

He Wanted an Imaginative Story of a Great Detective, With a Moral.

Blisters, chief of the third degree, sat in the secret sanctuary with lines of thought tied in knots upon his brow. About him in every corner of the room were clues—clues in packages, bunches and blocks of five. Beneath his feet were great heaps of newspapers, newspapers that he had carefully scanned—his never failing way of tracking criminals.

But Blisters, for once, was baffled like any cheap villain in a Bowery drama. A great murder mystery lay upon his mind. He was in such a mind even that he couldn't lift responsibility from his shoulders by "railroading" some innocent man. Detectives had failed him; he was foiled.

Suddenly he turned his haggard face to the light and a deep hiss broke through the brunette draperies of his mustache.

"Ha!" he cried. "I have it; they shall not escape!" He rapped sharply upon the wall. A secret panel opened, and a detective, with tear-stained face, walked in. To him the great chief said:

"In Brooklyn there are trolley cars; bring me one."

"Yes, sir; but why?"

"Listen," said the chief. "You and your companions fail to read the newspapers. You catch no criminals; you cut no ice. I suspend you all. I get a trolley car. When criminals are to be caught I start the trolley. That will run them down; it never fails!"

The detective wept again.—N. Y. World.

THE GUNMAKER OF ILION

Jefferson M. Clough Refuses a Tempting Offer from the Chinese Government.

His Health Was Too Poor to Permit Attention to Business—A Great Sufferer for Many Years, But Has Now Recovered.

(From the Springfield, Mass., Union.)

There isn't a gun manufacturer in the United States who does not know Jefferson M. Clough, and why? Because he has been intimately associated all his life with the development of the two best American rifles, the Remington and Winchester. For years he was superintendent of the E. Remington & Sons' great factory at Ilion, N. Y. After leaving there he refused a tempting offer of the Chinese Government to go to China to superintend their government factories—and accepted instead the superintendency of the Winchester-Arms Co., at New Haven, at a salary of $7,500 a year.

It was after this long term of active labor as a business man that he found himself incapacitated for further service by the embargo which rheumatism had laid upon him and resigned his position more than two years ago, and returned to Belchertown, Mass., where he now lives and owns the Phelps farm, a retired spot where he has five hundred acres of land.

Being a man of means he did not spare the cost and was treated by leading physicians and by baths at celebrated springs without receiving any benefit worth notice. During the summer of 1893 and the winter of 1894 Mr. Clough was confined to his house in Belchertown, being unable to rise from his bed without assistance, and suffering continually with acute pains and with no taste or desire for food, nor was he able to obtain sufficient sleep.

Early in the year 1894, Mr. Clough heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. He began taking these pills about the first of March 1894 and continued to do so until the first part of September following. The first effect noticed was a better appetite and he began to note more ability to help himself off the bed and to be better generally. Last August (1894) he was able to go alone to his summer residence and farm of 163 acres on Grenadier Island, among the Thousand Islands, in the river St. Lawrence, where from the highest land of his farm he commands a view for 13 miles down the river, and 60 of the Thousand Islands can be seen.

Instead of being confined to his bed Mr. Clough is now and has been for some time able to be about the farm to direct the men employed there and he is thankful for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for him.

These pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and are sold only in boxes bearing the firm's trade mark and wrapper, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and are never sold in bulk. They may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company.

Home-Made Piano Lamp.

There is really nothing the American girl can't do when she tries. For instance, a couple of clever Washington girls have actually made themselves a piano lamp. They have wit, they have the best of breeding, but they haven't money. A ready-made piano lamp was beyond them, so they set to work to manufacture one. First they took three broomsticks and tied them together tripod fashion. These they wrapped lightly with coarse cord and fastened a flower pot at the top. The whole was covered with innumerable coats of black enamel paint, and when the old brass lamp was fitted into the pot, with an overgrown shade to top off with, you'd have said the lamp was the finest thing in wrought iron. It sounds like a story out of a woman's magazine, but it isn't. It's true.—Washington Post.

Hamlet in French.

A story is told of three French boys who were studying a volume of Shakspeare in their own tongue, their task being to render portions of it into English. When they came to Hamlet's famous soliloquy, "To be or not to be," their respective translations were as follows:

(1.) "To was or not to am."
(2.) "To were or is to not."
(3.) "To should or not to will."—Harper's Round Table.

DELANO DIARY

--A splendid shower laid the dust and moistened the crops this morning.

—Tramps arrive and attempt to depart on many of the passing trains now-a-days.

—Tiff Hittsman is having his Third Street residence remodeled. Charley Carlton is boss carpenter.

--A few, very few potato bugs have been found this year, in this vicinity, and the potato crop bids fair to be a good one.

—Haying has begun, and in driving through the country one gets the scent of new mown hay in all its perfection without price.

—James Quinn is having an addition built to his farm home. D. R. Thompson, with a crew of Rockford men are doing the work.

—A Long Lake base ball team come up one day this week and measured bats with the Delano Blacks and got beaten of course.

—A crew of young men left Tuesday evening for Elk River to work on a gravel train between there and Hinckley, for a few weeks.

—The Crickets of Delano, all under 15 years of age, played a game of base ball with the Hazel brushers of North Rockford and Dean Lake on Saturday, score 23 to 8 in favor of the Crickets.

—A chalk talk was given by a Mr. Esterly, of Minneapolis, in the City Hall Monday evening. One young man who was present told us he never laughed so much in his life before. And he is a good laugher too.

—Dad Gast is doing a rushing business these times; especially on rainy nights his lodging room is well filled, many of the guests occupying places on the floor.

--Preparations are going steadily on for a grand celebration on the 4th. It is expected that the water-works exhibition and possibly the electric light display will be features of the occasion.

—Delano Creamery butter seems to be in demand judging from the commission men following C. G. Roosen about town: and the numper of firkins arriving and deporting from the depot.

--The Feast of Corpus Christi was duly observed by the Catholic congregation here on Sunday. A procession marched through the streets. Visitors were present from Loretta, the Polish church of Franklin, and other places.

—The street committee don't seem to pull together. One tells the street commissioner to go ahead and grade, the other member says not to do so, the other says he has had his say, he has nothing to do about it,. you go ahead. The town deserves a street committee that can pull together. They would do better grading.

—Our village committee appointed to secure the two fountains for watering animals are as dilatory as is common in such cases. Here we have a valuable water work's system in running order all summer and not a place for even a horse to quench his thirst. And now comes the slow committee and reports that it will cost from $50 to $75 apiece for them. Many a thirsty horse and even man could have quenched his thirst at the old town pump during the prolonged wait; but for the obstinacy of the dictator of the council, to whom the balance of our City Fathers usually knuckle down in small matters like these. Get a move on you and get the fountains or repair the old town pump that has done duty for so long. Ask the dictator if you mayn't —Morris Corey had the big head this this week. A "yaller jacket" stung him.

—Read our Births and Marriages for several "scoops" on our up town contemporary.

--I. C Wood has moved his tent to Rockford where he is engaged in photographing those who desire keepsakes of their friends.

—From the way some of the people living towards the Lyndale creamery from here go out of town occasionally they must raise fast horses in that neighborhood.

—The insurance on the Presbyterian church has been adjusted to the satisfaction of all concerned, we learn, the church was insured with contents for $900. to receive $851.82.

—Last week we mentioned in the locals that "Rock me to sleep, mother," appeared in another column. Unavoidably it did not appear then, but can be found on the first page this week.

—A few of Delano's citizens who have followed the "Great Financier" into a scheme to pay an outsider to loan them their own money and "get rich," now have considerable experience. But will they profit by it?

—Landlord Meister, of Grove City, with his family and household goods have arrived and are domiciled, for the present, in the Roehl building, awaiting the vacating by J. D. Young, of Young's Hotel, when they will take charge.

--John Ball has come over from Buffalo to superintend the erection of a new dwelling house for Paul E. Datko, on his farm, in Independence, we have not learned if Paul has engagee a partner to share his hew home with him or not; we presume he will attend to that.

—The Epworth League's invitation to the Christian Endeavor Society to meet with them in the M. E. Church and to alternate with them in taking charge of the meetings, has been accepted. The two societies will then be found on Sunday evening at 6:45 at the M. E. church. All are invited to attend.

—Some of the material has arrived for putting in the water-works extension on the north end of town. There should also be a hydrant on the corner of St. Peter and Third street, as that part of town has no fire protection. As many as can should have the fire protection afforded by the village water works system.

--Nearly all the shareholders from Delano who had stock in the American Building and Loan Association have withdrawn from that concern as their does not appear to be any immediate prospect for the maturing of the shares. —Eagle.

The shareholders from Delano seem to have tired of the Eagle leadership. They have hung on well.

—On Friday evening the High School scholars met at M. A. O'Hair's residence and presented, as a token of respect and love, to their teacher, Mrs. F. N. Leavens a beautiful silver cake dish. Our reporter was on hand to furnish us with the proceedings. He says Miss Stella Davis made the presentation speech, and all Mrs. Leavens speech was —,-:-:-!-?-*†‡¶°? All ☞ ☞ had ice cream and a pleasant time. Such things aid in making life pleasant.

—Quite a fund was raised some time since for the purpose of purchasing a school library. The library has not been purchased and the scholars are compelled to forego the pleasure of reading the books this summer. Where the funds are we have not learned. Possibly the enterprising committee on School library has the money out at interest. The teachers with the new Principal could assist the committee now as most of them are at home and have leisure enough in preparing a list of good books and they could soon be procured and put in use, before the pupils all grow gray headed.

—The A. M. D. G. entertainment given by the pupils of St. Peter's school, at the City Hall on Tuesday evevening was quite a success. The audience was a fair sized one and appreciated the children's efforts. The Franklin Brass Band furnished music, as did Miss Mary Schaffer Pianist; Jos Kuchetmeister, violinist; and the scholars, vocalists. We did not arrive in time to hear the first part of the programme. The Sunflower Chorus was a novel affair and took well. The broom Drill was fine, "Christening Dolly" by Laura Lohmiller, was well recited, "Germain Cousin" was well played. All the actors did well, Catherine Schaffer, as Germaine played extra well. "I'm going to write to papa" by Julia Coolen, was as good as you would find anywhere. "Ripples" by George Fautsch and Leonard Dedrich was good, but Leonard Dedrich was at his best in "How Sockery Set a Hen." Eddie Probst told a little boys troubles to perfection, and got off the stage when he was through. "A Precious Pickle" showed up human nature and taught a valuable lesson of obedience. "The angels of Buena Vista" was well carried out, the recitation by Mary Diedrich was excellent. The "Burlesque Drill" was amusing. Some of the participants appeared to be in the height of their glory. "Good night" by the school was a fitting close to the entertainment, and most everybody was wonderfully surprised to learn that for three and a half hours they had been sitting listening to their children and their neighbors children, and that it was 11:30 P. M. The enterprise was continued over Wednesday evening also.

Personals.

C. M. King, went west, over the G. N., Monday.

C. Hehl, of Long Lake, was doing business in Delano, this week.

L. M. Maxfield, of Lyndale, made the GAZETTE a brief visit Monday.

Charles Wright and family, of Montrose, visited grandma Kerr, on Sunday.

S. S. Breed, of St. Paul, is sojourning for a season at the Danforth House.

Dr. Norman W. Chance, of Elbow Lake, came over to see Ma, Tuesday evening.

William and Sherman Stacy, of Montrose, did business in Delano during the week.

Mrs. J. W. Mooers and son Henry, of Montrose, transacted business in Delano, today.

Charles S. Hawker visited Red Rock and the Cities this week on business and pleasure.

W. L. Haggerty and wife, of Rockford station, drive over to the metropolis, quite often.

Two Misses Cross, of Minneapolis, are visiting at the home of their uncle George W. Bolton.

C. G. Halgren, of Watertown, was over a few days ago, hunting a painter and paper hanger.

Dr. E. E Shrader, of Watertown, makes frequent visits to Delano, for some reason or another.

Emil, Frank, and Albert Boerner and George Hoffman, of Buffalo, were Delano visitors yesterday.

Uncle Joe Van Eman, of Buffalo, was in town Tuesday. The boys say he was awfully "stuck up."

J. S. Cooper made a trip to the County Seat with a load of goods for Joseph Van Eman the other day.

Miss Laura Meicklish, of Pennsylvania, is the guest of her friend Mrs. F. H. Lindsley, for a short time.

Willis E. Johnson and Principal Carhart were left off in making up the corps of teachers for the St. Cloud Normal for this year.

Miss Julia Cunningham was summoned home from Minneapolis, Saturday, to help take care of her brother Emery who has the Typhoid Fever.

John McGary and Earl Hoisington, of Independence were GAZETTE visitors Monday. They are a strong team politically; but don't always pull together.

Sheriff Carpenter, of Buffalo, was in town today distributing some of his very pressing invitations to lay aside their business cares and be at Buffalo Monday morning.

William Quinn, of Waverly, passed through town on Monday, on his way home from Minneapolis, where he left Mrs. Q., at St. Mary's Hospital, for medical treatment.

Rev. Wright went east over the G. N. last Saturday; he had been in the western part of the state and had not yet learned of the burning of the Presbyterian church here.

County Cullings.

Court has been going on for two weeks and seems inclined to keep on for some time yet. Our country keeps her record for long terms. Something should be done to prevent so many cases occuring to cost so much to the county.

The idea seems to be growing that our Democratic chieftians should call a meeting of the faithful, to discuss political issues of the past, present, and future; to look into causes of unrest and dissatisfaction; to see where we are at; and to remedy far as possible all wrongs and put our boat in sailing trim. One meeting may not suffice for all this but would be a starter in the right direction. Wright county democrats are thoroughly tired of being manipulated like so many sheep, and would like an opportunity to have a little weight in the counsels of the party. And the only way they can obtain this, their privilege and right, is to demand it themselves. Hold meetings in each voting precinct. Talk over affairs. Prepare to guard against a repetition of wromgs, and when a county meeting is held take an active part, know what you want and demand it.

Entered as Second-Class Mail Matter, at the Post Office in Delano, Minn

THE present has been a favorable season for crops and hard on bugs; yet, the state entomologist claims the chinch bug is in the fields and advises the spreading of the muscardine disease for the purpose of destroying the pest. In a circular letter he says "Those that wish to use the spores can have them with directions for using them by writing to the entomologist, Prof. Otto Lugger, St. Anthony Park, Minn.

IT is simply astonishing to hear man after man go into court at the County seat and testify that they take no county paper. That they have neither heard nor read of the death of a man from injuries received, in a row, in their own county. Why what can a man be thinking of in this age of newspapers not to supply himself and family with, at least one county paper, or better still one of each political faith so as to know what is going on in the county at least.

Where is He At.

A reader of the GAZETTE says at the last election the Democrats of the Sixth District placed before the people for re-election to Congress a safe and sound buisness man and the Republican placed a man whose sole recommendation was that he was a good talker, in nomination against him. The good talker was elected and has now justified all that his opponent said against his election. He further enquires "Does Congressman Towne voice the party that nominated him or does he voice the Populist party? Let those that are posted answer.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]
WASHINGTON, June 21, 1895.

Secretary Carlisle is probably the best pleased man in Washington. His friends and enemies alike agree in giving him the credit for the administration victory which has been won in the election of delegates to the Kentucky state democratic convention which meets next week, and he is being overwhelmed with congratulations, in person and by mail and wire. His friends declare that it means his certain return to the Senate and makes him a promising candidate for the Presidential nomination of the party.

This has been an anxious week for the republican brethren. Although every conceivable expedient had been resorted to to prevent the precipitation of a fight over the silver question in the convention of the Republican League at Cleveland, Ohio, they have been in a state of dread every hour that the convention was in session lest their plans should miscarry and the fight be started which would spread like wildfire through the entire party.

The Republican enemies of Mr. Benjamin Harrison evidently regard him as a formiable candidate for the Presidential nomination, and are beginning to line up to accomplish his defeat. Ex-Pension Commissione Dudley, of Ind., whose efforts towards carrying that state for Mr. Harrison in 1888 by means of the notorious "blocks of five" system which afterwards caused him to find Washington a safer place of residence than Indiana, and who became a bitter enemy of Mr. Harrison because that gentleman, although willing to accept the benefit of his trickery, declined to associate with him or even to recognize him after he become President, is again posing as a republican leader. And it is no secret in Washington that Dudley's object in again entertaining politics is to work against Harrison's nomination

President Cleveland went to Gray Gables on Monday, to remain for the summer; Secretary Lamont has gone on a trip to the Northwest; Attorney General Harmon is in Cincinnati straightening up his private business, but the rest of the cabinet are on duty, although it is probable that Secretary Olney and one or two of his colleagues will go away on their vacations in a few days if nothing occurs to prevent.

State department officials regard the story that Great Britain is preparing to forcibly obtain control of the Nicaragua canal as belonging to the class which always become more or less frequent during midsummer, which is also known as the "silly season." Such a course on the part of Great Britain would be equivalent to a declaration of war against the United States, and few men of common sense could be made to believe that Great Britain desires a was with the United States.

Secretary Carlisle has completed the regulations under which the $5,000,000 appropriated by the last Congress to pay defferred sugar bounties will be dispursed. Copies of these regulations will be forwarded to the sugar planters and as soon as all requirements have been complied with the money will be paid. It is probable that there will not be enough to pay the full amount intended by Congress. Should that be the case when all the claims are in and tabulated the claims will all be scaled down. It will take some months to arrange all these details and Treasury officials do not think they will be completed and the payments made before about the last of the year.

Commissioner Lochren says he has nothing to conceal in connection with the dismissal of one hundred employes of the Pension Bureau, which are to go into effect July 1, and which have created a stir among the friends of those dismissed, because several ex-Union soldiers and Miss Key, a granddaughter of the writer of the "The Star Spangled Banner", were on the list. Judge Lochren says of the matter: "In making these selections we took those to whom dismissal would not be so great a hardship as it would have been to others in the office, who perhaps did not in some cases stand so high as clerks. In making up the list of those who were to go out we were governed by the desire to keep our best clerks in the office. As to publishing the list, it was on my judgment that it was not given out. And my reason for not doing so was that we did not wish to cast a stigma on any who were thus legislated out of office. It is not against many of these clerks that they were not as efficient as other clerks, and it should not prevent their getting employment elsewhere."

"FOR GOD AND HUMANITY."

The Ninth Annual Convention of the Ninth District of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, held at Monticello, June 18-19, 1895.

"Though we may not be able to inform men more than they know, yet we may give them occasion to consider." "Our God is the God of salvation, and unto God the Lord belong the issues of death."

The annual convention of the 9th. District of the Womans Christian Temperance Union, convened at Monticello, Tuesday, June 18th. at 10:15 A. M. The convention opened at 10:30 with devotionals led by Mrs. Frances Neal, of Hennepin County. After scripture lesson and singing, prayer for the success of the convention, and also for the Worlds W. C. T. U. convention, now in session in London, England, was offered up by the President and others, the convention was called to order by Mrs. G. M. D. Try State President, in the absence of the District President, Mrs. C. C. Gregg, who was unable to be present. The reading of the minutes of last session by Mrs C. H. Chilly, Dist. Secretary, was followed by roll call of officers, who responded by scripture quotations.

The following committees were appointed by the Hresident. On credentials; Mrs Neal, Mrs. Kingsbury. On Finance; Mrs. Brookins, Mrs. Baker. On resolutions; Mrs. Canney, Mrs. Bursell, Mrs. Bradford, Mrs Nickerson, and Mrs. McCord.

Report of Hennepin county was read by the President, Mrs. Neal. The report was encouraging, and although the financial stringency had been fully realized in the lack of funds to prosecute the work to the extent they had desired, they were not despondent, but were determined to press on with a larger faith and a firmer trust in the cause for God and humanity. Report of Wright county was read by Mrs. I. L. Bradford, the President Mrs. A. M. Davis of Howard, being absent.

Report of unorganized counties was read by Mrs. Chilly. An able paper on "National Prohibition" was read by Mrs. Chilly. It was an urgent appeal that the combined thought of all Christian people and friends of reform, from now on, should be centered on the best plan for uniting the millions in a "union of reform forces," as it is only under the pressure of an aroused public opinion that governments take action. Mrs. Try, State President, gave a short talk on state work, its most important features being scientific temperance instruction, and school suffrage. She contended that woman should be alive to the importance of these issues, and they should work with energy, that they may not only be able to retain the privilege already granted them, but have a more comprehensive idea of their duties as citizens, and the in's and out's of the drink habit, the legalized system which creates drunkenness.

Tuesday afternoon devotionals were in charge of Mrs Mc Curdy, State recording Secretary. After reading of minutes of the morning session, the address of welcome was given by Mrs. F. A. Baker, of Monticello, who warmly welcomed President, District officers, delegates and visitors to the hospitality of our homes and the town, closing with an earnest desire for a larger faith, more zeal in the work, and a determination with the cooperation of all present to make the convention a success. Mrs. Neal in response, said, "thanking the Monticello Union for their kind words of welcome," that they had come to help on the cause of which the convention was but a fractional part, bylieving that the consecration of the few who were united, ready and willing to work, was greater than the multitude of indifferent ones with unloaded guns. God would bless our coming togather. The report of the District treasurer was read by Mrs. Fergurson. Reports and Literature was the subject of a talk by Mrs. McCurdy. She urged the great necessity of secrateries of local unions having their reports in the hands of the State Secretary in time this year on or before the 15 of August, as the State Convention meets the last of August, also, be minute giving an account of the little things that in the aggregate, go far toward making our work tell for the good of humanity, visits to the sick, literature circulated, flowers and clothing distributed, let an accurate account be kept, that due credit may be given each union of work done.

A solo "The bird with a broken pinion" was sung by Mrs. Rickerson in a very sweet and impressive manner, most agreeably varying the monotony of the business routine.

Mrs. F. C. Nickerson read a strong paper on "Unfermented wines" written by Mrs. M. J. Smith, State Supt. of that department. It was an earnest plea for help, to save reformed men who have an inherited taste for alcoholics, from again being led into a drunkards life, by taking fermented wine at our Lords table, the object of this department of the W. C. T. U. being to remove the serpent from every communion cup in our country regardless of church or creed. She showed the inconsistency of using alcoholic wines as a symbol of Christs atoning blood, and urged its disuse on the high ground of St. Paul. "That no man put a stumbling block or an occasion to fall in his brothers way" Much good has been accomplished but a great work still remains to be done. Remarks were made by Rev'ds Heard, Baker, and others. A recitation, "The Watch Tower" by Mrs. F. A. Stacy and Miss Cummings, was well rendered and listened to with interest. Mrs. I. L. Bradford read a paper from the Howard union, written by Mrs. M. Mc Cornack, which had been carefully prepared and was well received by the audience. An interesting paper on "Wine drinking in Paris," by Mrs. C. S. Winchell, Minnesota's delegate to the World's W. C. T. U. convention London, Eng., who is now in Paris, was read by her daughter, Mrs. F. N. Stacy.

Miscellaneous business included the introduction of the "brother-in-laws" present, to the convention.

Rev. Baker, Rev. Heard, Mr. Mc Cord, and G. W. Walker, responded bravely and with a few congratulatory remarks, Messrs. H. Kries, and Coupland were more diffident, pleading as an excuse that their wives were the talkers at home and they did not feel equal to the occasion of speaking before a room full of the fair sex.

Tuesday evening, Mrs. Neal presided, and after singing and prayer. Mrs. S. M. D. Try delivered an address on the "Problems of the hour." A large and appreciative audience filled the house and the speakers well modulated voice, easy manners, and rich thoughts on the questions of the hour and day, most favorably impressed her hearers and gave additional interest to the words she spoke. She believed there was no greater problem than the drink habit, the enemy of our homes and the curse of our country and humanity and said in closing that she believed the enfranchisement of the women of our country would bring about the solution of the drink problem. Women call up the home guard, those that have a desire to save the children. Politics, far from being disruption to to the harmony of the home will build it on a truer basis. Women are looking on these questions with eager eyes and when fully awakened, and men have stirred themselves to deal justly by giving the ballot to women, then the problem of the drink habit will melt away, as with the light of the sun. Woman in taking her true place, will dispel the unnatural doctrine "One law for man and another for the woman." A day is dawning when the religion of Jesus Christ shall exist in the polling booths as well as in the church. The address was about an hour and a half in length, and was listened to with marked attention to its close. Mrs. Try is a lady of culture, and fine scholarly attainments for a number of years she was a in the St. Paul schools and in 1891, occupied the chair of Prof. of English in the State University, during the absence of Prof. McLean in Europe. Wednesday morning devotionals were in charge of Mrs. Fergusson and Mrs. Bursell. Mrs. J. B. Ellis made L. T. L. work specially interesting and proved it to be the most hopeful phase of temperance work. Remarks were made by Mrs. Nickerson and Mrs. Stewart on the bright side of the work its needs and necessities.

Wright County Press work was presented by Mrs. E. A. Stacy, Supt. showing the great power and importance of the press, and much as we appreciate the great advantage of organization and mighty as has been its benefits, they would have been impossible, except for the grand co-operation of the press. The press of Wright County was most favorably endorsed and commended for their hearty and faithful co-operation in this department of our work, and a strong resolution of thanks was adopted by the convention, signed by President and Secretary and placed on record by the committee on resolutions.

"Our Leaders" by Mrs. Neal, "Work among railroad employees" by Mrs. McCurdy and "Jail and Prison work" by Mrs. Canney, were ably presented "Spring time," a solo by Miss Edna Tennison enlivened the morning hour very pleasantly. The address of the District President Mrs. O. C. Gregg, was read by the Sec. Mrs. Chilly. It was fine, full of helpful thoughts and very instructive.

The election of officers at this hour resulted as follows: President, Mrs. C. H. Chilly, Minneapolis; Secretary, Mrs. Fergurson, Minneapolis; Treasurer, Mrs. E. A. Stacy, Monticello.

Wednesday afternoon devotionals were led by Mrs. Ellis. The afternoon session was fully occupied with talks on "Sunday School work." "Kindergarten work" and "Mothers meetings" interesting discussions and much that was instructive on these bright and helpful sides of the work were given by many present. A fine solo by Mrs. S. J. Mealey was sung at this time, which was warmly applauded and appreciated. "The relation of cooking to hygiene" was the subject of a valuable paper by Mrs. Dr. Whetstone, the the "White Ribboner" our state paper was responded to by Mrs. Try. This with the report of committees closed the business of the convention.

A Demorest medal contest under the supervision of the Supt. of this department. Mrs. M. B. Bryant very agreeably entertained a large audience on Wednesday evening. Eight young ladies competing for the silver medal. The prize was awarded Miss Nora Cummings on her recitation "The Martyred Mother." Mrs. Try, chairman of the judges, presented the medal with a few approving and congratulatory remarks to the bright young contestants.

Benediction by Rev. Baker and the pleasant, inspiring two days session of the 9th Dist. W. C. T. U. convention adjourned.

THE FINAL TEST.

When all is said and all is done,
When all is lost or all is won—
In spite of musty theory,
Of purblind faith and and vain conceit,
Of barren creeds and sophistry;
In spite of all—success, defeat,
The judge applies to worst and best,
Impartially, this final test:

What hast thau done with brawn and brain
To help the world to lose or gain
An onward step? Canst reckon one
Unselfish, brave or noble deed
That thou—nor counting cost—hast done
To help a brother's crying need?
Not what professed nor what believed—
But what good thing hast thou achieved!

Yea! what attempted—what achieved?
Be not dismayed, be not deceived!
The tinsel bauble called success—
The dross of wealth, the gloss of fame—
That men throw up their hands to bless,
Is but an empty breath—a name.
Far better is one word that slips
In blessing from a beggar's lips.

I hold to this: The loftiest soul
Of one great universal whole,
Is but a weak and meager part;
The lowliest by impulse fired
To worthy act of brain or heart,
Is heaven blessed and God inspired—
A bit of his most wonderous plan;
And each a clod—and each a man?

The chosen few! Prate not to me
Of consecrated sanctity;
Nor stifle me, nor hedge me round
With puzzles algebraical
To prove that this is holy ground—
'Tis simply pharisaical!
God's heart of love is deep and wide,
And each soul has a place inside.

When all is said and all is done—
The battle lost, the battle won—
In spite of ancient theory,
Of purblind fate and fruitless quest,
Of threadbare creed and sophistry;
In spite of all—this is the test:
What hast thou done with brawn and brain
To help this world a step to gain!

We are arrayed against the liquor traffic not only because it slays one hundred thousand individuals every year, but because it directly ruins one hundred thousand homes, and its poisonous trail is directly or indirectly over every home in the land; because its paralyzing touch is felt in every phrase of our social life; because the grip of its iron hand is on every political interest; because it is the most prolific crime breeder and the swiftest poverty-producer that the world has ever known; in short, we are fighting the liquor traffic because it is the greatest stumbling block to national prosperity and the most effective bar to the moral and material progress of the human race ever devised by the great adversary.

We advocate prohibition not merely on the grounds of protection for the "fool" who drinks to excess, not even from the standpoint of the greatest good for the greatest number, but on the ground of the greatest good for all for the individual and for the nation; on the ground of protection for the present generation, and for that of generations to come.

If the stoppage of gun manufacture would increase the safety and happiness of the home and reform and transform our social and national life as would the stoppage of liquor manufacture, we should certainly be found advocating that policy. If the prohibition of rope-selling would give to this country and to the whole human race such an uplift as would the prohibition of drink selling, we should certainly be found among the anti-rope advocates. And if drying up the streams would result in untold good to every man, woman and child, physically mentally and morally; if it would add to human happiness instead of increasing human misery; if it was in harmony with the divine plan and purpose in the evolution and redemption of the human race, we should say, as would every other friend of humanity, dry up the streams.

We hear a great deal on Memorial Day and Fourth of July about patriotism, but the trouble is, it is a patriotism of a by-gone age. What we kneed to-day is a living patriotism, not a patriotism which feeds only upon memories, but a patriotism which is fully awake to "new occasions," and fully equal to them, a patriotism real enough and brave enough to meet these new occasions with the weapons of the new warfare.

CORRESPONDENCE

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

This is now mid summer and everything seems full of life and animation, the animal and vegetable kingdom seem in a healthy condition, more especially the vegetable kingdom, crops have not looked so fine for many years, and to all outward appearances at this present time the farmers will get a big yeald in the half bushel, and this will be to many, if not to all like mamma to the hungry soul.

Our crop prospect was never much better than at this present time, wheat, oats, corn, barley, rye, potatoes, all looking well, the hay on wild meadows will be light.

L. E. Kingsley, of Taylors Falls, was calling on frinds in our town one day last week.

Alfred Shea and family are visiting with William Fogleman and family.

Board of Review was in session all day yesterday but made no change in the assessment books.

Mrs. John Pagenkoff is still on the sick list.

Times do not seem to be improving, yet most everybody is talking about creameries.

Tramps and peddlars have been quite thick during this spring.

The rye harvest will be here in a few days, some have begun cutting their tame hay already.

Mrs. R. M. Mills who was thrown out of a bugy by a runaway horse and quite badly hurt, is slowly recovering

The W. R. C. held an ice cream sociable with Dr. E. Wright last Saturday evening.

Rev. Orin R. Jenks of Minneapolis preached the funeral sermon of Robert Mills, Jr., at the A C. Church Armstrong last Sunday afternoon. He was assisted by Dr. O. R. Fassett of Rockford the discourse was very touching and appropriate. Mr. Jenks is a bright and intelligent young man.

Wm. Mills is still in the notion of going to Tennessee if he can dispose of his property here.

Fishing is quite good in Lake Independence and Lake Sarah now. S. W. Yoakley is the headfisherman.

Should we get as good returns in the half bushel as the crops now indicate, it will help out not only the farmers but everybody.

Census enumerator R. M. Mills is working in Greenwood now.

There was an old preacher who told some boys of the Bible lesson he was going to read in the morning. The boys finding the place glued together the connecting pages. The next morning he read on the bottom of one page: "When Noah was one hundred and twenty years old, he took unto himself a wife, who was"—then turning the page—"140 cubits long, 40 cubits wide, built of gopher wood, and covered with pitch inside and out." He was naturally puzzled at this. He read it again, verified it, and then said: "My friends this is the first time I ever met this in the Bible, but I accept it as an evidence of the assertion that we are fear, fully and wonderfully made."

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.
Square Type.
Spatulated. Conical. Artistic. Philosophic. Feminine.
The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the ntler sex, every one of whom should subscribe to morest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and u will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put u in the way of saving money by finding in one agazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of e whole family.

It is estimated that the output of bicycles this year will not be much short of 450,000. This is evidence that the world is certainly moving.

Japan proposes to build a steel tower 1,000 feet high at Tokio to commemorate the victory over China. Japan would do well to read up on the tower of Babel and what happened.

The South American republics are now discussing a treaty providing for settling all disputes by arbitration. If the agreement would include revolutions, they might have some intervals of universal peace down on that continent.

Tacoma, Wash., has a horse-canning establishment which cans meat especially for the French market. Speaking of the question, the New York Times wants to know where we shall look for the horse of the future. The Cleveland Plain Dealer says: "Look for him in the bologna sausage."

Central America would be the garden of the world were it not for insects and revolutions. All the tropical fruits grow wild, and the inhabitants are not obliged to cultivate anything; but the ants are just as prolific, and revolutions grow as easily and as luxuriantly as do the bananas and oranges. There is no Eden without its drawbacks.

A justice of the peace in Maryland sued a widow for breach of promise. But the widow knew a thing or two, and set up the defense that she had discovered that the man was accustomed to drink. He tried to disguise his whisky breath with coffee, but the trick wouldn't work, not with the widow, and he was non suited. Served him right.

Jim Fisk was worth about $2,000,000 when he was killed by Ed Stokes. Today Fisk's widow is living in a humble frame house in the tenement district of Boston on an income of $50 a month. And even that beggarly stipend is derived, not from her husband's estate, but from property owned by her family in Brattleboro, Vt. Fisk's estate has vanished utterly.

Emperor William purposes that the sailors shall have the inspiration to celebrate the opening of his big ship canal. He has ordered for the crews of the vessels that will be at Kiel 2,000 bottles of wine, 200 bottles of spirits, 1,000 bottles of beer, 6,000 gallons of beer in the cask and 1,000 gallons of milk. The mystery is as to what crew will get the milk.

The nearest approach to Job in modern times is a Mr. Wilks, of Hamford Hill, London. On being hauled up for nonpayment of a debt Mr. Wilks explained that he had a wife and eleven children to support; that he had recently lost a horse, had been laid up with the quinsy, and had not had a drink in two years. On this statement the magistrate released him.

The opinion of those who know anything about Formosa is that the Japanese will find it an exceedingly rich prize, worth much more than all the territory on the mainland which was surrendered. The resources of the island are equal to those of Cuba, and it can be made much more valuable to Japan than Cuba is to Spain, because it is nearer, and can be largely peopled with industrious Japanese.

It is reported that "one-half of the members of the last graduating class of Yale declare that they will never marry." They propose to part their hair in the middle and live in clubs. If that is "higher education" of these modern days the less we have of it the better. The bulk of these graduates, with each a good wife, would probably learn more of the real duties of life in one year than during the entire course at Yale.

The last Pennsylvania legislature passed an act providing that "none but citizens of the United States shall be employed in any capacity in the erection or enlargement or improvement of any public building or public work within this commonwealth." This law does not exclude persons of foreign birth from such employment, but insists that they shall demonstrate their good intentions by becoming citizens and permanent residents.

Pierre Grantaire is the name of an American Frenchman who lives near Philadelphia and operates what is called a spider farm. He has provided every facility for these venomous creatures to breed and carry on their cobweb industry. And what for? He sells the spiders by the hundreds to the wine merchants who put them in their cellars to cover the corks of new wine bottles with spider webs and give them the appearance of great age. The average wine buyer is said to be convinced every time he sees the tell-tale webs. And so there is profit in raising spiders!

Mysterious Timbuctoo, the desert city, has been entered by a French newspaper man, who was not compelled to disguise himself to obtain admission. The ease with which he entered leads to the belief that anyone could have done the same thing long ago if the attempt had been made openly. The trouble has been that every explorer who attempted to reach the holy African city felt in duty bound to disguise himself, and his disguise being readily discovered he naturally excited the suspicion of the natives, who either drove him away or imprisoned him.

European pauper immigration has been of late almost entirely shut out of the United States by the strict enforcement of the laws against it, and the European countries have taken to shipping their paupers to South America. South America doesn't propose to stand it, either. Uruguay has issued a decree prohibiting the influx of paupers, and the other republics will probably follow suit. Will Europe send warships to compel those weak governments to receive their dependent classes? If so, there will be a fine opportunity for an exhibition of the Monroe doctrine.

ROSEBERY QUITS.

He Tenders His Resignation as England's Prime Minister.

His Cabinet Officers Follow Suit — The Queen Accepts and Commissions Lord Salisbury to Form a New Ministry.

London, June 25.—It is officially announced that the Rosebery government will resign. Lord Salisbury will be summoned by the queen to form a ministry, and his cabinet will proceed with the routine business of the house, obtain provisional supplies and then dissolve parliament. It is expected that the elections will take place the 10th of July. The second meeting of the cabinet Saturday afternoon began at 4 o'clock and lasted until 5:45. The meeting was held to decide whether the government should resign or dissolve parliament. It was decided to resign.

LORD ROSEBERY.

After dinner at Windsor castle Saturday night, Lord Rosebury had a long private audience with the queen and communicated to her the decision arrived at by the government. Upon Lord Rosebery's return to London, he drove immediately to his official residence in

LORD SALISBURY.

Downing street. Here he found waiting for him Lord Tweedmouth, lord of the privy seal and chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, and Mr. Arnold Morley, postmaster general. Mr. Asquith arrived soon after Lord Rosebery. The quartette conferred until 6:45 o'clock.

About half an hour later the fact became known that the action of the house of commons on Friday accepting the motion of Mr. Broderick to reduce by £100 the salary of Mr. Campbell-Banneman, secretary of state for war, a motion made solely for the purpose of calling the attention of the house to an alleged deficiency in the small arms and ammunition stores, had resulted in the overthrow of the liberal ministry.

The court circular contains the following: "Earl Rosebery, K. G., first lord of the treasury and lord president of the council, arrived at the castle and tendered his resignation to her majesty, by whom it was accepted."

BELIEVE IN BIMETALLISM.

Bankers, Merchants and Manufacturers Petition the British Government.

London, June 25.—A bimetallic memorial has been signed by members of leading bankers, merchants and manufacturers doing business in the east. A synopsis of the document is as follows:

It proceeds to relate that instead of the commercial supremacy of Great Britain and the financial ascendancy of London having been established since the change in the currency in 1816, it was achieved before then. Moreover, up to nearly sixty years after 1816 the business of the world was conducted under the dominating influence of the bimetallic system. The experience of recent years has shown that the British commercial prosperity during this period was due to the universal effect of the bimetallic law and not to the operation of our single standard. With the abandonment of bimetallism our immense advantages disappeared.

The experience of history, the teaching of science and the conclusions of authority, as expressed by the unanimous report of the gold and silver commission, unite in supporting the opinion that the relative value of the metals could be maintained under bimetallism. The recent statements on behalf of the French government, the resolutions of the German reichstag and the state council of the Prussian diet and the emphatic declaration of the United States in favor of international bimetallism are proofs of their desire to join Great Britain in a serious endeavor to accomplish this end. The memorial concludes by expressing the hope that the government will heartily "cooperate with the other powers in such measures as seem desirable for securing a fixed parity of exchange for the two metals and a more stable standard of value than we now possess."

Still Holds to Annexation.

Honolulu, June 24.—The first legislature under the republic was called together on the 11th inst. The president's message deals with many questions of local interest. In speaking of annexation to the United States the president says:

"While the annexation of this country to the United States of America has not yet been accomplished it still remains the policy of the government. Its consummation will be earnestly sought, with an abiding faith that such a result will be of great and lasting benefit to our country."

America Gets It.

Washington, June 21. — Edward Hohn, of Berne, Switzerland, director of the Universal Postal union, who has been in conference with Postmaster General Wilson for several days, has completed arrangements for holding the postal congress in Washington beginning the first Wednesday of May, 1897. The congress will be in session for seven weeks and there will be about 125 delegates present, representing every civilized nation on the globe.

Banquet to the Attorney General.

Cincinnati, June 22.—Attorney General Harmon was the guest of honor at a banquet Friday night given by the Cincinnati lawyers. It was about the most congenial gathering seen here for a long time. Two hundred of the more prominent members of the bar discussed an elaborate menu, declaring it perfect, after which toasts were responded to by several.

FRIENDS OF COLD WATER.

Miss Willard Opens the World's W. C. T. U. Convention in London.

London, June 21.—The third annual convention of the World's W. C. T. U. opened in Queen's hall, this city, at 9:30 o'clock a. m., Wednesday, with a prayer-meeting led by Mrs. Charles Archibald, president of the maritime provinces W. C. T. U., of Canada.

At 10 a. m. the convention was called to order by the president, Miss Frances E. Willard. The roll-call of official members followed and then the appointment of committees on credentials, courtesies, finances and resolutions. Then followed the report of the executive committee, the address of welcome by Lady Henry Somerset, president of the British Woman's Temperance association, and singing by the white ribbon choir of 500 voices. Miss Willard then addressed the meeting. She said in relation to liquor:

"The places in which intoxicants are sold have become the rendezvous of those classes which are either the foam of society or its dregs; the do-nothings of the upper and nether edges of the great social wave. One of our Chicago mayors gave as a reason why he did not close the saloons on Sunday that 'they were the traps in which he was sure to catch criminals.' If bakers' shops were the lurking places of the burglar and the tramp, if the basest political plots originated there, we should combine against the baker rather than the publican.

"We are here, then, English-speaking women, gathered out of the leading nations of the world, with a few native pioneers from oriental and continental countries, to put our heads and hearts together for the building up of the woman's home-protection movement, because it is the fittest to survive, the best adapted to its environment, and we are here for the pulling down of the liquor system because, judged by its effects, it is the most unfit and the least adapted to that slowly improving environment which is the outcome of Christianity working on the minds and bodies of the human race."

The reports of the different superintendents were delivered and at midday there was prayer, led by Mrs. Elizabeth Selmer, president of the Denmark W. C. T. U. of Copenhagen. The prayers were followed by a memorial service in honor of "Our Promoted Comrades," the memorial address being delivered by Miss Frances E. Willard.

MORTON ON SILVER.

The Secretary Writes Upon One Effect of Free Coinage.

New York, June 26.—The chamber of commerce has receiving a striking and characteristic letter from J. Sterling Morton, secretary of agriculture, on one phase of the silver question that is seldom referred to. Mr. Morton tries to show that the effect of free silver in this country will be to "out-McKinley McKinley," and pave the way for the most pronounced protection. The secretary's letter is addressed to a gentleman who does not believe in protection, and proceeds as follows:

"You wonder how a free trader can be opposed to free silver. Logically, the free trader must be in antagonism with the scheme of free coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1. Silver coined at that ratio into 412½ grain dollars is forced upon the American people at $1.29 per ounce and so stamped by the mint; but the bullion value of silver to-day is less than 70 cents an ounce.

"You and I oppose a protective tariff because by law it puts an artificial price on the things we have to buy; and I, as a friend of commercial freedom, oppose the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, because by law it puts an artificial price on silver. When nature makes perfect days out of 16 parts of darkness to 1 part of sunlight, it may become possible to make perfect dollars by the coinage of 16 to 1.

"Under existing law the secretary of the treasury of the United States at the beginning of each quarter proclaims to the custom house officials of the country the value of foreign coins in American currency. In the latter all imports must be valued. To-day the English pound sterling is $4.86. To-day, therefore, if you import from England £100 worth of goods, you pay duties upon a valuation of $4.86. But if we were on a silver basis, the English pound sterling would, no doubt, be worth twice as much as it is now, namely; $9.72, and you would then pay duties on £100 worth of English goods on that valuation, namely: $9.72. Thus the advocates of free coinage are the advocates of a system which will double import duties. As protectionists they 'out-McKinley McKinley.'"

A Bank Looted.

Duluth, Minn., June 22.—A messenger came in from Rainy Lake City Friday night and reported the robbery of the Bank of Rainy Lake City, on the Canadian border, by two masked men who, after holding up and knocking senseless the cashier and binding the teller robbed the bank of some $30,000 and made their escape.

The bank is the only one in Rainy Lake City, and has been running since the incorporation of the town. It will not be materially affected by the robbery, as the proprietors of it are all very wealthy men and can replace the money without even inconveniencing themselves.

For some days past several strange and suspicious looking men have been hanging around the town and it is believed that the two who did the work are part of an organized gang, as all have suddenly disappeared.

Foster Given a Big Fee.

Washington, June 25. — John W. Foster, ex-secretary of state, who went to China last December as legal adviser to China in the peace negotiations with Japan, is on his way home, and is expected to reach Washington early in July. It is said on excellent authority that Mr. Foster's retainer as legal adviser to China was the comfortable sum of $250,000.

Will Not Sentence Taylor.

Pierre, S. D., June 24.—Judge Baffy Saturday held that he had no power to sentence ex-State Treasurer Taylor out of the regular term of court, which meets August 13. Bail will be fixed to-day.

SAIL THE BALTIC CANAL.

New Waterway Formally Opened—Stars and Stripes Cheered.

Kiel, June 22.—With imperial pomp and ceremony and amid the plaudits of thousands upon thousands of people the great canal connecting the Baltic and North seas was opened to commerce Thursday.

The Hohenzollern passed into the western water gate at 3:45 o'clock Thursday morning. As the Hohenzollern passed into the canal, the entrance to which was beflagged at every point, a salute was fired by a park of artillery stationed a little distance from the entrance to the lock, while the soldiery, composed of cavalry, infantry and pioneers, lining both banks, presented arms. At the same time a military band played the German national anthem. The approaches were crowded with military students, visitors and residents of the vicinity, who cheered loudly. The emperor was on deck, and he bowed in response to the ovation he received, exhibiting much emotion.

The Hohenzollern at 4 o'clock cut the thread which had been stretched across the entrance to the canal and began her passage through to Kiel, the bands on shore playing national airs, and the crowds cheering.

At 12:30 p. m. the Hohenzollern was in sight of the Holtenau locks at the east end of the canal. The immense crowd of people who had assembled on the Holtenau festplatz, to witness the spectacle, set up a mighty cheer as the imperial yacht was sighted. Five minutes later she steamed up to the locks, which she entered at 12:35. The emperor stood upon the high bridge, behind the mainmast, attired in the full uniform of an admiral of the German navy, suggesting the well-known picture, "With Full Stream Ahead." The bands of the regular and veteran troops struck up "Heil der Riegerkranz," which the kaiser acknowledged by a salute.

At 12:40 all of the ships in the bay fired an imperial salute. It was a grand spectacle.

Several times during the day encouraging expressions about America were shouted from the shore. Near Holteneau, a man led the cheering by calling for "Three cheers for the red, white and blue." They were given with the greatest enthusiasm. The Marblehead reached Holteneau at 8:30. The greetings given her were of the most cordial character. The cruiser was given a tremendous reception when she was in the lock. On leaving the lock she fired a salute. She then went to her anchorage.

Kiel, June 24.—Everybody was stirring at an early hour Friday morning, securing places of vantage to see the ceremony of laying the keystone of the canal at Holtenau. Dozens of steamers went from Kiel to places near the lock, among which was the press steamer which was allotted a good place. Invited guests and those who had secured tickets for the tribunes arrived between 10 and 10:30.

The kaiser, wearing the uniform of the guardes du corps, accompanied by the kaiserin, in a crushed strawberry gown, arrived at the keystone at 10:55. The stone was flanked by a battalion of marines. As his majesty gave the stone the first stroke, a detachment of artillery stationed on the hill behind the platforms fired a royal salute, which was followed by salutes fired by the warships in the bay and the bands played "Heil dir Siegerkranz."

Chancellor Hohenlohe met the emperor at the jetty and led him to the marquee. Chancellor Hohenlohe's document, giving a history of the canal, with a set of coins of the reign of Emperor Frederick III., was placed in the stone, which was then closed. After the emperor had tapped the stone with a mallet the empress stepped forward and performed the same act, followed by the crown prince of Prussia, the prince regent of Bavaria, the king of Saxony, the grand duke of Baden, the grand duke of Hesse and a number of others.

At dusk the scene on the water was one of unparalleled beauty. All the warships were outlined with a fairy-like tracery of lamps, and some of them had brilliant displays of fireworks. Altogether the display was the most brilliant ever seen here and probably finer than any ever seen in Germany.

The fireworks display of the Americans was the most admired. The New York, the temporary flagship of the squadron, had a magnificent design 50 feet long against her funnels. It read: "America sends hearty greeting to Germany upon the completion of the canal." Set pieces, pictures of the emperor and President Cleveland, each 40 feet square, were also displayed. Hundreds of officers have inspected the American vessels. They are especially interested in the Columbia. The Russian officers have thrice examined her minutely.

The great banquet which practically wound up the ceremonies of opening the Baltic-North sea canal took place Friday evening in the much-discussed structure representing the old German warship Niobe. About 1,000 guests participated in the entertainment.

Fatal to Two.

Chicago, June 25.—The whaleback steamer Christopher Columbus met with a serious accident to her machinery on her return trip from Milwaukee Saturday night. The wind was blowing from the south and she was making fast time until about 7 o'clock, when directly off Waukegan there was a terrible explosion followed by a flash of flame and the boat was immediately enveloped in a cloud of steam. The victims are:

Dead—Frank Wilson, married, coal passer, South Chicago, died from inhaling steam; John Stitz, lately of Chicago, fireman, died from burns.

An Old Delaware Trail.

Re Indians for generations, ar haps for centuries, were accustom d to go from Delaware bay to Chesapeake bay by way of Appoquinimink creek on the one side and Bohemia river on the other. There was a short portage between the two across what is now the state of Delaware, and this ancient trail became about 1660 the cart road of Augustine Herman. One hundred years later the King's road, now the state road, intersected this trail, and at that point of intersection grew up the village in New Castle county, Del., now called Middletown.

THE COLOR GUARD.

THERE were waving hands and banners, as the crowded car rolled by,
There were shouts from merry children ringing to the summer sky;
Then a strain of music rose and swelled and pealed along the street,
As their gay, tumultuous clamor melted in a chorus sweet:

"O say, can you see, by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming?—
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, through the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watched were so gallantly streaming!"

Ah! the Starry Flag is glorious, and the children love it too:
And the land is safe and happy where the children's hearts are true,
How their youthful ardor thrilled me, as the revelation came
That the Guard is ever changing, but the Flag remains the same.

We were born too late for glory, but we still in memory keep Stirring echoes from the battlefields where warrior fathers sleep.
We have held the Flag as ours, but lo! the years are passing by,
And a newer generation waves the Stars and Stripes on high.

Better thus! for now the rancors of the strife no more appall:
And the children know no faction, and the Flag belongs to all.
Be it so! we yield the prestige, for the New Guard comes apace,
With the strength of youthful millions, loyal purpose in its face.

Flag of peace or Flag of battle! Children, it is yours to love!
Will you honor and defend it, as the gift of God above?
Ah! the children's hearts are loyal! From a myriad array
North and south there comes the answer, as it came that summer day:

"Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just,
And this be our motto: 'In God is our trust:'
And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

GIDEON'S Declaration of Independence

GIDEON BRIGHT was the proprietor of the only barber shop in the village of A——. He was well-to-do and unmarried, and was not a "bad-looking man." At least he told himself so as he carefully brushed his well-kept hair back from his forehead and gazed at his reflection in the mirror. This is what he saw: A short, fat little man, with his hair carefully parted in the back and combed forward over his ears and (truth must be told if he was a barber) a bald spot on the top of his head. This bald spot had steadily increased in size in spite of all the "vigors" and "elixirs" that he had regularly applied to it. To-day, as he looked at it, it seemed to be larger than ever, and he said to himself, as he applied the wash:

"It's no use, Gideon. You are getting old, and you might just as well own it first as last. If you had any spunk at all you'd have been married long ago."

Just then Deacon Hemper came in to have his beard trimmed, and Gideon smilingly advanced to serve his old customer.

Gideon was very bashful, and always got fidgety and red in the face whenever a woman spoke to him, and always said "no" when he meant to say "yes," and if he did venture to be agreeable to a lady he always made a dismal failure of it; and so he kept getting worse, and, although he was very fond of their society, finally avoided them as much as possible.

Years ago there had been a vague rumor afloat that "Gideon was goin' to marry Philena Pray." Gideon heard that rumor and heartily wished that it was the truth, but he knew that, much as he wished it to be so, he had not the courage to find out what she thought about it.

Philena Pray was the daughter of the village clergyman, and had been a handsome girl, rather above the medium height, with flashing black eyes and rosy cheeks. She was not lacking in spirit, and one day, after Gideon had kept her company for six years and they were no nearer an understanding than they were at first, she made up her mind to bring matters to a crisis; and so, when Gideon stepped up to see her home from meeting, she jilted him before them all, and went home with her father.

Gideon went home in no pleasant mood. As he sat before his fire he ran his fingers through his hair until it stood on end, and then he would rise and pace the floor and talk to himself. This was a habit he had when excited.

"I declare! It's too bad! I don't know as I blame her, either. Here I've been going with her for six years, and I've never had the courage to tell her how well I love her. I believe she knows that I want her, and she thinks it's time I told her so, an' so it is. I won't let another day pass over my head without knowin' just what she thinks."

Well for Gideon if he had kept his resolution, but when morning came he felt more timid and bashful than ever. He said to himself: "It's now or never." He walked briskly along, and soon arrived at Parson Pray's gate. Philena was working among the flowers that grew near the gate. She was expecting him and her heart beat a little faster, and her cheek took on a rosier hue, as she said:

"Good morning, Gideon."

"Good morning, Philena."

"Won't you come in?"

She smiled as she spoke, and Gideon thought there never was a fairer woman in the world. She took a step toward the gate as if to open it. Gideon got very red and stammered:

"N-o, I thank you." He realized that he had made a blunder, and it confused him more and more. He took off his hat, and furiously mopped his perspiring brow, and then said:

"I left something at the church last night and I was going after it."

Poor Gideon! He was so worked up by this time that he could not think of another word to say, and he pulled his hat over his eyes, and abruptly walked away. Philena did not speak her thoughts aloud, if she had she would have said: "I guess he did leave something, he left his brains if he's got any, for he didn't have any this morning. I wonder if he expects me to offer myself to him. If I should, he'd get as red as a lobster and say: 'It's of no account. Please don't discommode yourself, Miss Philena.'"

She cast a look of scorn after him, and then went about her work.

Gideon went on his way, angry with himself for his blunder. "I'd kick myself if I could. 'I'd left something at the church.' Wasn't that a bright speech? You're an idiot, Gideon Bright." He turned about and walked back, fully determined to go straight to Philena. He walked slowly by the house, but he did not see Philena. His courage, as usual, left him at the last moment, and he walked homeward; and when he was once more in his little shop, his face wore a despairing look as he said:

"Gideon Bright, you've let the chance of your life slip by. I don't believe she'd have you now anyway."

Philena saw him when he came back, and she really hoped that he would come in, but she was disappointed, and as he walked slowly by, she thought:

"I don't believe he cares anything for me. I'm glad I gave him the mitten last night before all the folks. I'll see that he don't get the chance to pay me."

True to her resolution, she avoided Gideon, merely speaking in a civil way when she passed him in the street, or met him at a friend's house.

Year after year went swiftly by, and still Philena did not marry. This was her own choice, for several worthy men had sought her hand. Try as she would to put him out of her mind, the face of Gideon Bright haunted her dreams, and she would softly sigh:

"If he only had the least bit of gumption!"

Gideon still loved Philena with all his heart, and fondly hoped some day to win her. He lived in the rooms over his barber shop, and took his meals at Dame Gafton's, who lived next door. Being so much alone, he got more in the habit of talking to himself, and Philena was generally the subject of his conversation.

At the time my story opens, Gideon was forty-two years old, and Philena was thirty-eight.

After Gideon had trimmed Deacon Hemper's beard, he accompanied him to the door, and as they stood there in the sunshine talking in a gossipy, neighborly way, young Sereno Hemper came along. He was going to have a picnic on the Fourth of July in their grove, three miles from the village. He wished Gideon to attend.

Gideon could talk well enough when he was with the men, and he said:

"I'd like to go. I'd enjoy it real well. It's a long time since I attended a picnic. But then—it's no use thinking about it. I'd just be an odd one among you."

"Oh, don't talk that way. We're all going in a big wagon, and we mean to have a jolly time."

Gideon consented to go, and they walked on and he returned to his little shop. He longed to go and invite

HE REALIZED THAT HE HAD MADE A BLUNDER.

Philena to accompany him, and he said softly, as he polished his shears before he put them away:

"Now, Gideon, be a man, and ask Philena to accompany you to the picnic. It's better late than never, and you might get her yet. I almost think she likes you a little, and then she refused John Haimes, and perhaps you have been mistaken all these years, and she does care for you. Anyway, I believe I'll ask Philena to go to the picnic with me."

He started out, and just as he turned the corner who should he meet but Philena! He merely said: "Good morning," and hurried into the grocery near by as though he really wished to avoid her. He saw her when she returned, but Mrs. Snower was with her, and he returned to his little shop and passed the day in a miserable state of mind.

Day after day went by, and the Fourth was at hand. The load of merry men and women stopped at Dame Gafton's for Gideon. They had a lumber wagon, with seats placed around the box, and a canopy of white duck to protect them from the sun. Gideon took his seat in the wagon, and the horses started off at a lively pace. Gideon looked around, and there beside him sat Philena Pray. His heart leaped to his throat and prevented him from taking part in the conversation.

When they reached the picnic ground, Sereno Hemper said:

"Here, Gideon, make yourself useful and assist the ladies." One by one he assisted them from the high wagon. As he was about to help Philena, Mrs. Stout stepped on her dress, and she was thrown forward right into Gideon's arms. For one brief blissful second he clasped her form and her warm breath swept his cheek. Philena was annoyed, but she made some laughing remark, while Gideon blushed and stammered an awkward apology.

After the people had all arrived there was a grand lot of speechmaking, and the music of a fife and drum made the woods merry between the speeches. Judge Wise read the Declaration of Independence, and commented thereon. His remarks were furiously applauded, and then all joined in singing "America."

After this they wandered about the grove, or along the shore, or gathered in groups beneath the wide-spreading trees. Philena, always helpful, was amusing some of the little ones, while Gideon sat in the shade of a large oak, apparently listening to Judge Wise and Lawyer Pinch, but, in reality, watching Philena. After a little while some one asked Gideon to help put up the swing. When he returned Philena was nowhere in sight. He busied himself with the preparations for dinner, and after the rough tables were made he went down to feed the horses. He took the measure of oats from the wagon and placed it on the seat. He was talking to himself and did not notice that Philena sat just back of a large oak that grew by the shore. She had brought little Mary Price down to the shore, and she had fallen asleep as she lay on a shawl that Philena had spread on the ground. Philena sat by her side and dreamed of what her life might have been had Gideon loved her as she loved him. Just as she thought this she heard some one speaking. It was Gideon, and she supposed he was talking to some one. She sat still as he continued:

"That was a good speech that Judge Wise made. It's a noble thing to assert your rights and throw off the yoke of bondage. A noble thing. And Elder White talked good, too, real good. It seemed as though he meant me all the time, when he said that some remained in bondage all their lives, and served some habit that ruled over them like a despot. He said: 'Stand fast for liberty and freedom in all things.' I'll do it. I'll make a 'Declaration of Independence' this very day. I'll ask Philena Pray to marry me this very day."

Just then there was a slight rustle at the foot of the oak and Philena looked around. She saw that Gideon was alone, and was speaking his thoughts aloud. She hesitated a moment, considering what she would better do. That moment helped her to make her decision, for she heard Gideon say:

"I'll just ask her to take a walk with me, and just as soon as we are out of hearing, I'll say: 'I love you, Philena; will you be my wife?' And then if she refuses me she can't despise me for being afraid to ask her. I'd give money if I could only have Elder White's tongue for fifteen minutes. I'd say more than I've been able to say in a lifetime. I'd give a good deal to know what she'll say when I tell her how long I've loved her."

Philena heard all this, for he was very much in earnest, and spoke quite loud. She saw it all at once, and realized that she had been beloved all these years. She knew that if she waited for Gideon to tell her that he loved her, she would never hear it, and so she stepped out from behind the tree and said:

"You needn't get Elder White's tongue. It couldn't sound any better than it did when you said it."

Gideon stood spellbound while she said this, and then began a stammering apology for disturbing her.

She did not give him a chance to continue, for she said:

"You said just now that 'you would give a good deal to know what I'd say.' Well, I say I am glad you love me, and I am willing to marry you."

A bright blush mounted her cheek, and when Gideon realized that Philena loved him, he had no use for Elder White's tongue, for he found his own, and for once said just what he wanted to.

A small boy came up just then and said: "Dinner's ready."

When they arrived at the place where the dinner was served, every one remarked Gideon's "gay and jovial manner," and they guessed at the cause, for the small boy had preceded them and announced that he "saw Gid Bright a-kissin' Miss Pray."

That evening as he lingered on the moonlit porch at Parson Pray's, he urged Philena to name a day in the near future when she would be his bride.

When he walked home through the moonlight he really believed that he had kept his resolution and had asked Philena to marry him. He said softly, as he turned the key in the door:

"I am glad that I made that 'Declaration of Independence.'"

As Philena stood on the porch, with Gideon's kiss still warm on her lips, she blushed and said:

"I think I must have made a 'Declaration of Independence' to-day, but I'm not sorry."—Wake Robin, in Arthur's Home Magazine.

LEAGUE CLUBS.

Many Republicans Come Together at Cleveland.

Gen. McAlpin Takes Mr. Tracy's Place as President—Warner Miller Makes a Speech—Resolution Adopted.

CLEVELAND, O., June 21.—Seldom has so much interest been manifested in a convention of the League of Republican Clubs as in the one which convened in Music hall Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

After prayer by Rev. S. L. Darsie, Secretary Humphrey read the call and addresses of welcome were made by Mayor Robert F. McKisson and President D. D. Woodmansee, of the Ohio League of Republican Clubs.

President Tracy, of Chicago, delivered his annual address. Then the organization of the convention was begun by slips being passed to each state to fill out the names of members of committees. While this was being done H. Clay Evans, of Tennessee, made a motion that all resolutions be referred to the committee on resolutions without debate. This was adopted and the committee adjourned until 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

An open mass meeting was held Wednesday night. Among the speakers were ex-Gov. Russell D. Brown, of Rhode Island; Senator John M. Thurston, of Nebraska; Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, president of the Woman's Republican league, and Hon. A. B. Cummins, of Iowa. All spoke upon the general theme of protection.

The Resolution.

CLEVELAND, O., June 22.—The work of the eighth convention of the National League of Republican Clubs was practically ended yesterday when the committee on resolutions finished its deliberations and formulated its address. A resolution presented to the convention this morning is as follows:

"Whereas, Section 13 of the constitution of the republican league of the United States says 'this league shall not in any manner endeavor to influence the action of any national state, county or municipal convention,' the delegates of the republican league of the United States, in convention assembled, do hereby renew their allegiance to the principles of the republican party and pledge their best efforts for the success of the candidates of that party. Believing that this convention has no instructions from the republicans of the United States or jurisdiction under our constitution to frame or enunciate party platforms, we hereby refer all resolutions in relation to public questions to the republican national convention of 1896, with entire confidence that its action will redound to the prosperity of the people and the continued glory and advancement of the country."

It was 11 o'clock before the convention was called to order by President Tracy. The delegates were present in force, but there was a lack of interest on account of the overshadowing importance of the meeting of the committee on resolutions in session at the Hollenden hotel. The committee on credentials was the first to report. It reported that there was only one contest, and that was in South Carolina, but recommended for the sake of harmony that both contestants be seated. The committee on rules reported that the rules formulated by Thomas B. Reed were good enough for them. Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, said he understood Warner Miller, of New York, was in the city, and he was sure the convention would like to hear from the ex-senator.

Speech of Warner Miller.

A committee was sent for Mr. Miller, who, upon being introduced, spoke at considerable length. A synopsis of his remarks follows:

Mr. Miller argued forcibly against the tariff being taken out of politics. He held that the conditions were such as to prevent it, if not render it impossible. Any party whose policy did not raise sufficient revenue and created deficiencies was a failure. The republicans were not for tariff for revenue only, but for a tariff for a surplus also. His argument for the Monroe doctrine and the American flag on Hawaiian soil was vigorous. As neither Depew, McKinley nor any other candidates for the presidency were present he was reluctant to discuss any contested issues, but he argued at length for sound money and such a reorganization of the banking system as to extend the circulating medium without dependence on government bonds for the issues of bank notes. He hoped the party would stand by its record for bimetallism on a parity. He had the fullest confidence in other nations soon consenting through an international commission to the restoration of silver to its old place as a standard money, and believed it would be impossible to bring about such a result without the cooperation of other countries.

At the afternoon session Chairman Nagle, of the committee on time and place, reported recommending Milwaukee as the next place of meeting, the time to be fixed by executive committee some time after that of the national convention. The roll was then called and vice presidents and executive committeemen respectively named.

McAlpin Chosen President.

The committee on resolutions, not yet being ready to report, the rules were suspended and the league proceeded to the election of officers.

GEN. EDWIN A. M'ALPIN.

George E. Green, of New York, nominated Adjt. Gen. E. A. McAlpin for the presidency. The mention of Gen. McAlpin's name was the signal for tremendous cheering. Numerous seconds followed, and the rules were suspended and the election made unanimous.

Gen. McAlpin addressed the convention, and, after thanking the delegates for the honor conferred upon him, said:

"It is true that the delegates here represented do not, as a matter of fact, represent the entire republican vote of the United States, for they are the representatives of volunteer republican organizations throughout the diecrent states and territories. For this very same reason our deliberations and work should be marked by the highest frankness and candor of intercourse, and a desire to advance the best interests of the government through the medium of the great republican party of which the league forms so large a part.

"It is not my intention, nor could I at this moment and under the circumstances, speak at length on the great issues that divide the republican and democratic parties. On those subjects the convention speaks through its former resolutions.

"The republican party stands for all that is best in our national history: it demands from its government honest currency and an honest tariff. It believes in the equal rights of all at home and commands respect abroad. These, briefly stated, are the principles to be contended for by our party, by us as members of the Republican league, and which, if honestly followed, will bring success in the next great national election."

Friday's Work.

CLEVELAND, O., June 24.—It was 11 o'clock Friday morning before Gen. McAlpin, in his new capacity as president of the National League of Republican Clubs, called the meeting to order. There was a full attendance of delegates. At the beginning of the morning session, the first business was the election of a secretary to the convention. T. E. Byrnes, of Minnesota, nominated M. J. Dowling, of the same state. William Kelly, of Wisconsin, seconded the nomination of William Grant Eden, of Illinois.

The roll call on the election of secretary was begun, but was interrupted by Chairman Robinson, of the committee on resolutions, who asked unanimous consent to report. This was refused. M. J. Dowling, of Minnesota, was elected. The vote was made unanimous, on the motion of Gen. Goff, of Illinois.

The committee on resolutions then reported the resolution. There was not even a show of fight over the resolution. Nobody raised his voice against it. When Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, who was in the chair, put the motion on the passage of the resolution, a loud chorus of ayes arose. Only three or four feeble noes were heard when the other side of the question was put.

Votes of thanks were tendered to the people of Cleveland and ex-President W. W. Tracy. The election of treasurer was passed, and the convention adjourned sine die. It will now devolve on the executive committee to choose the treasurer.

THE NEUTRALITY LAWS.

Cruiser Atlanta Sent to Aid Their Enforcement.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—The cruiser Atlanta is under orders to leave New York harbor to-day to enforce the neutrality laws in Cuban waters. She will first stop at Port Au Prince, Hayti, and when she leaves there her movements are apt to be somewhat perplexing to filibustering expeditions menacing the south coast of Cuba. After cruising as long as her coal lasts the Atlanta will go into Santiago de Cuba and lie there until her bunkers are replenished, being held in readiness to go out and give chase to any expedition that may be reported.

This new duty of the Atlanta, together with that of the Raleigh, along the gulf coast of the United States, indicates the determination of the administration to give Spain no opportunity of accusing this government of negligence. While it is believed in official circles that the reports alleging violations of neutrality have been to some extent exaggerated, other American warships will be sent to the Gulf of Mexico if it should be demonstrated that the Atlantic and Raleigh are unequal to the task assigned to them.

The cruiser Montgomery, which recently went to Colon and after spending a week there has now returned to Greytown, had orders to keep a sharp lookout for sympathetic movements in Central America in which Americans might be involved. Several expeditions from Costa Rica and other Central American ports are known to have left for Cuba, and at least one of them has landed on the island. As far as known the United States was not concerned in them, but the Montgomery will continue vigilant until she returns to Mobile, early in July.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—The United States steamship Raleigh sailed from Key West at 11 o'clock on Monday for a cruise at sea between Cuba and the gulf states. It is not known whether her commander has instructions to look out for any filibustering expeditions, but there is no doubt she will endeavor to intercept any unlawful vessels.

BRADSTREET'S VIEWS.

The Past Week in Trade Circles—Improvement Is Steady.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Bradstreet's weekly review says:

"The feature of the business week is the customary check to activity in trading in staple articles of merchandise, due to the near approach of midsummer, with the accompanying stock taking in some lines; in addition to this, perhaps the only thing not pointing to improvement is the reaction of prices of cotton, coal, wheat flour, wheat, corn, oats, pork and lard from previous relative high levels. In almost all other directions reports on the business situation and outlook are exceptionally favorable.

"The more active Pacific coast cities are almost alone in presenting distinct features of trade each week. San Francisco reports that hot winds have admittedly affected the California wheat crop, which now will not be likely to exceed 35,000,000 bushels. Fall trade prospects at Portland, Ore., are bright. Tacoma announces exports of flour, cotton and machinery to the orient and lumber to South Africa, while Seattle has sent a large quantity of salmon to Mediterranean ports.

"In the southern states business continues at about midsummer proportions with improvement in dry goods and groceries at Chattanooga and Atlanta, a better feeling in trade circles at Birmingham and only a moderate expansion of business at Galveston."

PLAGUE RAGES IN FOO CHOW.

SHANGHAI, June 24.—The plague in Foo-Chow is now an established epidemic. It is confined to the city proper, most of the deaths occurring within the walls near the gates. Several cases are alleged to have occurred among the natives of a village on the island of Mantai in the vicinity of the foreign settlement, but the reports do not say that these are real cases of plague. The epidemic is identical with that which visited Hong Kong and Canton last year. It is impossible to institute any sort of sanitary measures in Foo-Choo, and unless the epidemic dies out of its own accord there are good prospects for an alarming mortality.

Complimented Our Ships.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Secretary Herbert received a telegram Monday from Admiral Kirkland, commanding the squadron at Kiel, in which he says that the German emperor visited the cruiser New York on Sunday. The emperor complimented the United States squadron and the New York particularly. He asked the admiral to thank the president of the United States for sending such fine specimens of the American navy to the opening of the canal.

Government Finances.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—According to the treasury statement the excess of expenditures over receipts for the current fiscal year up to date has been $48,429,428, and the deficit will undoubtedly exceed $50,000,000 by the end of this month, which finishes the fiscal year.

PARENT, NOT CHILD, GUILTY.

Responsibility for Children's Mischief Where It Belongs.

In one of her "Talks with Parents" Mrs. Hughes discussed the case of a mother who had severely punished her four-year-old boy for drawing a charcoal picture on the parlor wall. The child being a mere baby, was innocent of all evil intent, unconscious indeed that he had done any wrong. Mrs. Hughes says: "Give your boy material of his own with which to work out his ideas, and treat him as if he were a gift to you from the center of all love and good, and not a representative of evil. If your boy had been supplied properly with lead pencils, black and colored, and with plenty of paper, in sheets and in book form, he would not have marked your wall. Printing paper is best for him, and its cost is trifling. The cost of a cigar will supply him with paper for a month. The paper from the grocer makes excellent drawing paper and costs nothing—supply him with plenty of sand and clay and paper, white and in colors, for drawing, painting, cutting, folding and pasting; and wood for cutting as he pleases; and blocks for building; and old paper boxes and wooden boxes to form cities and mills and cars and engines; and spools and little wheels that have come from broken machines (the works of an old clock may be worth millions to him); and at least a good small saw, and a hammer, and a pair of pincers and some small wire nails. Girls should have most of this material, too, with a slight variation, chiefly the substitution of cloth for wood. The material for constructive occupation costs far less than the material for destructive occupation."—Jenness-Miller Monthly.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

Beecham's pills are for biliousness, bilious headache, dyspepsia, heartburn, torpid liver, dizziness, sick headache, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, loss of appetite, sallow skin, etc., when caused by constipation; and constipation is the most frequent cause of all of them.

Go by the book. Pills 10c and 25c a box. Book FREE at your druggist's or write B. F. Allen Co., 365 Canal Street, New York.

Annual sales more than 6,000,000 boxes.

DELANO DIARY

—The Public school closed today.

—Our readers desiring occupation in the Nursery, Flower, or Seed line should read the advertisement of L. L May & Co. in this weeks GAZETTE.

—The Fourth of July posters were circulated last Saturday. They are attractive and will aid in drawing the usual good sized audience to Delano.

—With a couple of dozen of the leading business men and young men of the place gone to Buffalo this week some of Delano's places appear quite lonesome.

—The bicycle craze is now even greater than was the roller skate craze of a few years ago. Old and young enjoy the sport. But for a genuine old fashioned family outing the trusty old horses and carriage is still relied upon.

—It is to be hoped that the proper committee will see to it that the town pump is in working order, by July 4. The well should be cleaned and the pump repaired; so that man and beast could find a good drink of water without bothering anybody.

—In publishing the Graduating oration of Miss Frances T. Bauman last week a line was inadvertently left out, changing the sense somewhat. Instead of saying of books: "We read them when old." the fair speaker said "We read them when young; we remember them when old."

—Potato bugs are not all dead yet. We found a hill in our garden pretty well covered with a large family of all sizes, busily at work. And while on the way home from Buffalo, and while near that place on Monday evening we saw a man applying paris green to a field of potatoes.

—The present village council seems destined to be known to posterity as the most quarrelsome one ever elected in Delano. The Dictator has not for years had a voice in controlling public affairs; and now that he has, he finds his colleagues are not so easily thumed around as those with whom he used, in former years to meet, consequently there is at about every meeting held, developed an incompatability, amounting almost to a precipitate, upon some occasions.

—There is talk among the City Fathers of filling up the town well. It is about in keeping with some other enterprises of that agust body. It would cost less to clean it out and repair the pump, so that people could depend upon it for drinking and other purposes, when the regular water works happen to run dry. And would be much more sensible than filling up and destroying what has cost the village considerable and has been and if reparied would still be so useful.

—A patron of the creamery complains to us that the street they have to travel with milk on the west side is neglected by the street committee and that they run the risk of spilling their milk while the street committee expends the village money embellishing streets around their own residences and properties. Another west sider objects to his children being obliged to come to town over the railroad bridge in wet weather, and to being left to grope about in the mud and dark while east siders sport upon sidewalks under electric lights.

—Great preparations are going on for a grand celebration on the 4th of July. Delano has the reputation of having what is on the programme every year. People are not obliged to return home at night disappointed. A large turnout is expected this year. Our picnic grounds are as fine as the state affords, and a good time awaits all comers.

—Frost last night did considerable injury to crops in low places, in the neighborhood.

—Prof. Willis E. Johnson, of the St. Cloud Normal School, has been secured to make the 4th of July oration at Delano. Come and hear him.

--The hog ordinance seems to have lapsed into innocuous desuetude, and the aroma of the pig sty, in great profusion is wafted on gentle zephyrs up to the principal business and residence streets and into the houses. If the law, or the officers are quietly slumbering, the pen, the pig and the perfumes are very much in evidence. Of what use is a law unless it is enforced? Of what use is an officer unless he does his duty?

Miss. Minnie Willcutt and her pupils in Dis. 79, Independence had a picnic last Friday at Lake Huey.

Ed Hitzman gave a pleasant dance party to neighbors last Saturday.

The St Anthony Benevoleut Society will go to Loretto Saturday.

Ernest Otto and family and Wm. Zabel and family went to visit Bernard Roehl in Independence Sunday.

Personals.

County Cullings.

A good many attendants at the Distric court at Buffalo this term think it rather hard to be obliged to take County orders to the treasurer and have "Not paid for want of funds" written on them, and be obliged to shave them at the bank or hold them indefinitely.

Our Republican newspaper contemporaries are condemning the Democrats for every thing that don't seem just right. Wonder if they will try to make out that Colonel O'Leary and Commissioner Bugbee the lone Democratic County officals, are to blame for the County Treasury being empty. If they are to blame they must be powerfully slick or the rest of our officials awfull green in county affairs.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to thank all our friends who showed so much kindness and sympathy in our bereavement last Sunday. MR. AND MRS. T. DAVIES.

Veterinary Surgeon.

Dr. Henry O'Brien, Vetrinary Surgeon and Dentist, of Minneapolis, graduate of Montreal Veterinary College, will visit Delano Saturdays.

August Berneck Trial.

On Monday, June 24, at the Court House in Buffalo the trial of August Berneck for manslaughter in the 1st. degree, for kicking Frank Davis in Delano, on Dec. 8, so that he died on Dec. 23 was begun before Judge Pond, County Attorney J. H. Alley, and William E. Culkin for the State; Wendell and Pidgeon and M. A. O'Hair for defendant.

Court opened at about 11 o'clock and the selection of a jury resulted in exhausting the regular panel with only nine men chosen, five talesmen were called and three of them chosen. Those tried and rejected were: J. M. Lambert, John Kohtinek, Jr., August Happe, Louis Bock, Ferdinand Kelsey, J. A. Groves, Fred Shuman, Thomas Moran, Lee Aritt, John F. Pearson, Vick Cady, Charles Bugbee. The Jury chosen to hear the case is: Fred Raische, Truman Senear, C. F Parker, August Happe. Peter Paulson, Samuel Johnson, Jacob Hess, John Hatch, Edward Robasse, William Stokes, Bret Cooley, James Ambler. At 3:30 P. M. the Jury was made up, and W. E. Culkin opened the case for the state.

The defendant August Berneck of Delano was charged with having followed the deceased Frank Davis from Mat. Fautsch's saloon to the alley east; there to have caught him, knocked him down, and kicked and jumped onto him and injured him so that inflammation of the bowels set in and he died therefrom.

Henry Grafft and William Steffes of Delano, and Albert Hainlin, of Winstead, testified to having seen Berneck and Davis in the alley, and to having seen Berneck kicking at him. It was dark so they could not plainly decern all. That Davis lay on his back in a helpless condition and said: "Don't August, lets go into Janikula's and get a drink." and made no resistance. W. E. Long also testified.

Court adjourned till Tuesday, 9 A. M.

Tuesday, Mat Fautsch was sworn, said: Am a saloon keeper, in Delano. Bernick and Davis were in saloon the evening of Dec. 8. Davis called for beer; gave him some, he struck Devine. I pulled him out of doors; did not let him go until he was clear of sidewalk; the sidewalk was eight inches high. The ground was muddy. Davis ran towards alley; Didn't see him again. Berneck came into saloon eight or ten minutes later; showed his fists and said "If I had my shoes on I would have fixed him. There was about seventy-five people in the saloon at the time.

Cross questioned, Fautsch said he backed out the door holding Davis by the shoulders; Davis following him braced against the door and broke a pane of glass; he stumbled and tipped over into the gutter. I said to him "Git now."

Mike Massanz, said he was bartender for Fautsch at the time; and coroberated Fautsch's statements.

Al Hitsman said he was in the saloon but knew nothing of a row. Saw Davis in the saloon.

R. M. Walter, Justice of the Peace, said Davis came to my office between 7 and 8 o'clock; appeared to be suffering; complained of his bowels; next saw him at home one week later, then Monday and Tuesday. Took his ante-mortem statement. The statement was read and said Davis was a Catholic; thought he would die; that August Berneck and Dick Murphy ran after him and struck him and knocked him down. Berneck jumped on him and hurt him in the bowels. Walter said each time soon after returning from Davises Berneck saw him and inquired how Davis was getting along.

Henry Conzet said Davis came to the hotel, the Danforth House, at 12 o'clock that night, seemed to be in pain, groaned a good deal, remained in bed until 10 o'clock next day, ate nothing, drove home in a road cart.

Andrew Pogrzeba saw a man run through the alley who was grumbling.

J. E. Merriman saw Davis in Jonikulas saloon ten minutes past six, he was groaning, went with him to the jail and left him there apparently suffering, saw him later on the street. Dick Murphy came into Jonakulas and said "I guess he has got enough this time."

Dr. Shrader with Dr. Chilton examined Davis, thought he was not badly hurt, afterwards Dr. Shrader saw him again and drew off a quanity of bloody urine, took part in post mortem.

Davis died of inflammation of the bowels.

Drs. E. E. Shrader and T. J. Catlin were both at the autopsy and corroborated Dr. Shrader's statement as to cause of death. The bowels were stuck together, to the sides of the abdomen, and bathed in pus.

Dr. E. E. Shrader had attended Davis after he arrived at home. He died of inflammation of the bowels.

W. Long and Wm. Quinn were also on the stand. State rests.

M. A. O'Hair opened the defense's case, denying that defendant Berneck had kicked and pounced Davis farther than to knock him down.

D. Dugan, saw Davis, he was in half drunken condition, appeared to be suffering.

John Plattner, mearchant, heard a noise in the rear of his store, like some one tumbling over boxes or wood, about 6 or 7 o'clock that evening.

W. F. Kohler denied saying to Walter that he had seen Berneck chasing Davis up Bridge street but did not think it would amount to anything. Because I did not see Berneck outside of the saloon. He testified that Davis ran up bridge street and fell over a wagon tongue.

Jenner Chance claimed that he was with Bert Hainlin that evening from about 5:20 P. M. till 11 P. M. that Hainlin was not out of his sight but once for 3 or 4 minutes while at the jail after the row, and that Hainlin could not have seen what he testified to having seen as to Berneck and Davis being in the alley.

Dr. Cassel, of Cokato, thought that Davis must have had Apendicitis. But answered the hypothetical questions profounded, very much as did the other medical men montioned.

August Berneck, (defendant in the case) sworn, said he knew Davis, remember 8th December. Did not help put him out of the saloon, saw Mat Fautsch and Mike Massanz put him out. I was coming into the saloon from a side door. Fautsch took him by the shoulders, Massanz took hold and they rushed him out. I went out. He was running 50 or 75 feet on Bridge street. I struck him on the back of the head he fell down. He said "August come to Janikula's and have some beer." I said "I have beer enough over me now." I had a light pair of rubbers and light cotton stockings. I did not say any such thing as "it is a good thing that I did not have shoes on." I weigh 170 pounds. I don't remember saying "Let me get at him." Don't think I said it, would not be positive. I ran after, didn't see him fall before I struck him. It was a little muddy. I hit him, he fell on his side. I didn't stand over him at all. It is all a mistake when they say I struck him or kicked at him. I didn't kick at him at all. "He said don't strike." I don't mind going behind the bar and washing hands. About giving him more if I had shoes on is all false. I did not watch for Walter, he met me in our store and such meetings as he mentioned never took place. I run on sidewalk Davis got up quick after I knocked him down and started up alley. I am between 37 and 38 years old, born in Franklin; lived on a farm; kept saloon in Delano, for nine years, sold to Fautsch.

R. M. Walter recalled. Kohler said to me in front of his store "I saw Berneck chase Davis up Bridge steet but thought it would not amount to anything. I did not tell Berneck that Davis was making believe.

County Attorney, J. T. Alley, then made an able address to the jury on behalf of the state setting forth the importanc of enforcing the laws, and as there had been conflicting testimony he was of the opinon that some witnesses had lied. He considered that perjury was no less heinious a crime than that with which the defendant in the case was charged, after reviewing the testimony he left the case with the jury.

J. H. Wendell, of counsel for defese stated his side of the case. He thought it was a question whether the deceased received the injuries resulting in his death at the hands of Mat Fautsch and Mike Massanz in putting him forcibly out of the saloon down over the board sidewalk into the hard gravel street; or by falling over a wagon tongue, or at the hands of Dick Murphy in the dark alley after he left the place where Berneck knocked him down, and thought the jury should bring a verdict for a lesser crime than manslaughter in the first degree.

Judge Pond then went over the definition of various crimes which this might be called, reviewed the testimony and gave the case into the hands of the jury to decide according to their convictions.

An officer was then sworn and the jury locked up for further deliberation on the case.

A. Sosnick was a witness.

The Jury brought in a verdict of guilty of assault in the 2nd degree. The penalty may be from 2 to 5 years imprisonment, or less than $1000 fine; or both.

THE meeting of Republican Leagues at Cleveland, Ohio, June 21, seems to have had too little courage to even attempt to settle the question of what shall be the issue between Republicans and other parties the coming campaign. They were all at sea, some want monometalism, others bimetalism. Some wish to make the tariff the question It was claimed their constitution would not permit them to decide the question. Yet it was expected by the country that they would, at least, express a belief as to what would be best for the G. O. P. to cling to as a principle; whether they would go in for a gold standard or take up the loosing fight for the protection principle again; but the people were disappointed, they left them to make their own choice, and they are apt to choose neither.

The 4th at Delano.

The 4th was celebrated as usual. Everything passed off pleasantly. The procession paraded the principal streets. The Franklin Brass Band furnished good music. Henry Crandal did a good job reading the Declaration of Independence. Prof. Johnson's oration was well received. Dinner was enjoyed The games were amusing; Elmer Erickson proving to be the best all around athlete. The races attracted a big croud on river street; Fred Lindsley and Maggie Steffes were able to distance all competitors. The hose race was a sucess and everybody enjoyed the exhibition of the water works, which cooled the air and laid the dust. Delano is the banner picnic town.

Get a New Dairy Maid.

THE Pioneer Press of June 25, contains an article headed "Product of Creameries." It says "To a person unacquainted with the extent to which dairying is carried on in Minnesota the output of the state seems enormous, and, in fact, so it is. There are 325 dairies now in operation in Minnesota. Of this number eighty have been incorporated this year. The majority of them are co-operative concerns, owned and controlled entirely by the farmers where they are located, who derive a direct benefit from their product. Mr. Graham has estimated the total output of these 325 for the season of 1895 to amount in round numbers, to 30,000,000 pounds of butter. for this product the farmers receive a rate the year round of 20 cents per pound, which would amount to $6,000,000." Freeborn and Steele counties are put down as the banner counties, with fifty creameries and the Pioneer says. "The farmers who contributed in June to these fifty creameries, and by whom they are owned entirely, number 5,000, and Mr. Graham has figured that of the amount of money received from the butter produced by them, each patron received on an average $300 during June. That would amount, Mr. Graham says, to $13, for the production of each cow."

$13 per month for cows, is certainly astonishing! and on reading the article we began to think the Pioneer Press man was among those he described at the beginning of his article, "unacquainted with the extent to which dairying is carried on in Minnesota" and after consulting our local butter maker, who came from the southern part of the state we became still more convinced of that fact. Our butter man says, if the P. P. will drop a naught before it begins its figuring it will come out nearer the truth, that $4.30 per head would be nearer right than $43 per head for receipts from each cow. The P. P. should hire a new dairy maid.

GAZETTE $1.00 per year.

Killed by a Bull.

Special to The Journal.

HOWARD LAKE, Minn., July 1.—Herman Albrecht, proprietor of the general store and flour mill at Crow River, six miles northwest of here, was killed by a bull last night and thrown into the river, where a searching party found him this morning. The bull had but one horn and made for the searchers when they entered the field. He was killed.

Archbishop Hennessey, of Dubuque, promulgated last Saturday the positive decree of the Pope that all members of the Catholic church must withdraw from secret societies, notably the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias.—Minneapolis Times.

Economics.

For the past two years the people of the United States have been having practical lessons in economy. Money has been unusually scarce and hard to get. The best securities have been demanded by money loaners; interest has been exacted with more than customary promptness, and the borrower has been obliged, from force of circumstances to live within his means; to borrow no more than he could return with interest; employers have refrained from hiring more help than they could pay for. Economy is the watchword, not only in business matters but all along the line. Everybody is cutting expenses that can. Families instead of enjoying their usual Summer outings are at home, working to keep expenses down, through these hard times.

In the West, among farmers and agricultural people, economics in all its phazes has been thoroughly learned; they have studied to produce more with less expense and are qualified to give an intelligent opinion on this subject. Instead of the large fields of golden wheat, a little rye, some barley, a good deal of corn, oats, potatoes and other products are raised. More cows are pastured, and dairying has taken a leading place among the occupations of the farmer's household. Hogs are raised for market; and poultry plays an important part in the assetts of every well regulated farm.

People have learned valuable lessons, by practical experience, which in times of plenty and while enjoying the comforts obtained by abundance of money they never would have learned though they had been furnished all the literature ever written on political economy. They have learned to be more economical all along the line. They find they can do without, when they have to, many things before considered indispensable. They can, also, produce, and reap a benefit from small things on the farm, before beneath the notice of the independent farmer. Instead of depending altogether on wheat, which, if by any misfortune, failed to be a good crop, or a fair price left them in debt, they now depend on no particular product, but make the most they can of every available thing the farm will support. With a little extra work, at present to be had cheaply, farmers can keep a variety of animals and have them ready for market when they are in demand; they can raise a few bushels of beans, onions, rutabagas or turnips, to aid in swelling the income of the farm; and these hard times have induced many to take advantage of their opportunities.

Should times again become prosperous it will, doubtless, be years before people will again be induced to borrow money; or to go in debt for machinery, or other things, paying out the amount of a good farm hand's wages in interest every year. Chances for speculation will be carefully weighed before investments are made, everybody knowing that payday comes as surely for follies and blunders made as for actual necessities purchased. Having these practical lessons in economics by heart, as they now have, people are prepared to read, and understand and form some opinion as to theories advanced by would-be instructors in economics.

National economics are but economics on a little larger scale than we have at home; family, school district, town, county, state, economics lead up to National Economics by easy grades. What applies to proper living in families, understood by all, needs but to be figured with the addition of a few cyphers, to make it National Economics, governmental economics. Taking this view of National Economics there is no excuse for ignorance, no reason for complaining that "we know nothing about it." Every one should measure up what he knows from experience and compare it with what he can learn of governmental affairs and draw his own conclusions; and he will more likely be right than if he depends on what party politicians tell him along about election time. Do your own thinking and use your own judgment, that's your privilege, and if you would live in a free country you should exercise your rights.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, June 28, 1895

No member of the administration takes any stock in the predictions being made in some quarters concerning the probable early run that will be made on the gold in the Treasury, now that the bond syndicate has made its last payment on account of bonds purchased. On the contrary, members of the administration consider the outlook very cheerful, The Treasury now has a little more than $100,000,000 in gold, and officials do not expect that amount to be materially reduced during this year, and their confidence has a solid foundation. Gold only goes to Europe when somebody can profit by its shipment, The season for the shipment of our agricultural products to Europe is now almost open, and those shipments always make the balance of trade in favor of the United States for a time, and if it does not bring us European gold it gives us a gold balance over there which prevents our having to send any gold over for some time. Besides, unless all the big financiers are mistaken, the demand for American securities of all kinds is once more on the increase in Europe. The unloading of those securities by European holders has been one of the reasons for sending American gold to Europe. There is no good reason for the direful predictions which have followed sensational statements as to the reason why the bond syndicate made the last payment on those bonds this week, instead of waiting until next October, as their contract allowed them to do. The matter was probably closed at this time because the syndicate found it convenient to do so, and it is nonsense, in the opinion of Treasuty officials, to say that the syndicate has designs upon the gold it has paid into the Treasury.

Secretary Olney is thinking very seriously of applying competitive examinatton methods of the U. S. Consular service, so far as their nomination to office is concerned, of course they would have to take their chances of being confirmed by the Senate after passing the examination and getting nominated. It is admitted by our travelers that ahe longer a consul remains in office the more useful he becomes to the country he represents, and European governments never think of removing a consul, except for cause. Secretary Olney, in addition to the examination of consuls, would like to see the service placed on a permanent basis, so that young men would take it up as a life career.

Much significance is attached by republicans to an interview with Representative Cannon, of Illinois, which was published in Washington this week. It wasn't west Mr. Cannon said that aattracted attention, as his talk is not considered important—he does too much of it—but what he didn't say. He occupied nearly a column discussing the Presidential possibilities of his party, mentioning Reed, who he is supposed to favor, Mc Kinley, Allison, Morton, Cullom and even "Cush" Davis, but leaving out Mr. Benjamin Harrison, notwithstanding that gentleman's recent attempts to have himself considered the leading candidate for the domination. As Mr. Cannon has just returned from an eastern trip his interview may be part of a plan of the Reed men to kill the Harrison boom by ignoring it.

Great interest is felt in washington in the change of administration in England, because of the bearing it may have on the silver question in this country. Lord Salisbury, the new premier, is friendly to silver and Mr. Balfour, a member of the new cabinet, has a parliamtery record as a bimetallist of the most advanced type. It is natural therefore that hopes should be indulged that England might change her policy of opposition to silver and join in a movement for international bimetallism. It is just as well, however, to remember when indulging in such hopes that in England the national finances have never figured as an issue in politics, and that, unless there is a radical upheaval of precedent, the personal opinions of Lord Salisbury and Mr. Balfour will not be sufficient to change the financial policy of that country. It is quite certain, however, that if the coming parliimentary elections shall result in favor of the conservative party, to which the new cabinet belongs, that a strong effort will be made by the silver men of Europe and America to get England to declare in favor of bimetallism. But all previous efforts in that line have been balked by the mighty influence of the financiers of Lombard street, who forced the adoption of the gold standard and who will fight silver to the last ditch.

Delano's 4th of July Oration.

Patriotism, What?

W. E. JOHNSON, State Normal School, St. Cloud, Minn.

Man finds himself in an intricate network of relations. Springing out of these relations he finds there are certain duties and obligations due him toward his fellows in the great institutions of mankind, the business world, the family, the school, the state, and the church.

Man has risen to his present highly complex state of civilization by obeying the laws of his nature. First, he must unite with his fellow men. No individual can supply all his wants without contributions from his fellows. Think how dependent we are upon other men for the most common necessities of our existence. Who of us could be his own tailor, shoemaker, and carpenter? Who can weave the fabric that makes his clothes, tan the leather that makes his shoes, and prepare the timber that makes his home? Even this presupposes materials already procured. The shoemaker goes on making shoes for other people, depending upon the carpenter to build his houses and the tailor to clothe him. How linked together we are even in the business world, each working for all and all for each!

We do not usually realize what we are talking about when we speak of our being independent. The man most nearly independent of his fellows is the savage, whose wants are few and who needs little assistance from others in supplying them. Mankind has been advancing from this stage of independence, not dependence, to one of interdependence, dependence among; each looking to others for help and in turn adding his mite to the welfare of others.

There are certain conditions necessary for combination. Man will not combine with his fellow men unless he has confidence in them, respect for them, and is unselfish at least to the degree that he will give his own immediate well being for the advancement of their interest. This is the beginning of love, a desire to do something for the object loved. It is a beginning of the fulfillment of the great law to love one another. This is perhaps the essential condition for a division of labor.

Man must be protected in his rights. His nature demands that justice shall be meted out and the deed shall be returned to the doer. For mutual self-protection, that each may be secured in his rights the institution of state is formed.

The fundamental law or universal principle of the state is that each man, as a rational being, shall be secured in his right to the free expression of his nature and in the logical consequence of his deed.

If by frugal, honest labor he has earned a home, it shall be his. If his rights of labor are trampled upon by the heel of Capital it is the duty of the state to adjust the conditions and right the problem. Shall the criminal be given the fruitage of his deed? Yes, for the thief by his act declares property not sacred and as a consequence his becomes the forfeit. The murderer takes from someone the right to live. His violation of the prerogative of life in its reaction takes away his right to live or at least his right to freedom.

The state is thus an outgrowth of man's unfon for procuring the necessities of life and is a unity based upon that universal phase of our nature which demands justice. The state is then a part of humanity, not something outside of it; a part of ourselves and we are a part of it. The government is an expression of that phase of our nature which says, "man is responsible for his deeds, the deed shall return to the doer."

Who, seeing the state as a part of himself, of his own higher nature, can fail to be patriotic? Who, seeing his nation as an expression of a phase of his nature which finds responsive echo in every human soul and places him in harmony with the great plan of his almighty Creator, can be lacking in love for his country?

In the many relations of life what shall be our attitude? Shall we shut ourselves into narrowed circles of thinking and living, cramp our lives into the sordid experiences of temporal existence? Or shall we let our aspiring souls flow out and expand in the genial sunshine of the liberties which our fathers have bequeathed to us and for which they died? In this our beloved American republic, founded upon the true thought of God for a government by the governed, let us use our opportunities, realize our possibilities by living lives worthy this day and age.

"Eternal vigilence is the price of liberty." We must never close our eyes to actual conditions. While our government is a product of the common consciousness of all the people it finds its expression and machinery through representative individuals who are given great power. These powers may be used for the furthering of the interests of the individuals at the expense of the common interests of all.

Abuses creep in and men sometimes use their stations in life to gratify their lower, baser ambitions. It seems, sometimes, as though one must stoop to knavery to protect himself. This view however, is due to our short-sightedness. The life lost in a righteous cause is only to find a higher one. Our set backs are our best helpers. These hard times all over the country gives us a view of ourselves and a keener insight into our true condition, leaving us freer and stronger.

We are passing through what is perhaps one of the most important crises in the history of our nation. Never before do we find such an indifference to political creeds and party lines as such. People seem to be losing faith in any political party as the Moses to lead us out of the wilderness of unemployment, low wages, and general discontent.

We are all looking at state questions, such as the money, the tariff and kindred problems, not as party measures but to see what they are in and through themselves. We are beginning to refuse to see everything through the colored and magnifying glasses of any political party whatever its past achievments or its promises for the future. Can you ask for a better sign of growing intelligence than the demand of people to see things as they are?

The innocent self-assurance of a political party reminds one of the doubtless familiar story of the man who was sued for borrowing a kettle and returning it broken. His lawyer opened his case as follows: "Gentlemen of the jury, we could prove to you a great many things in this case but shall attempt to make evident only these three facts: Firstly, my client never borrowed the kittle; secondly, the kittle was broken when he borrowed it; thirdly, the kittle was whole when he returned it." People are not waiting for convincing proofs from befogging politicians. The Holy Writ says: "Know the truth and the truth shall make you free." It is the truth in the silver question we need and not some party's version of it.

But while we have political spoils we will have political parties and far be it from me to decry parties or creeds; what I do protest againt is surrendering to them our thinking, giving ourselves to them. We ought, perhaps, to find a membership in a party, to belong IN a political party but never to belong TO one.

Humanity is what we should belong to. We do whether or not we will it, but we do not all find a conscious existence there. We do live for humanity but many of us are not receiving the happiness and the blessings which come from a conscious surrender of one's narrow individual life into the lives of his fellow men.

Think how little we do directly for ourselves. We make shoes for other people, we build houses for others, we guide other people's children along paths of learning; why is not our interest and accompanying happiness there in our work and not wrapped up in what others are doing for us. The divine direction, "Let no man seek his own but every man another's wealth," should find an application in our every day experiences.

To review some of our points: Our present development in civilization is due to a division of labor. Each person finds some place in society and works for his fellow men and society in turn cares for him.

Our union in society is due to a growing love for and confidence in our fellow men. The state grows out of this union in the buisness world and consists in a uniting of man with man for the common protection of his rights and liberties. Where the government is a spontaneous expression of the whole people as in our own America we have a government the freest and yet the most secure. Most secure because most free. One which will progress as we progress. The future of America; it is what we make it, for it is what we make ourselves.

Will patriotism die out? Seeing our higher nature mirrored in our institutions and all our lives reflected there ask rather, "can we be anything if not patriotic?" But the insight must come. We must know the idea to actualize it. We must grow in intelligence for our growth in civilization is determined by our advancement in intelligence. Our schools must be supported and improved. Our children must get from us the heritage of free institutions and liberal opportunities for self development.

Patriotism consists in giving up one's existence in his narrow self and seeking a higher life in the lives of humanity, in harmonizing his life with the thought which the state embodies.

Our patriotism is to be measured by results. The extent to which we leave to posterity a freer, purer government and endow our children with the intelligence and self-determination to find themselves in their institutions is the measure of our patriotism.

John McGary Again.

The growing crops are doing well, but some of them would be all the better by by having a little rain.

The funeral of Mrs. John Pagenkopf, who died on last Thursday, was largly attended on Sunday at the M. E. Church Armstrong, the house could not hold near all the people in attendance. She was buried in Lewis cemetery, Armstrong.

Hay and rye harvets has begun and now there will be plenty of work for farmers until snow flies.

Mr. N. Batdorf, and Miss Dolly Fisher, of Independence, were married in Minneapolis, on the 27th. of last month, may happiness and prosperity attend them through life, is the wish of the writer.

We understand that Mr. Batdorf still intends to pursue his collegiate studies at Hamline University.

Henry Fogleman went to Minneapolis this morning on the early train.

Caiaphas the High Priest has appointed three judges to compose what is known as the court of appeals, which has just declared that a pension is not a vested right, and can at any time be withheld. so much for Cleveland on the pension question. Then these three judges have a right to withhold or to annul all pensions. Law is nothing more or less than the opinion of man, handed down from those functionarys of authority by appointment. Have the people in this country no sovereign rights?

Since the decision of the Supreme Court on the income tax, it is said there has been a lobby formed to urge Congress to reiund the income tax paid during the war, amounting to about $56,000,000. Will they do it? It seems most anything can be done in these latter days.

Some of our leading apostles in politics seem to think if we harvest a good crop in the half bushel that the money question will cut no figure with the farmer and laboring man, one good crop will put them to sea in regard to all things pertaining to their future wellfare and prosperity, but Mr. Editor not so. the farmers and laboring men of this country are beginning to see eye to eye, and we know that unless things take a radical change, we shall never enter the promised land of prosperity in the flesh. Mr. Rotsdhilds & Co. is forging the chains to bind not only this country but the whole world, and if our Congress and the leaders of this country intend to bow the knee to the God of Baal (money lords) then our future hope has perished. We read in the book of books that nothing is impossible with God, but is it a fact that there is nothing impossible with the American Congres, political trickers and the money lordf of this country.

These fostering lovers of money who have no sense of honor, and who would sell their birth right for a mess of potage, are not fit to dictate to a free American people what our monetary system shall be, they, like sheep, have gone astray, and the people must contend for their vested rights, guaranteed to them by our Revolutionary fathers and the Constitution. If the blind lead the blind both will fall into the ditch.

The corruption and intrigue in politics has become nauseating to men of sense and honor and it is high time it was called down. No one party is responsible for all the trickery and devilment that is being carried on at the present time, but should things keep on at this high rate of speed it will be but a little while until the poor of this country will be pilgrims and sojourners in a strange land. But Mr. Editor I will leave off any further quotations, by saying we haye a wide open policy and the whole world is in the swim.

The Fourth of July is coming and will soon be here in my imagination. I can hear oratory after oratory coming from the plattorm and the sound and stench of the fire cracker is in the air in sightly vision I can see the rag muffins on dress parade, the stars and strips are floating from many a house top, and why should we not be proud of boasted America. THE Bell Telephone company has taken the necessary legal steps to secure possession of the remainder of the earth.

P. T. BARNUM has left his mark on the page of American history. There are seven or eight post offices in this country called Jumbo.

THE ascendency of the new woman is assuming an alarming phase. A New York man on complaint of his wife has been sent to Blackwell's island for refusing to do the washing and ironing.

A NEW YORK minister preached a sermon on "Potatoes, and How to Raise Them." It is now only a step to texts on "Raspberry Jam and Jamming," "Milking a Cow on the Right Side," etc.

SODA-PROPELLED engines are now being used on some French railways. The invention is based on the principle that solutions of caustic soda which have high boiling points liberate the absorbing steam and work noiselessly.

HARVARD has just given its diploma to 678 graduates, Yale to 575, and the University of Michigan to 691. Never before were there so many college-bred men and women in the world as to-day. What will they all do? At any rate, it is as true as when Webster said it—there's room enough at the top.

AMERICAN aluminum is to be largely used in the construction of war vessels to be built hereafter, the many advantages possessed by the light metal being apparent to the naval constructors of the world. It was Yankee ingenuity which invented the new process of obtaining aluminum at small expense, but the whole world has benefited from the discovery.

THAT idea of a double or multiple personality, first elaborated by Robert Louis Stevenson in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," is now being seriously considered by physicians and scientists. Several instances of distinct states of consciousness in the same person, and of a failure when in one state to remember anything which happened in the other, have lately come before our courts of law.

THE new portable Maxim gun, a small, innocent-looking affair weighing but 45 pounds, bids fair to revolutionize modern methods of war. Its muzzle can be moved out by the bearer in all directions, and it will fire 600 bullets a minute, sending them through 40 inches of oak. It is estimated that an army of 10,000 men equipped with this death-dealing terror would be equal to an army of 1,000,000 men with the present weapons.

ONE peculiarity of the American volunteer army in the civil war was illustrated in the Sheridan family. One member of the family was a major general, another served as staff officer and another as a private in one of the Ohio regiments. In Europe the commander of an army would not permit his brother to serve as a private. Influence would have been used to advance him. But Gen. Phil Sheridan was proud of the fact that his brother carried a rifle through the war and did his duty well.

THE English naval expert at Kiel who placed the crews of the American warships third in value and efficiency, those of Germany being placed first and those of France second, was undoubtedly prejudiced. The correspondents of the German and Austrian newspapers agree that the American ships were superior to all others in ease of motion and the exactness of their maneuvers; this would argue that they had the most efficient crews. The New York was generally considered the finest ship at Kiel.

AN English educationalist proposes to introduce into the education of young women the principles of chivalry toward the male sex. He maintains that this has been entirely neglected in the teaching of girls, and while boys have been taught to pay due deference to women, the girls have not been taught that they owed any consideration to anyone, either of their own or the opposite sex. The result has been selfish and inconsiderate women who accept all chivalrous attentions from men as a right, without a thought that they owe the courtesy of a thank you in return.

THEY have already in use in Paris and its environs horseless carriages propelled by electric or petroleum motors, the latter being the cheaper. These vehicles are constructed to look like broughams, buggies and phaetons, and in a recent road race from Paris to Bordeaux and return, a distance of 750 miles, thirty such vehicles competed, and the winner made the distance in a little more than 48 hours, its average speed being over 15 miles an hour. The cost of running the horseless victoria at a speed of 8 miles an hour is said to be only about two cents a mile.

ST. JEROME mentions a widow who had married her twenty-third husband, who, in his turn, had been married to twenty wives. Elizabeth Massi, who died at Florence in 1786, had been married to seven husbands, all of whom she outlived. She espoused the last at the age of 60. When on her deathbed she recalled the good and bad points in each of her husbands and singled out her sixth spouse as her favorite, and desired that her remains might be interred near his. The death of a soldier is recorded in 1874 who had five wives, and his widow, aged 90, wept over the grave of her fourth husband.

CURRENT OF DEATH.

It Closes the Career of Dr. Buchanan at Sing Sing.

Electrocution of the Wife-Murderer—A Second Shock Necessary to Complete the Grewsome Work—His Case in the Courts.

The witnesses assembled in the warden's office and at 11:15 were conducted to the execution chamber, which adjoins the cells set apart for the use of prisoners awaiting the death penalty.

At 11:21, exactly one minute after Buchanan entered the chamber, a nod was given by Dr. Gibbs, who officiated as time-keeper, and the electrician pressed the button which was the signal to the unseen executioner to turn on the fatal current.

The persistency with which Buchanan clung to life marked his case to the end. Since the death of the wife whom he murdered on April 25,

DR. ROBERT W. BUCHANAN.

1892, in order to re-marry the wife from whom he had previously been divorced, his case has been marked by uncertainties which have made it famous.

His case has been twice before the court of appeals of the state, once before the United States supreme court, and any number of delays and unusual legal proceedings have marked its course through the lower state and federal courts. Invitations to his execution were sent out four times by Warden Sage, but in the first three instances, on one ground or another, a respite was secured and the infliction of the death penalty was postponed.

A TRIBUTE PAID.

Omaha Business Men Express Admiration for Gov. Holcomb's Course.

OMAHA, Neb., July 1.—The Omaha Commercial club gave at their rooms Friday night one of the most brilliant banquets in the history of Omaha. The object of the banquet was twofold. It was first designed to celebrate the wonderful prosperity which is dawning upon this state as a consequence of the bountiful crops which are assured to the state this year, and which will be by far the greatest in the history of Nebraska. On account of the widespread tales of destitution in Nebraska which have been known all over the land it seemed fitting that a public event should be the medium to notify the country of the great contrast between this and last year, for there is not now even one county of the state in which the brightest prospects for plenty do not obtain, the drought section of last year being especially favored.

The second object of the banquet was to express the sentiments of the business men of Omaha in admiration of the administrative course and acts of Gov. Silas A. Holcomb. This fact is of peculiar significance on account of the fact that last year the candidacy of Judge Holcomb was opposed by the leading business men of Omaha for the reason that it was feared that his election as a populist would be detrimental to the interests of the state. This banquet was to show the governor that his public acts had been such as to receive the warm commendation of the business men of this city, and that the credit of the state has not in any way suffered through his public course.

Yale Wins from Harvard.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 29.—The Yale-Harvard boat race was rowed here Friday afternoon, again resulting in a victory for the blue. The Yale crew finished 10 lengths ahead of the Harvard crew. Time, 21:30.

It was Yale's fourth consecutive victory, and her eighth in nine years, and the presence of 200 yards of open water between the shells robs the triumph of a keen sportsmanlike flavor. The race completed a clean sweep for Yale in the past college year, the football, baseball, track athletics and crew championships for 1895 now standing to her credit.

Three Noted Men Gone.

LONDON, July 2.—Prof. Huxley is dead. The close of the great scientist's life came at 3:45 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., July 1.—R. W. Kidder, the prominent lumber dealer of Park City, who is also well known in the east, fell from an embankment in front of his residence Saturday morning and broke his neck, causing instant death.

FOUR ARE SLAIN.

A Bloody Quadruple Tragedy in Trigg County, Ky.

PADUCAH, Ky., July 3.—News was received here Monday of a bloody quadruple tragedy in a remote section of Trigg county last Friday night. John Rhodes and Chat Hammond were shot to death by Abithal Colston, an ex-convict, and the next morning the bodies of Colston and Mollie Smith, his mistress, were found in the road riddled with buckshot.

It seems that Colston, who was but recently released from the Frankfort penitentiary, where he had been sent for horse stealing, had ever since his release been gunning for all who had been witnesses against him. Among the witnesses were five brothers named Rhodes, and they were the first sought out by the ex-convict. Meeting John Rhodes at Rhodes' Landing he shot him down, instantly killing him. He then started for the other Rhodes boys, and not far from where he had shot John Rhodes, he saw Chat Hammond giving Al Rhodes a drink of water from a spring. This so exasperated Colston that instead of killing Rhodes as he had intended he killed Hammond. He then left Rhodes who was unarmed and went to where his mistress, Mollie Smith, lived. They spent part of the night in drunken carousal, and shortly after daylight both were found dead in the road. Whether they were shot by indignant citizens or by the Rhodes boys or their friends may never be known.

ADMIRAL DA GAMA'S SUICIDE.

His Dead Body Horribly Mutilated by Victorious Brazilian Soldiers.

BUENOS AYRES, June 29.—From one of the rebels who escaped capture by the government troops after the insurgent defeat near Santa Ana, Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, details of the last battle in which Admiral Da Gama took part and of his suicide have been secured. The admiral, at the head of a force of 400 sailors, was engaged by a brigade of government soldiers numbering 1,200. The battle lasted five hours, and at least 300 men were killed or wounded. Some of the insurgents advised Da Gama to retreat, but he refused and they abandoned him. With a handful of men the admiral repulsed five charges of the government cavalry, but the struggle was hopeless, and, seeing that all was lost, Da Gama ordered a retreat and then cut his own throat. Da Gama's body was taken to Santa Ana by the government troops and there horribly mutilated. The throats of many of the captured rebels were cut by the victorious soldiers.

Bradstreet's Review of Trade.

NEW YORK, July 1.—Bradstreet sums up the trade situation of the past week as follows:

"Dominating business conditions of the week are the continued large demand for and further increases in prices for iron and steel, which have surprised even the trade. The jump in rail prices and scarcity of and higher quotations for plates and nails, have tended to produce temporary scarcity. Improving wheat conditions have finally convinced many in the trade that there are likely to be fully 425,000,000 bushels harvested in the United States this year, which, with a probable 'available' surplus of 90,000,000 bushels being carried over at this time, points to only 100,000,000 bushels, possibly 110,000,000 bushels or more, available for export during the next twelve months, which is less than any year since 1890. With short crops abroad, in some instances, this can hardly fail to bring a higher range of prices."

"Bikes" Shut Out.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Bicycles can be kept out of office buildings if the owners of the latter choose to make rules and regulations to that effect. Judge Payne so decided Monday in denying the bill for an injunction restraining the Galena Trust & Safety Vault company and other owners of the Fort Dearborn office building from interfering with Attorney John H. Breckenridge, a tenant, while taking his cycle to his office in that building.

Coinage for June.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Coinage executed at the United States mints during June was very light, being only: Gold, $1,750,000; silver, $440,043, and minor coin, $71,200. Only 12,000 standard silver dollars were coined during the month.

To Be Extradited.

BOSTON, July 1.—Chief Inspector Watts received a telegram from Inspector Hougeton, at Saltille, Mexico, Thurday, stating that extradition papers had been granted in the case of A. J. Hosler, the colored young man who is wanted in this city for embezzling $8,000 or $10,000 from his former employer, Counsellor Henry D. Hyde.

Convicted of an Awful Crime.

BOSTON, July 1.—Angus D. Gilbert, charged with brutally assaulting and then killing 8-year-old Alice M. Sterling in Dorchester, has been found guilty of murder in the first degree.

Convicted of Smuggling.

TOLEDO, O., July 1.—Mme. Vermilyea, a corset-maker, formerly of Belleville and Toronto, Ont., was convicted in the United States court Friday on three counts of smuggling corsets into the United States from Canada. The goods, it was shown, were brought in at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. The madame has asked for a new trial.

Puts Cash in Circulation.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., July 1.—Two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars, the July interest on the bonds of the state, will be paid to-day. The state treasury has on hand $923,000.

FIVE FIREMEN DEAD.

Crushed to Death While Fighting Fire.

One of the Most Frightful Calamities in the History of Minneapolis and the Northwest—The Property Loss is $100,000.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28.—Five firemen dead, and as many more lying at their homes or in the various hospitals with severe injuries, and the $100,000 crockery establishment of McDonald Bros., the largest store of its kind in the city, in a wreck—such is the story in a nutshell of Minneapolis' most disastrous fire of recent years.

Not since the Tribune building holocaust has the city suffered such a terrible catastrophe; never in its existence has the Minneapolis fire department suffered such a loss in deaths: The dead are:

Joseph W. Hoy, pipeman, No. 2 truck.
Walter Richardson, No. 6 hose.
Frank Euline, lieutenant No. 6.
John Horner, No. 3 truck.
Christian Sande, No. 5 hose.

The injured:

Ed Thellen, lieutenant truck No. 2; bruised and injured internally and back injured.

Capt. Cadwell, No. 6: side and back hurt, internal injuries.

Frank Egan, No. 1 hose; side and back hurt.

Henry Gau, supply wagon; back hurt; will probably die.

Bert Thomas, No. 8 hose; injured; not seriously.

The fire broke out shortly after 10 o'clock last night, starting in the rear portion of the McDonald Crockery company's building, 240 and 242 First avenue south. It was first discovered by a party of young men passing along the avenue at the time. The iron shutters in the rear and side of the building were closed and when first seen the entire interior in the rear portion seemed almost a mass of flame. As near as can be ascertained the fire originated in the rear portion of the building on a lower floor, and the flames shot like lightning up through the old elevator well at the back burst through the roof.

An alarm was hurriedly turned in from two or three neighboring boxes and was soon followed by a second alarm. Despite the efforts of the fire department, however, the flames spread over the entire building, being aided in their work by the iron shutters, which served to make the four-story brick building a veritable chimney.

The fireman had been on the roof of the Barge block but a few moments when a loud crash and the "boom" almost as of a cannon's having been fired off startled them, and the whole big plate glass front of the North Star clothing company's store, at 43 and 45 Washington avenue south, blew out, simultaneously with the crashing in of the rear portion nearest the fire, where a sort of light well is located. The broken glass from the clothing company's store was scattered in every direction and many narrowly escaped injury. A lady passing in the street at the time fainted and one man, whose name could not be ascertained, was knocked fully 20 feet, but was picked up by the bystanders, unhurt.

The explosion in the North Star clothing company's store seemed the signal for general disaster, and was the death knell of five brave firemen and perhaps of more. The explosion was followed by a general crashing and breaking of glass in the McDonald building, the falling of iron shutters and the loud crashing in of two of the upper floors. With a mighty roar the flames shot up and had burned but a few moments in the deluge of water poured upon it, when the rear portion of the side wall, facing the alley, fell with a crash, where a score or more of firemen were at work.

As soon as the dust and smoke which arose from the fallen debris had cleared away the work of removing the wounded was begun. Scores of willing hands moved away the weight of debris, and the injured ones were tenderly lifted and carried to the nearest place where they could be cared for. Dr. Kilvington's office was converted in to a temporary hospital, and one man was carried into Hofflin,s drug store on the corner of First avenue and Third street. To Dr. Kilvington's office were taken John Gray, of Hook and ladder No. 3, Capt. Cadwell, of No. 6; Henry Gau, of No. 1. All were seriously injured, and their cries and groans as they lay stretched upon the floor were pitiful in the extreme. Capt. Cadwell was found to be injured about the back and sides and so badly crushed that it was feared that he had been hurt internally. At his own request he was taken to St Barnabas Hospital.

The total loss by the fire, as nearly as it could be estimated last night, will approximate from $109,000 to $110,000, almost wholly covered by insurance. The McDonald building may be rated as a total loss, the entire interior having been entirely gutted and the walls ruined beyond repair.

A number of abutting buildings were slightly burned, but not enough to do any damage, the falling wall having done slight damage to the roof of the building occupied by Walton & Love's saloon.

This is New.

It looks as if a long-felt want has been supplied. The world of toast lovers, and it is a large world, has sighed for a method to keep toast both crisp and hot. The old-fashioned toast rack conserved its crispiness but provided excellent facilities for the escape of its heat, while to serve it wrapped in a napkin keeps it warm, indeed, but keeps it moist as well. An inventive genius has solved the problem, and in the production of a "toast crisper" made life again worth living. The "crisper" is not unlike a chafing dish in appearance and scheme. There is a covered pan, and a lamp; the toast goes into the pan, the lamp is lighted, and crispiness begins to last until the demand is satisfied.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

Right or Left?

It has been asserted with much authoritative emphasis, that inability to sleep on the left side is indicative of disorder or feebleness of the heart. But here comes somebody who talks thus about sleeping on the left side: "It is the most prolific cause of nightmare, and also of the unpleasant taste in the mouth on arising in the morning. All food enters and leaves the stomach on the right side, and hence sleeping on the left side soon after eating involves a sort of pumping operation which is anything but conducive to sound repose. The action of the heart is also seriously interfered with and the lungs unduly compressed. Hence it is best to cultivate the habit of always sleeping on the right side, although Sandow and other strong men are said to invariably sleep on their backs." Well, "doctors disagree," but our own experience is that if you are going on a journey, and secure a compartment in the Pullman sleeper on the "Burlington" vestibuled limited, it will not make any difference on which side you sleep—you will have a good rest; and as for "unpleasant taste in the mouth on rising" the appetizing breakfast in the dining car will quickly and effectually remove that. In going to Chicago or St. Louis, see that your ticket agent gives you a ticket via the Burlington Route, or write to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

FLEMING'S CLEVER WIFE

BY LUKE SHARP.

Not to make a mystery of this story and thus harrow up the reader's feeling, as we go along with the recital of the curious game of cross-purposes at which Minnie Fleming and her husband played, I will state the facts of the case plainly at the beginning so that everyone may understand the situation.

Minnie Fleming was a subdued, quiet little woman with something like ten times the amount of brains her husband possessed, but she was not aware of it and would have been very indignant if anyone had ventured to suggest such a thing, for she looked up to her husband with love, admiration and respect.

Knowing Jim Fleming well, it always seemed to me that his wife's adoration for him was entirely misplaced. This may be professional jealousy, for I have to admit that I never could read with patience anything Fleming ever wrote. His work seemed to me, not to put it too plainly, guff of the slushiest sort, and there is too much of that kind of writing in the world now. Jim Fleming is a big, gruff, somewhat good-natured person with a thorough belief in his own abilities, which, as I have intimated, most of us do not think justifiable by facts. He is the editor of "Pot-Shots," a London weekly that used to have a large circulation which is now generally understood to have fallen off on account of the tremendous competition there is in the journalistic business. It is a paper that offers two thousand pounds sterling insurance money to the heirs of a man who is killed by falling out of a balloon, if at the time of the disaster he happens to have a copy of "Pot-Shots" in his pocket.

Now it happened that Mrs. Minnie Fleming had literary ideas that were promptly crushed by her big husband. She possessed, as I have said, an amazing respect for his literary judgment, and with fear and trembling she had on several occasions submitted little stories to him, hoping that they might merit a place between the covers of "Pot-Shots," but Jim ridiculed the stupidity of these yarns so severely that Mrs. Fleming, after a quiet little cry all by herself, showed him no more of these efforts at fiction. Nevertheless, she thought her stories, if not good enough for "Pot-Shots," might be palmed off on other less well edited journals, so she took to sending her stories round to one after another of the London publications, getting them back as a general rule, but having one taken now and then—just enough success to keep up her courage. You may be sure that she took good care not to let her husband know anything of these excursions into the fields of literature, but she hoped to be able to earn something with her pen, with the humble desire of helping Jim out, if ever he wanted a little additional money. She had read pretty little stories about wives who had saved a penny to-day and threepence to-morrow, storing the coins away so that when they were poured out, on the coming of a family crisis, they amounted to a wonderful fund that tided over all the difficulties. She soon found that her chief customer was the editor of The Family Bouncer, a weekly paper that went in strongly for fiction of all kinds. Her little stories seemed to suit the kind of readers who took that celebrated journal, and, although the pay was small at first, the "crisis fund," as she called it, was constantly augmented.

At last she received a very nice letter from the editor of The Family Bouncer. He said he had been watching her little stories with interest for some time past, and that he felt certain she could write a serial if she set her mind to it. Without making any definite promises he wrote that he hoped she would try, and that she would let him see the results. This letter filled the timorous little heart of Minnie with joy, and she set herself to work to write the long story.

Mrs. Fleming wrote under the name of "Hilda Markham," and the result of the appearance of her first long story was that Greig & Co., the literary agents, wrote to her and offered to place any stories she cared to write at as advantageous prices as the market would afford, for a commission of ten per cent. This offer she accepted, and the results were extremely gratifying to her, whatever they may have been to the editors who had to pay the increased prices.

And this brings us to the point where this story really begins. One editor generally knows pretty well which of his contemporaries, esteemed or otherwise, has the largest circulation, and which has not, and Jim Fleming saw with dismay that the circulation of his own paper was falling rapidly, and that it was evident that his penny public was drifting over to The Family Bouncer. In investigating the reasons for this he quickly came upon the bald fact that the increase in his rival was largely due to the stories of the new writer, Hilda Markham. So he resolved to get a story from that lady at all hazards, and thus save his own circulation, which was coming down like a man falling from a balloon, eager to bestow the insurance money on his surviving relatives.

It was one of Jim's theories that women have no heads for business, and that of all women in the world his own wife had the least capacity in that direction. He made up his mind that he would go as far as one hundred and fifty pounds sterling for a story by Hilda Markham, and he wrote a letter to her agents opening negotiations for a serial. As it happened, two other editors wrote with a similiar object that same day, and the agents were in the delightful financial position of suddenly finding the demand greater than the supply. So they replied to each of the editors that Miss Markham's next story would be five hundred pounds sterling for serial rights alone. This price took Jim Fleming's breath away, especially as he had been accustomed all these years to fill the paper with his own stuff and with stolen matter from America. It seemed hard that an honest editor should be asked to pay away good money to a mere writer. So he wrote to the agents, expostulating against the exorbitant terms, and was told in reply that they had two other offers for the story, and merely gave him the first chance because his letter happened to be the first one that was opened. The agent intimated that if he wanted the story he should have to make up his mind at once, so that the others might not be kept waiting. Then it was that Jim Fleming went home, worried about the matter, and he was never a man who concealed his irritation when he entered his own house. Poor Minnie Fleming was very much troubled to see her husband in the state of exasperation that now encompassed him. She asked him, timidly, to confide his woes to her, and perhaps she might be able to help him out—a suggestion which Jim received with lofty scorn.

"Is it a money trouble, Jim?" she asked.

"All troubles are money troubles," replied her husband. "There is no other trouble in this world except lack of money."

"Have you a payment to make?" she asked.

"Yes."

"How much?"

"Now, what the deuce good would it do you to know? Have you a banking count?"

"I have a small one," said his wife, trembling as she spoke, for she felt that her secret was in jeopardy.

Jim looked up at her quickly.

"A small one!" he said. "Can't you tell me plainly how much money you have, if you have any?"

"You don't tell me plainly," she answered with more spirit than she had yet shown, "how much it is that you need."

"Very well," replied Jim, gruffly. "I need five hundred pounds sterling. Have you got it?"

"No, I have not. How soon do you want it?"

"I want it now. That is, I want it to-morrow or the next day at the latest."

"Then," said his wife with dignity, "I will see if I can get it for you to-morrow or the next day."

After Fleming had left for London on the following morning his wife put on her best apparel and was in the city soon after her husband. She never called upon her agent before. All her negotiations had been carried on by letter. She walked three times past the office before she had the courage to go up the stairs. The demand she was about to make was so enormous, and she felt there was such a little chance of success, that had it not been for the sake of her husband she would not have ventured.

"I have brought you here," she said, her hands trembling as she undid the string, for she seemed to have a vague idea that if she showed him the writing she might have less difficulty to get along with him. "I have brought with me the complete manuscript of the latest novel I have written. I think it is better than the last."

"It is sure to be good," said the agent, encouragingly.

"But—but—" stammered Mrs. Fleming, "I wanted to know if you would advance me five hundred pounds sterling.

The agent looked grave.

"Do you mean that we are to ask that much for the novel?"

"Oh, no, no," said Mrs. Fleming eagerly. "But I promise to write you another one as soon as possible. I need the five hundred pounds sterling for a particular purpose, and I must have it to-day, if it is to do any good."

"Well," said the agent, "we sometimes advance money to authors, and if I could be sure of having all your work for the future I think I might stretch a point in this case and let you have the money."

Meanwhile the agent, as soon as she left the room, called the clerk and said:

"Write to James Fleming, of 'Pot-Shots,' that we regret that we are not able to sell him Hilda Markham's story for five hundred pounds. The author, tell him, has called upon us and refused to sell for less than six hundred pounds, although, of course, you may inform him that if he had taken our offer when first made, we would have had to pocket the loss."

As soon as the letter was signed a messenger was sent with it to Fleming. The receipt of it nearly drove that good man wild. He had the announcement of the story in type and wanted to publish it in the next number. He had such little faith in his wife being able to get the money that he had actually forgotten she had promised to do so, and he went home that night in even worse temper than the night before.

His wife said apologetically to him when he came in:

"I have gotten that five hundred pounds, but would it make any difference to you if I did not give you the check for it until to-morrow?"

"What are you talking about?" he cried, angrily. "If you have the money to-night why should I wait till to-morrow?"

"I have it in the form of a check," she answered, "and the check I wish to place in the bank."

"I'll warrant the check is not good for anything," said Fleming. "Let me see it."

"I would rather not do that," said his wife. "I will give you the check if you will not ask any questions."

"Good heavens!" cried Jim. "I will ask no questions if you really have the money. Let me see the check."

He looked at it for a moment in amazement, and then at his wife. Forgetting his promise, he said:

"How in Heaven's name do you come to have a check from Greig & Co.? It is to Greig & Co. that I have to pay five hundred pounds sterling; or rather if I had the money yesterday or to-day it would have been five hundred pounds sterling. Now they have raised me another hundred. They say that Hilda Markham came in to-day and refused to sell her story for less than six hundred pounds sterling."

"Hilda Markham!" cried his wife faintly.

"Yes, Hilda Markham. I am compelled to buy one of her stories or see our circulation go to pieces."

Fleming's wife sat down in an easy chair and there was a twinkle about her eyes that suggested laughter, which caused Jim to frown deeply.

"Jim, dear," said Minnie, "I know you are ever so much more clever than I am, but I really think you don't confide enough in your wife. It would have saved you a good deal of trouble if you had told me just what you wanted. I am Hilda Markham, and goodness knows you might have had all the stories I have ever written if you had wanted them; but now I have signed a contract with Greig for all future novels, and thus, you see, for want of a little confidence between us we shall be paying Greig ten per cent., merely that he may hand my stories to you. Jim, I don't believe you are nearly as wise a man as I always thought you were."—Detroit Free Press.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Killed.

A sad accident occurred in St. Paul near the corner of Jefferson and West Seventh streets. John Connelly, on old man 70 years of age, who resided at Blackdog, Dakota county, being so badly injured that he died soon afterward. Connelly was driving on Seventh street, evidently on his way home. He was blind in one eye and undoubtedly did not see an east-bound car which was approaching and attempted to pull his team obliquely across the tracks just in front of it. The motorman put the break on, but failed to get the car stopped before it struck the horses. Both horses were knocked down, but neither was seriously injured, though the car ran onto one so far that it had to be lifted off with a jack. The wagon was not struck at all, but the sudden jar threw the old man out. He had been sitting on a high seat, and striking on his head on the granite pavement, when he fell, his skull was fractured and he was picked up in an unconscious condition.

Accounts Were Short.

South St. Paul was treated to a sensation by the arrest of City Treasurer Stapf, who is charged with being short in his accounts to the amount of nearly $10,000. His bondsmen, however, who are Rev. L. L. Stapf and H. and D. Becker and Frederick Render, have assured Mayor Fitch that whatever the deficiency amounts to, they will deposit that sum with the city, so that the municipality will lose nothing.

The money is said to have been spent in unprofitable business ventures, Stapf being interested in a grocery store and in the St. Paul Excelsior Manufacturing company, neither of which yielded the return anticipated, and to carry on which the city funds are said to have been used.

Stapf is very popular in South St. Paul, and has been regarded as a scrupulously honest man and public servant.

Child Labor.

The necessary blanks for the enforcement of the child labor law are in course of preparation. In the meantime, the inspectors are at work investigating the matter in St. Paul and Minneapolis. Bad condition of affairs has already been found to exest in some factories in regard to the character of the work at which the children are engaged and in the matters of ventilation and cleanliness. Effective steps will be taken soon to remedy the matter.

Quite a number of children under the legal age are known to be engaged in Minneapolis in violation of the law.

Labor Commissioner Powers will have a conference with the Minneapolis board of education at its next meeting upon the subject of the enforcement of the child labor law.

Binding Twine.

The Stillwater prison is doing a good business in binding twine. Since samples of the new twine were sent out orders have been coming in by wire and mail, and Warden Woolfer now finds himself with more orders on hand than can be filled until the 10th of July. Fortunately the state had a good stock of American hemp twine on hand and those who can not get their orders in in time to get sisal and manilla can get the American hemp, which has proved to be an excellent article and equal to anything on the market.

Since the 12th of June a dozen cars have been shipped and there remains orders on the books for fully 20 cars more. These, the warden says, will be shipped just as soon as they can be reached.

News in Brief.

Gov. Clough has granted pardon to James O'Neil, a life convict at the prison sent from Sibley county. O'Neil, it will be remembered, is the convict who had his right arm and right leg amputated because of tuberculosis.

While George R. Barton, of Lake City, and Peter S. MacGowan and Ed. Bolwin, of the Wood Harvester Company, of St. Paul, were driving near Theilmanton, the neckyoke broke and their team ran away. Mr. MacGowan sustained a fracture of the thigh bone.

A serious hailstorm visited four or five sections about five miles east of Northfield, driving the small grain into the ground, and, it is thought, none can be saved.

An unknown man was run over at Red Wing by a switch train and instantly killed. Both legs and one arm were entirely cut off. A slip of paper on him gave the name of Hans Evans.

A man, 18 years old, giving the name of Alex Schutar, and hailing from Miltonville, Io., was arrested at Mankato in possession of three horses, a colt and a cart, said to have been stolen from Northwood.

Elias Ellison, a laborer was killed by an ore train at Virginia.

The wonderful improvement in the iron and steel market is such that the Minnesota Iron Company has just received an offer to buy from it 1,000,000 tons of bessemer ore at a price 50 cents per ton higher than previous sales. The company has not accepted the offer as yet, and may and not do so, relying upon the bright business outlook for higher prices.

While operating a steam threshing machine near Lakeville, the engineer, Joseph Berres, was killed by the exploding of the boiler.

St. Cloud boasts of a brass band that plays while riding bicycles.

J. W. Ball, an insurance agent who lives near Lake Calhoun, Minneapolis was arraigned in the police court for a violation of the game law, and the case is rather an unusual one, as the provision of the law under which is is brought is not generally known. The charge made against Mr. Ball consists in the allegation that he had confined in a cage a golden robin, and it appears that it is an offense to so confine a harmless wild bird.

George Mewson, a colored barber at Owatonna, was arrested for attempting to bite Joe Gonson's fingers off. Gonson was severely injured in the fracas.

The summer training school will commence at Buffalo July 15 and continue four weeks. It will be conducted by Prof. Buel T. Davis, of Winona, assisted by R. Margaret Gilbert and B. G. Eaton. The attendance this year promises to be much larger than in former years.

Frederick Hyde, charged with larceny from a railroad car, was committed to jail at Red Wing to await the grand jury.

A dog owned by F. Applebee went mad at Anoka and was shot. John Geddes also had to shoot his dog for the same reason.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—Durham university has been authorized to grant degrees to women. Oxford and Cambridge still hold out.

—According to Dr. Kukula there are 119 universities in the world, with 157,513 students. Berlin, with 7,771 students, is the largest, and Urbino, with 74, the smallest.

—The ministers of Mt. Vernon, O., have, in view of the increasing laxness regarding divorce, passed a resolution giving public notice that they "decline to marry divorced persons, except the innocent parties where the divorce is granted upon scriptural grounds."

—The rector of Trinity Episcopal church, of St. Augustine, Fla., is Rev. E. V. Evans. Recently, by the death of his uncle, Lord Carberry, in England, he has become heir to both the fortune and title left. The reverend peer has gone to England to enter on his new possessions.

—Archbishop Farrar made over $40,000 out of his three books: "The Life of Christ," "The Life of St. Paul," and "Early Days of Christianity." He was only a comparatively unknown curate when one of his sermons attracted the attention of a publisher, who immediately commissioned him to visit Palestine in order to write a biography of Christ. This was how his gift of writing was first discovered.

—The Germans have some educational ideas which might be borrowed with profit, and among these are wall maps of different species of pestiferous weeds, which hang in the schoolroom, where the children can see them as long as they go to school. They are colored plates of weeds in all stages of growth, and also the way in which they scatter their seeds and propagate themselves.

—Sao Paulo College, Brazil.—The need of a college in Brazil, for the purpose of training Christian teachers and preachers, was for many years recognized by most of the missionaries in that country. It organization was proposed by the first synod of the Presbyterian church of Brazil, and was opposed by the general assembly of the Northern Presbyterian church, in 1889. The college owes its existence to the tireless activity and the generous gifts of Rev. George W. Chamberlain, the well-known missionary of the Presbyterian board in Brazil. The college is located upon a valuable plot of land in the city of Sao Paulo. On the same grounds is also the Boys' Boarding school.

MARRYING ENGLISHMEN.

Uncomplimentary Picture of American Girls as English Wives.

When the marriage festivities are over, the honeymoon ended and the realities of everyday life on the march again, what sort of a wife does the Anglo-American bride develop into as a rule? In cases where the dowry is large and the devotion not great, this question is of little importance. In a big house there is little room for clashing, and, if the circle of friends be only wide and lively enough, husband and wife will hardly have time to grow sufficiently familiar for either lovemaking or qurreling. Supposing, however, that the husband should be so unfortunate as to have conceived any real affection for his bride before marriage, and to have evolved any hope that she would develop into the companion, friend and sympathizer who is the ideal wife and helpmate, he is certainly doomed to severe disappointment.

He will find that there is no domestic side to his spouse's character. Neither her education nor her life has been calculated to encourage in her the instincts of the mother or the housewife. She has no desire for children; less inclination has she to be troubled with them if they come. She can not be bored with household details. She confines herself to issuing orders to well-drilled dependents, rates all misperformance in a loud key, and checks the bills with the acuteness of a lawyer's clerk. She has no taste for home life. On the contrary, she counts every evening wasted that she spends at home, and would die of ennui were she condemned for long to the sole society of her husband.

Very quickly he will find that her theory of life comprehends only an endless round of gayety and a perpetual circle of expenditure. The country is only tolerable to her during the first effervescence of the bridal return, when the house is filled as rapidly as it empties, and the neighbors are all in activity to welcome the bride. But when the long evenings set in, and it is no longer possible to tear about all day, and the landscape assumes the grey hue of winter, very soon she tires of it, grows restless and discontented, while her naturally-strident voice assumes a sharper and more disagreeable note. So, at last, the country seat is left to take care of itself and the couple hasten to London, Paris, Cairo or Monte Carlo, where she is soon herself again. The end of this is sure to come sooner or later.

The husband grows tired of the home that is no home, the wife who is no companion except for other people, and the new friends whose faces there is barely time to get to know by sight. He returns to his work, his sports or his dissipations with renewed ardor, and profoundly regrets that he did not marry in America, where incompatibility of temperament is a valid ground for divorce.—London World.

He Did His Best.

Arizona Pete had been called upon, in the absence of all the deacons and other qualified church officers, to pass the contribution basket.

In a seat half way down the middle aisle sat the wealthiest man in the congregation, fast asleep.

Arizona Pete stopped when near him, held the basket under his nose, and waited.

A soft snore was the only contribution.

He touched him on the shoulder.

Another snore.

Then he shook him.

"Fuddleston," he said, "you can't make a sneak out of this game. Pungle up or I'll throw you out of the window!"

It is recorded that Mr. Fuddleston at once pungled up to the extent of five dollars for the first and only time in his religious career.—Chicago Tribune.

—The late Lauren Kingsburg, of Needham, Mass., left $1,000 to the Congregational Home Missionary society, and $250 each to H. L. Hastings, of Boston, and I. C. Wellcome, of Yarmouth, Me., for use in spreading the Gospel.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—To Clean Decanters: Use strips of course brown paper and cold water, filling the decanter quite full with the strips. Tea leaves, potato parings and shot are also used, but nothing gives the polish of brown paper.

—Meatless Tomato Soup: One quart of tomatoes, one quart of water, stew until soft, add a teaspoonful of soda, allow to effervesce, add a quart of milk, season to taste; thicken with rolled cracker.—Prairie Farmer.

—Gems: Sift one pint of flour with a teaspoonful of baking powder, add half a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of melted lard, one beaten egg, and a cupful of sweet milk. Mix well and bake in hot, well-greased gem pans.—Farm and Home.

—Pan Cakes: Sift a pint of flour with one teaspoonful of baking powder, and three beaten eggs, a cup of sweet milk, and a pinch of salt. Rub a tablespoonful of lard over the bottom of a frying pan, let heat, pour in a ladleful of the batter and fry quickly. Serve with butter and maple sirup.—Farm and Home.

—The best cleaning compound for nickel ware is fifty parts of alcohol and one of sulphuric acid. The article to be cleaned is held in the solution five to fifteen seconds, after which it is washed with water, rinsed with alcohol and wiped dry with a clean rag. The dirtiest of nickel goods is said to come out with a bright, new look.

—Stewed Rhubarb: Wash the stalks and peel them or not, just as you prefer. Not peeled it makes a richer but not as handsome a sauce. Cut them into inch pieces, cover them with sugar, and let them stand a little while to extract the juice. Cover close, and cook slowly until tender, but not long enough to break the pieces.—Boston Budget.

—Scalloped Onions: Remove the skins and put them into boiling salted water. Boil them twenty minutes and pour off the water entirely, then put in equal parts of hot water and milk and boil them twenty minutes longer. When done, drain, cut in slices, put into a shallow dish, cover with white sauce and buttered crumbs, and bake till the crumbs are brown.—Farmers' Review.

—Lemonade: To every quart of water use three lemons and the rind of one, taking care to peel the rind very thin, using nothing but the yellow outside. Cut this into pieces and put with the juice and powdered sugar in a covered vessel (a jug is best), using two ounces of sugar to every quart of water. Boil the water, then pour over the lemon and sugar; cover, let it cool, add ice, and serve. The beaten white of an egg added is very nice.—Farm and Fireside.

—Cauliflower salad is a very good dish to serve with cold meat. Have a cauliflower so as to be a trifle underdone. When cold, break it into sprays, place them in a salad bowl, add a suspicion of finely-chopped onion, and a teaspoonful of chopped capers. Make a salad dressing of oil and vinegar, and pour it over the vegetables. Very good salads may be made from cold vegetables that have been left from the day before, so the cook should never be allowed to throw away a particle of a nice vegetable, for they all help in salad making.—Leed's Mercury.

FANCY SILK WAISTS.

Suggestions on Styles and Materials for the Season.

Not to have a silk waist is to miss one of the dressy conveniences of the age. All ages of women wear them, and, what is more important, all sizes as well, for styles do not favor stout figures nowadays. Slender figures can wear any design of material, be it striped or brocaded, but stout persons should take the narrow stripes. Plain and striped satin, brocaded changeable taffeta, striped wash silk, printed Japanese silks, the goffered effects called taffeta plisse, chiffon over silk and surah—all are found among silk waists, but of all these, surah is the least seen. The percaline or silesia lining is made close-fitting, boned, and has an inside belt; the outside material has only side and shoulder seams, with the back fullness at the waist-line gathered or plaited; otherwise the back may be plain, gathered at the neck, laid in a large center box-plait or in two two-inch side plaits. The fronts now are of the drooping bag pouch, or Fedora style, falling over the belt like a blouse. Sometimes they are laid in three box-plaits; again in one wide center one, which may be single or double; then this fullness may be gathered at the neck and plaited below, or a round yoke is simulated with several rows of gathers, with the plaits below; the under-arm part does not drop over the belt. The crush collar is of the silk or velvet to correspond or contrast; the belt matches the collar in hue or is black with a black skirt. Both of these accessories fasten at the back under a lengthwise bow of loops and ends or a round knot and two wing or pointed pieces. Slender figures also wear belts having a bow at either side of the center front and knots on the sides of the collars. The sleeves are huge leg-of-mutton in shape over an ordinary lining, with an interlining of crinoline or book muslin from shoulder to elbow. For stout figures the waists are frequently made pointed, back and front, and worn outside of the skirt.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Lace and Grenadine Gowns.

While lace dresses can not be called fashionable there are always some seen whose owners can or will not part with them. They should have a silk lining, but French sateen is also used for the round waist, leg-of-mutton sleeves and skirt four yards wide. The lace is sewed in the same seams with the lining. A godet or round plait effect is not imperative in these skirts—or in any for that matter, though women think they must wear them—but if desired put the hair-cloth inside of the lining to avoid a double one and extra weight. The waist should be round, full and drooping in front. If short of material have sleeves of black satin, also belt. Another garniture is a blouse plastron and crush collar of colored chiffon. Since chiffon may be had for fifty-nine cents a yard, forty inches wide, in New York, it is used more and more. Grenadine is made over black or changeable taffeta in much the same style. Jet is handsome in spangled bands as baetelles, simulated box-plaits or as a corsage ornament draped from one shoulder to the other. Others are simply trimmed with ribbons for a belt, bretelles, collar and shoulder knots.—Ladies' Home Journal.

TO USE THE KNIFE

And Submit to a Painful Operation—This the Doctors Advised as the Only Hope, the Case Being a Critical One—The Happy Termination of a Deep-Rooted Prejudice.

Mr. Lincoln Nelson, of Hartville, Mo., had an interesting experience with the doctors recently, and was on the verge of a painful surgical operation. He writes: "I hereby add my unqualified endorsement of your excellent remedy, S. S. S. For six years I have been a sufferer from a scrofulous affection of the glands of my neck, and all efforts of physicians in Washington, D. C., Springfield, Ill., and St. Louis failed to reduce the enlargement. After six months' constant treatment here my physician urged me to submit to a removal of the gland. At this critical moment a friend recommended S. S. S., and laying aside a deep-rooted prejudice against all patent medicines, I began its use. Before I had used one bottle the enlargement began to disappear, and now it is entirely gone, and I am almost cured. I am not through with my second bottle yet. Had I only used your S. S. S. years ago, I could have escaped years of misery and saved over $100. If this endorsement will serve you in any way, use it."

This experience is like that of all who suffer with deep-seated blood troubles. The doctors can do no good, and even their resorts to the knife prove either fruitless or fatal. S. S. S. is the only real blood remedy. It gets at the root of the disease, and forces it out permanently.

Cures Ninety-eight per cent. of all cases of Consumption, in all its Earlier Stages.

Although by many believed to be incurable, there is the evidence of hundreds of living witnesses to the fact that, in all its earlier stages, consumption is a curable disease. Not every case, but a large percentage of cases, and we believe, fully 98 per cent. are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter), great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.

DELANO DIARY

—Prof. Willis E. Johnson's 4th of July oration appears in another column of this paper. Read it.

—Professors Hawker and Johnson with families and friends took a trip to Lake Sarah, Tuesday, to picnic and catch fish.

—The Smith Lake base ball team came down last Lord's Day and played a game with the old Delano Blacks. Score 7 to 8 in favor of Delano.

—The ground is very hard and dry, gardens and corn show the effects of dry weather; farmers are claiming that wheat will be but half a crop.

—The fire engine was brought out and tested on Monday evening. We understand a committee will be here to look it over with a view of buying.

—The Delano Crickets, under 15 years old, met the Hazelbrushers at Rockford, on very rough and hilly grounds Saturday afternoon. Score 14 to 20 in favor of Crickets.

—California Fruit Cars make people's mouths water as they read the lettering on them and think of the luscious fruits they contain on their way east ward over the G. N. now-a-days.

—The G. N. Sunday trains have been changed again and now the train west from St. Paul comes in the morning and returns in the evening, as on other days; the other Sunday train has been laid off.

—I Gutzwiller, Jr., now has one of the finest equipped residences in the country; heated by steam; bath-room, with hot and cold water; electric lights, etc., etc. He proposes to take a little comfort in his declining years.

—The populace arose from their slumbers enmasse this morning at the call of the fire bell to find Dell Young's store on fire. The room was filled with smoke which issued from every crack and crevice. The hose soon turned on to the floor and several inches of water saturated things generally, and though nothing but smoke had been seen a big fire was supressed in its incipiency.

--Protests have been made to members of the Village Council against granting license to keep saloon to one of those now engaged in the business in Delano. Complainant want's a clear record on high, and says he feels it his duty to do what he can to lessen the sale and amelioraoe the evils arising from the use of intoxicating beverages. Such protests should not become necessary, but the law should be lived up to by village officers without haying someone to call their attention to their duty.

--The town pump is in statu quo except the old trough has been removed; the new watering fountains don't loom up very well, the old town pump watering trough occupies the site for the one near Young's Hotel, and eyen in its new position remains as dry as ever: people continue to grumble and climb up and down, to and from the elevated sidewalk on one corner of Bridge and Third Streets, and on the other corner wend their way over the yawning chasm, and yet their has been no suit for damages for broken limbs; the festive swine continues to furnish perfume for the principle thoroughfares, and flavoring for the back kitchens; the slaughter houses lend their aid in the perfume business and help draw flies and breed disease germs to infest our naturally healthy village. The proper functionaries, now that these crying evils have been brought to their notice will, doubtless, see to it that they are corrected. Quit your quarreling and do a little something for the village.

—Rev. J. W. Powell will preach at the M. E. Church, Sunday evening, at 7:45. Epworth League meeting immediately preceding services, lead by Mrs. C. H. Green. Everybody invited.

—There are business men enough in Delano who can live well without keeping their business places open on Sunday to fill all the offices, and if they held them their example might have a beneficial effect on the balance of the community.

--As people were retnrning from the picnic grounds on the 4th at abont 4 P. M. they were startled by the fire alarm. Hose carts were soon run to Youngs Hotel where soom firecrackers had kindled quite a fire between the hotel and the adjoining building. After a short exhibition of the water works system not ou the programme the flames were extinguished and a large portion of Delano saved from burning, as there was a high wind and it would have been hard to check fire well under way when things are so dry

--Delano had one of the finest celebrations ever witnessed here, although noted before for leading in this direction. People were here from far and near. It is estimated that at least 3000 people were in town enjoying themselves. Many came from St. Paul, Minneapolis, Rockford, Buffalo, Corcorantown, Watertown, and other places. The programme was well carried out; as it usually is; and is one thing that makes Delano famous for its meetings of any kind. Folks come and see what has been adverticed, and go home satisfied.

—On Monday evening, at about 8 o'clock the east bound freight train took unlawful and uncivil liberties of the citizens of Delano by blockading their street crossings for a long time; some say half an hour One man got across to the pasture, milked the cow and returning crawled through the train again. This kind of railroading want work here. People have a right to the crossings occasionally, and if the village officials are content to sit down, fold their arms and complacently smile on people who have no respect for the feelings of our folks, or regard for the rights of others, the citizens themselves will brook no such trespasses. The laws of Minnesota requires trains when stopping over five minutes to uncouple and clear crossings.

Woman's Column.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

Report of Wright County Press Work.

Some one has truly said "One thing is forever good, that one thing is sucess. The press is the one great force in touch with the lives of the people; its field is the world, and its sucess the service of humanity." Much as we hear about the advantages of organizations, and mighty as have been its benefits, we beleive they would haye been impossible except for the co-operation of the press. No influence is at present so persuasive as that of printer's ink. As the grass on the hillside binds together the particles of earth and makes a unit of the summers pageantry, so the press of today binds us into one great people, welds individuals into the weapon, party power; molds members of the same denomination into one plan aud purpose, and gives to every guild the point around which to rally. Whatever tails to rate the press at its true value has but grasped a fractional part of the problem of reform. The Press department of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is above all else, an educational one. The first element in that education is to permeate through the press, the public mind, with the spirituality of the modern temperance movement; its inherent religousness. Then we have to show that science is the sword of the great reform and law its shield, parties its enlisted soldiers. and women its reserve corps. We have become a factor in the newspaper world. The work of the W. C. T. U. is a part of the news of today. Its membership—busy women with busy hands, and still busier brains—are working out the great problems of the day and giving glimpses here and there of this busy life to the reading world, and we can but feel that to the untiring efforts of the W. C. T. U. we owe the recent agitation among the clergy and the people upon the purification of the press. The aim of our department has been to present to editors, of the various papers in the county the importance of publishing temperance truth, and the particular interest attachitg to the progress of the W. C. T. U. its work as the largest and most representative organization of women philanthropists in the world, and to supply all our papers with suitable articles and paragraphs of a character that will advance the interests of home and purity, of a better mental and moral life, and help educate a public sentiment all along the great lines of the W. C. T. U. endeavors. We believe the hand of the eternal God is writing an important part of human history through the press work of this organization and he will continue to write through it until the curse of rum, with its attendant evils shall be banished from human society and our country.

Wright County Press work includes six weekly papers as its agencies in sending news to thousands of readers weekly, and they are specially helpful to this department. They are the following: Wright County Times, Monticello; Buffalo Journal, Buffalo; Delano Eagle, Delano; Buffalo Gazette, Delano; Howard Lake Herald, Howard, and Annandale Post, Annandale. These have been supplied with a column weekly, on an average: The editors have been kind and appreciative, and during the past year not an item or an article of any kind has found its way to their waste paper basket. We most thoroughly appreciate their faithful co-operation in our work, and would move a vote of thanks to the gentlemanly editors of the Wright County Press.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.

Square Type. Spatulated. Conical. Artistic. Philosophic. Feminine.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16¼ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the fairer sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and it will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put it in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of a whole family.

ED L. PEET the lively editor of the Dassel Anchor for some time has sold out and is going to start a new paper at Grantsburg, Wis. Mr Peet will doubtless make his new venture as spicy as was the Anchor.

WOOL in Montana, it is claimed is selling for 14cts per pound, a bigger price than usual. And wool on the free list too! what can the infant industries be thinking about to permit such a blow at the protective principle?

THERE is talk of nominating S. M Owen on the Populist Party ticket for President of the United States. C. K. Davis has quite a boom for the same position on the Republican ticket. Minnesota Democrats should keep up with other parties. We nominate Hon. Thomas Wilson.

ACCORDING to the St. Cloud Times, Mayor Boyd of that place, don't propose to have the city council pass ordinances over his head that are in opposition to state laws, and declares his intention of prosecuting any saloon keeper who has his saloon open after 11 o'clock at night.

THOMAS J. MCDERMOTT is mentioned by the St. Paul Broad Axe as a probable candidate, on the Democratic ticket for governor. The Broad Axe speaks of T. J. as a good, energetic young man, (in this we agree) but it laments the fact that he is so rock ribbed a Jeffersonian Democrat; and thinks he would make a good leader on the Populist ticket, here we differ, for we are of the opinion that M. McDermott's chief stock in trade consists in the fact that he has principles and dares maintain them.

THE official Register of Physicians just out says: "At present there are licensed to practic in this state: Regulars, 1,220; homeopaths, 190; eclectics, 70; unknown schools, 70. Under the law of 1887 there have been 509 licences issued: Regulars, 455; homeopaths, 51; eclectics, 3 Seven hundred and twelve names appear on the records as having applied for examination." This looks as if the strict laws in Minnesota regarding the licensing of physicians was beginning to have the effect of preventing the incompetent from entering the profession, in this state. Wright County is credited with 17 Regular, 1 Homeopath and 1 Eclectic.

Economics.

MR. EDITOR:—I am interested in your lesson in economy. I agree with you that we should not borrow money and your advice is a good one for the present. We must now economize to the extent of niggardness, but I fail to see the benefit that will be derived from it in the end.

I would like to ask a few questions that may bring out something farther on this subject of economy. Why should farmers economize? When in the past was the power of production as great as at the present? Are our agriculturists producing enough to supply the need for agricultural products? Are the manufacturing capacities great enough to supply the agriculturist with manufactured products? If there is an over production in farm products farmers should produce less I think. If in manufacture the supply is more than demand there should be less in that line. Now if there is enough or a surplus in either case why should the farmers or actual manufacturer economize?

Carrying your advice to a logical conclusion, the farmer should live within himself as much as possible. He should produce every thing he could and he and family should do their own work. He could and should produce and manufacture his own clothing. What would be the consequence of such a step on the present condition of our complicated civilization? Is it not a step backward toward barbarism? Now let the farmer and his family work all the time; let him do without luxuries of any kind, let him buy no books read no magazines, let him leave off all that refines or elevates the mind and give all his life to saving and digging. This is economy, not what our worthy editor would like to see, but it is the economy that our yellow blooded bloated, coarse American aristocracy would impose on our agricultural population and thus lower them to the conditions of the Russian serf while they take the product of their economy. We would advise the farmer to find out who stands between him and his brother producer, the actual working manufacturer, and force the commercial shark to economize. Comfortable living means intellectual advancement; poverty and penuriousnes means intellectual degradation. Our hope is in a healthy middle class, nothing can be expected from the ragged pauper or the money monarch. There is room for much economy in our government. When it comes to public affairs our country takes the lead in prodigality. We are yet so low in the scale of intelligence that it cost us enormous sums to govern ourselves.

I copy the following from the Progressive Age:—"Our country is in debt thirty three and one half millions deeper as the result of last years bad management. The idea of a country as wealthy as this going into debt at the rate of nearly three quarters of a million a week is preposterous. We have not engaged in any special internal improvement nor have we had any special call for extra expenditures."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, July 5, 1895.

Secretary Morton believes that dollars and cents talk democratic economy more convincingly than any man can, and he lives up to his belief. At the close of his first complete fiscal year in charge of the Department of Agriculture he covered into the Treasury $627,115, which remained unexpended out of that year's appropriation. For the fiscal year which ended last Sunday he has made even a more pronounced saving. The total appropriation for last year was about $100,000 less than for the previous fiscal year, yet there remains unexpended about $700,000.

The removal of Prof. Harrington from the head of the Weather Bureau was not surprising to those who knew of the relation existing between that official and his immediate superior in office, Secretary Morton. He would have been removed long ago if Secretary Morton had not been disposed to look over his many acts of subordination because of his acknowledged superior scientific acquirements, but there is a limit to all things and that limit was reached in this case several weeks ago. President Cleveland asked for Prof. Harrington's resignation and when that gentleman declined to submit it he dismissed him. That's all there is to tell. The attempt of Prof. Harrington and his personal friends to create the impression that he was a martyr to his devotion to the scientific work of the bureau and that he was removed because he objected to the removal of his skilled subordinates is to silly even for midsummer.

Capt. Howgate was this week sentenced to eight years in the penetentiary for embezzling government funds, but he will remain in the Washington jail until his appeal has been passed upon, which will be at the fall term of the court.

Senator Hill must be highly pleased with the movement started by Secretary Olney towards improving our consular service and making it the working partner of our commercial interests that it aught to be, by sending out consuls who are better qualified for their duties than many who are now in the service, as it has long been a subject of great interest to him. In a speech on the Naval appropriation bill, during the last session of Congress, Senator Hill, while commending the wise expenditure of large sums of money for the educating and training of boys to be naval officers, asked pertinently, but what are we doing for educating and training those who are to be our diplomatic and consular agents? Secretary Olney can count upon earnest support from Senator Hill, if any Congressional action shall be needed to carry out his ideas for the improvement of the consular service.

Extremes will certainly meet, if the scheme, said to have originated with certain New England opponents of Reed, to boom Senator Chandler ("Little Billy") for the Vice Presidency on the Harrison ticket, shall be successful. Mr. Harrison as everybody knows, belongs to the silk-stockinged, I-am-holier than thou class of republicans, and his strongest card is his professed piety, while "Little Billee" who has rejoiced in the title of chief blackguard of the Senate ever since he managed by ways devious and dark to break into that organization, is the champion and pal of that class of republicans which glories in its wickedness; its ability to pack a convention, wipe out an opposition majority by manipulation of the ballots cast—in short, its general cussedness. Such a ticket would harmonize quite as well as one composed of Rob Ingersoll and Dr. Talmadge, and would stand just about as much chance of being elected. "Little Billee" succeeded in corrupting the voters of New Hampshire to a sufficient extent to get himself in the Senate, but he will never succeed in becoming Vice President, or even in getting himself nominated for that office. "Little Billee" is very rich, although when he first came to Washington as a minor official of the government he was dead poor—as poor as John Sherman was at the beginning of his official career—but he doesn't turn loose his money willingly enough to obtain control of a republican national convention. It has never been "come easy and go easy" with his money, although the most of it came to him without any greater effort than was required to recognize the opportunities which came his way. But it is really ridiculous to treat seriously the idea of the nomination of such a man for Vice President.

Late Literary News.

"'O, will he paint me the way I want,'
As homy as a girlie,
Or will he daintume an ugly tyke.
And be d—d to Mr. Nerli
But still and on and which ever it is,
He is a canty Kerlie.
The Lord prosper the back and neck
Of honest Mr Nerli."

This, one of the last verses ever written by Robert Louis Stevenson, is in reference to the portrait of himself which is given to the public with this verse for the first time in the July COSMOPOLITAN. The lines might have come from the pen of Burns, and are inimitable in their way. The portrait was declared by Stevenson himself to be the best ever painted of him. In the same number of THE COSMOPOLITAN Rudyard Kipling tells an Indian story, to which Remington adds charming illustrations; Mrs. Burton Harrison makes a serious study of New York society in "The Myth of the Four Hundred," and Kate Douglas Wiggin contributes a story of one of the most delightful of Welsh retreats. THE COSMOPOLITAN, was with this unmber reduced to ten cents per copy, and as a consequence, notwithstanding its large edition, it was "out of print" on the third day of publication.

Woman's Column.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

Thoughtlessness.

A young lady had just been speaking to me in a pained way of the lack of thoughtfulness and refined courtesy in a young man whom she meets very often. He is honorable in his conduct, truthful, upright, consistent, without the evil habits which mar the lives of so many young men. Indeed he is in many repects almost an ideal christian young man. But in his close relations with his friends their appears the lack of refinement which greatly detracts from the beauty and attractiveness of his life.

True it is only in little things that this fault is revealed. On driving with his friend on summer afternoons he lights his cigar and smokes without asking her if smoking is disagreeable to her. Stepping into an elevator in which there were several ladies he did not remove his hat. When his friend is putting on her wraps; as they are about to go out together, he never offers her any assistance. When her birthday comes, though he knows of it and knows that her friends are doing many little things to brighten the day for her, he makes no allusions to it, writes her no birthday letter, does not even send her a flower. He professes deep and true affection for her and she believes he is sincere, but his bearing toward her is marked by none of those delicate refinements of affection which are the tokens of true and noble manliness.

I have referred to my friends feelings regarding this young man, with the thought that it might be helpful to other young men who will read these words. It is not enough in a gentleman that he be honest, truthful, upright and just; he must also have in him that refinement of spirit which is the charm of all beautiful manliness. The very word gentleman carries this thought in its composition—a gentleman. The secret lies within. He must have a kindly heart—thoughtful, quick to perceive the things that should be done; unselfish, ready ever to sacrifice his comforts in order to give pleasure to others, courteous, with an instinct for doing always the thousand little things which seem not to be required and yet mean so much in the expression of the heart's feelings.

No young man should ever ignore criticism like this or disregard it. Far more than he conceives do these little things mark his true rank among men. Jesus said the greatest in his kingdom are those who serve the most utterly, living, "not to be ministered unto but to minister." St. Paul in his wonderful picture of true Christion character, after naming among its qualities whatsoever things are just, true, honorable, and pure, adds "whatsoever things are lovely."

Young men should think of this matter seriously. They should seek to be complete in all the beauty of Christ. He was the finest gentleman who ever lived. He had an eye for every need or hunger or most hidden desire of those about him, and never failed to minister to these wants in a way so delicate and beautiful that he always left a blessing. He never failed in courtesy. There never was any rudeness in him. He should be the young man's pattern in this as in all things. —J. R. Miller in Home Journal.

East via the Great Lakes.

The Northern Steamship Line is an important link in the Great Northern transcontinental system. It gives direct connection between Duluth, Superior, The Soo, Mackinac Island, Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo and the East, practically extending the Great Northern to within 400 miles of the Atlantic Seaboard. During the season of 1895 there are two magnificent steel built steamships in service, the "North Land" having been added for duty this year, to run reverse trips with the "North West". There is nothing finer in the way of accommodations to be found on any other ships afloat. These steamships make almost railway time in the delightful trips between Duluth and Buffalo. It was thought when the "North West" started last year that the traffic would come mainly from the tourist classes, but owing to the steamships superior speed and splendid facilities buisness men took advantage of its service and patronized it to an extensive and gratifying degree. Merchants and others who have an Eastern trip in view can make prompt and speedy time by the lake route and enjoy the while one of the finest fresh water journeys in the country on one of the worlds finest ships.

The "North West" leaves Duluth on Mondays and the "North Land" on Fridays at 3:00 P. M., after the arrival of the Eastern Minnesota train from St. Paul and Minneapolis. These ships are so regular in their appointments that in the trip of 1000 miles from Duluth to Buffalo there is little variation in schedule time in arriving and departing at the different ports. It is an ideal trip and no one should go East and back without using the lake route one way at least. 41-tf

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

The 4th of July, or Independence day, as some call it, is over, and everybody seems to have had a good time. The picnic and speaking at Lake Independence on the 4th was largely attended, and everybody seemed to enjoy themselves.

Last week we had one or two very bad days on the wheat, should the weather keep cool and we get a shower of rain soon, the weather will be all right.

W. H. Kennedy who had one of his eyes injured last week is now in Minneapolis for treatment, it is said he will loose the sight, but the ball can be sayed.

Hope everybody will remember the annual school meeting which comes on Saturday, 20th., of this month at 7 P. M. Every body should come out.

There will be a Christian Endeavor convention held at Armstrong, beginning on next Thursday evening and holding over Friday.

The Rockford A. C. Sunday School will picnic at Lake Sarah, next Saturday, all are invited to come.

The rye harvest is over and haying has begun in earnest, but it looks as if the hay crop will be a little light this year.

New potatoes are getting plenty now, but are much in need of rain.

George Wardwell and family of Minneapolis are stopping with Henry Fogleman for a while.

Do not see much improvement in times yet, they may be better after harvest. J. H. M.

LONG LAKE.

The 4th passed off very quietly in our village. The only thing to break the monotony was the peals of a home made cannon, loaded and discharged by one of our "Village Smithies," during the wee small hours of morn," arousing the slumberer ruthlessly from his cozy nap.

Harvesting has commenced in this locality in the way of making hay and taking care of the rye and barley crops. Rain is needed for the benefit of the growing crops. The fruit season has commenced. There has been already many crates of the different kinds of berries consigned to different markets in the Dakotas and also to the Twin cities.

Died: In Medina, Mr. Leo Stumpf, aged 70 years. The deceased was a native of Baden, Germany. In 1848 he took part in the Republican agitation and insurrection in Baden, bearing arms in the conflict. In 1855 he settled in Medina being one of the pioneers of the town. He served in Co. F. 5th. regiment, Minn. Volunteers, in the war of the Rebellion. His funeral took place on the 7th., in which the G. A. R. of which he was a member took part. He leaves a wife and several children, his sons being Leo Stumpf, Jr. of Minneapolis and Frank Stumpf of Medina.

A Pretty Tall Story.

ALBERT LEA; MINN., June 26,—A statement has just been made by the Glenville creamery showing that from one cow, the property of C. T. Knapp, in the last 12 months he delivered 16,492 pounds of milk, from which 602 pounds of butter fat were taken, valued at $122.20. This is supposed to be the best record ever made.—Chicago Produce.

IS IN YOUR OWN HAND.

Palmistry assumes to tell what the lines in your hand indicate. It will amuse you, if nothing more. The above diagram almost explains itself. The length of the LINE OF LIFE indicates probable age to which you will live. Each BRACELET gives you thirty years. Well marked LINE OF HEAD denotes brain power; clear LINE OF FORTUNE fame or riches. Both combined mean success in life; but you must keep up with modern ideas to win it. You will find plenty of these in Demorest's Family Magazine, so attractively presented that every member of the family is entertained. It is a dozen magazines in one. A CLEAR LINE OF HEART bespeaks tenderness; a straight LINE OF FATE, peaceful life; the reverse if crooked. A well-defined LINE OF HEALTH spares you doctors' bills; so will the health hints in Demorest's. No other magazine publishes so many stories to interest the home circle. You will be subject to extremes of high spirits or despondency if you have the GIRDLE OF VENUS well marked; keep up your spirits by having Demorest's Magazine to read. By subscribing to it for 1896 you will receive a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides the superb premium picture, 17x22 inches, "I'm a Daisy!" which is almost a real baby, and equal to the original oil painting which cost $300; and you will have a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep you posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads, and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and you get with it, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2.00, and you will really get over $25.00 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send for a specimen copy. A large QUADRANGLE means honesty; a large TRIANGLE, generosity; long FIRST DIVISION OF THUMB, strong will; LONG SECOND DIVISION, reasoning faculty. The MOUNT OF JUPITER betokens ambition; that of SATURN, prudence; the SUN, love of splendor; MARS, courage; MOON, imagination; VENUS, love of pleasure; and MERCURY, intelligence. Take our advice as above and you will be sure to possess the last and most valuable quality.

LATEST NEWS.

The Supreme Court has granted Harry Hayward another lease of life until next Falls term of Court. It is thought it is good until January at least.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.

Square Type. Spatulated. Conical. Artistic. Philosophic. Feminine.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced views and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the nter sex, every one of whom should subscribe to morest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and u will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put u in the way of saving money by finding in one agazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of e whole family.

THE Bell Telephone company has taken the necessary legal steps to secure possession of the remainder of the earth.

GLADSTONE said recently that he was too old to have an opinion on the new woman. His "ideal woman has not altered in the last three-score years and ten."

MRS. STOWE'S "Uncle Tom's Cabin" still commands a ready sale. It is said to have been translated into more languages than any other book except the Bible.

A CORRESPONDENT asked the New York Sun: "When is a girl beautiful?" Mr. Dana very gallantly answered that there is only one absolute rule—when you love her.

THE people of the United States use on an average 32,000,000 postage stamps of all kinds each and every day of the year, or a total of about 4,380,000,000 per annum.

IN Mexico, and Siam as well, judge, jury and lawyers all smoke in court, if they wish to, while a case is being heard. Even the prisoner is not deprived of his cigar or cigarette.

THE ascendency of the new woman is assuming an alarming phase. A New York man on complaint of his wife has been sent to Blackwell's island for refusing to do the washing and ironing.

THE success of the horseless wagons in the recent road race in France was made possible by the splendid roads of that country. The horseless wagons could not be expected to work so well in this country, save on the paved streets of cities.

HARVARD has just given its diploma to 678 graduates, Yale to 575, and the University of Michigan to 691. Never before were there so many college-bred men and women in the world as to-day. What will they all do? At any rate, it is as true as when Webster said it—there's room enough at the top.

THAT idea of a double or multiple personality, first elaborated by Robert Louis Stevenson in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," is now being seriously considered by physicians and scientists. Several instances of distinct states of consciousness in the same person, and of a failure when in one state to remember anything which happened in the other, have lately come before our courts of law.

THE latest catalogue of Harvard university records the names of 19,335 graduates, of whom 10,179 are living, Dr. Furness, of Philadelphia, being the senior alumnus. Four classes, 1821, 1824, 1825 and 1830, are extinct. A count of all the degrees granted by the college since its foundation sums up 22,260, and one of the latest of them is that of A. M. conferred upon Joseph Jefferson, the actor.

THE recent test of electric locomotives on the Nantasket branch of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroa dwould seem to prove that the long-predicted supersession of the steam locomotive may not be as far off as some people think. This electric motor made a speed of 80 miles an hour when let out, and easily ran at 60 miles. The experts who made the trip regard the test as perfectly satisfactory.

ONE peculiarity of the American volunteer army in the civil war was illustrated in the Sheridan family. One member of the family was a major general, another served as staff officer and another as a private in one of the Ohio regiments. In Europe the commander of an army would not permit his brother to serve as a private. Influence would have been used to advance him. But Gen. Phil Sheridan was proud of the fact that his brother carried a rifle through the war and did his duty well.

THE English naval expert at Kiel who placed the crews of the American warships third in value and efficiency, those of Germany being placed first and those of France second, was undoubtedly prejudiced. The correspondents of the German and Austrian newspapers agree that the American ships were superior to all others in case of motion and the exactness of their maneuvers; this would argue that they had the most efficient crews. The New York was generally considered the finest ship at Kiel.

THE late Prof. Huxley was one of England's most eminent scientists. He devoted many years of his life to biological studies, as Tyndall did, and probably did more than any scientist of the century to substantiate the theory of spontaneous generation, but he, after profound experimentation, freely admitted that he had failed as all other scientists have. He still held that "under some conditions" protein might become protoplasm spontaneously, but neither he nor any other man was able to generate life from no life. There must be preexisting life to produce life.

THE Japanese consul general in New York talks about a Japanese army taking possession of St. Petersburg in case of a war with Russia. The easy victory over China has evidently given the Japs the big head. They would find a march through Russia rather perilous. Napoleon, the greatest general the world ever saw, at the head of a veteran army and heroes of a hundred battles, met his first reverses in attempting to invade Russia. Japan might fight successfully a defensive war against the giant power of the north, but an aggressive war would be her ruin.

THEY have already in use in Paris and its environs horseless carriages propelled by electric or petroleum motors, the latter being the cheaper. These vehicles are constructed to look like broughams, buggies and phaetons, and in a recent road race from Paris to Bordeaux and return, a distance of 750 miles, thirty such vehicles competed, and the winner made the distance in a little more than 48 hours, its average speed being over 15 miles an hour. The cost of running the horseless victoria at a speed of 8 miles an hour is said to be only about two cents a mile.

LATER NEWS.

THE most favorable reports are heard from Devils Lake, N. D., concerning the growing crops. The harvest is close at hand, and unless the unforseen occurs, the yield of wheat and other small grains, as well as other root crops, will equal the best years since the settlement of North Dakota. The Red River valley will break the record in wonderful yields, if everything goes right. Farmers are beginning to consider the question of harvest hands, as when the time comes grain will ripen pretty uniformly over the whole region, and large numbers of extra men will be needed at good wages to properly take care of it.

JUDGE Woods the 9th reinstated his former order making concurrent the sentences of Eugene Debs and other officials of the American Railway Union. As a result, Debs will serve but six months in jail, and his associates but three months. They were convicted on two charges.

"THE Bell," one of the largest retailing clothing houses in Chicago failed the 9th.

THE Cornell boat crew won the race on the Thames river England, the 8th, but it was not a victory of contest. The Leander crew refused to start when the word was given and Cornell round over the course alone.

Two Sections of a passenger train on the Grand Trunk Railroad collided at Craigs Road Canada, the 9th. The engine of the second section smashed to kindling wood the rear Pullman coach of the first section. Thirteen people were killed, 29 injured some of whom will die.

A MOB of masked men went to the house of Joseph Howlet, near Lewiston, Ky., the night of the 8th, and murdered him and his son. There is no theory as to the mob's action, as the Howletts were inoffensive people and stood well in the community.

Great Havoc Wrought by Wind and Rain.

Forty-Three Lives Lost in Fierce Western Storms—Six Drowned in Lake Geneva, Wis.—Lake Michigan Disasters.

ST. LOUIS, July 9.—Thursday morning last telegraphic reports began to arrive in this city of rains at western points. These reports grew in numbers Friday and covered a large territory indicating that the entire eastern watershed of the Rocky mountains, from the Nebraska and Iowa lines to Texas was swept by a storm. Friday night the severest blow came. Reports of loss of life and destruction of property came with every telegram, and the downpour first regarded as a blessing grew into a wave of devastation. Fields of grain that promised the most bountiful yield in many years are to-day swept bare of vegetation. In several instances the seas of rain were abetted in their work of destruction by tornadoes.

The storm focus embraced an area of 200 square miles, with the southwestern corner of Missouri as the center. The greatest loss of life is reported from Winona, Mo., where twelve corpses have been found, with as many more missing. At Baxter Springs, in southwestern Kansas, five were killed and eleven seriously injured by a cyclone that accompanied the storm. One was drowned at Columbus and two at Ottawa, Kan. At Van Buren, Ark., a mother and her babe were drowned. A family of five encamped on the banks of Fish creek in the Indian territory. Saturday nothing of them or their belongings was found except a part of their wagon on a pile of drift wood. At Thomasville, Mo., where the rainfall was 4 inches in one hour, five persons were lost. Unconfirmed reports are received of loss of life as follows: Three at Fayetteville, Ark.; one at Paoli, Kan.; one at Richards, Kan., and six of a hunting party in the Indian territory. This gives a known and probable loss of forty-three lives. This total will be increased when the receding water permits a thorough search.

The loss in property can be placed in the millions. Dwellings, fences and farm buildings were carried off and wagon and railroad bridges swept away. Thirty of the eighty buildings in Winona succumbed. Five residences, a church and a warehouse went down at Baxter Springs. Six bridges went out in Russell county, Kan. About Jefferson City, Mo., many square miles of growing grain were covered with debris. Traffic on the Fort Scott & Memphis railway is temporarily suspended. Reports of damage to property other than above noted come from five points in Kansas, nine in Missouri, six in Arkansas, two in the Indian territory. The storm spent itself in Illinois, but having lost its force proved a blessing to crops.

The above summaries are only a fraction of the loss in property. The greatest burden falls upon the farmers, as the season is too far spent to plant new crops, and suffering must surely follow in the storm's wake. The country's granary has been cleaned out. Details of individual suffering and experiences would fill volumes and recall the horrors of the Johnstown disaster.

LAKE GENEVA, Wis., July 9.—A heavy storm passed over here Sunday afternoon about 4:30, which unroofed buildings and demoralized shade trees. The hail broke a large amount of glass and ruined corn and what little fruit there was. The steam launch Dispatch was chartered just before the storm by a party consisting of Father Hogan and Miss Hogan, of Harvard, Ill., and a man thought to be Dr. Hogan, assistant superintendent of the Elgin (Ill.) insane asylum, wife and child. The boat was in charge of John Preston, a reliable young man. They were caught by the storm and the boat was capsized and all on board were drowned. The body of Miss Hogan was found floating near Kaye's park.

CHICAGO, July 9.—With little warning of its terrific death-dealing force and destructive character, a wind and rainstorm such as Chicago has not seen for years, broke upon the city about 5:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The complete result is not known, but it is certain that some lives were lost on Lake Michigan by the capsizing of boats at the mercy of the hurricane.

TO ASSEMBLE AUGUST 12.

That Date Fixed by Queen Victoria for Opening of New Parliament.

LONDON, July 10.—A meeting of the privy council, attended by Salisbury, premier; Baron Halsbury, lord high chancellor, and Rt. Hon. A. Akers-Douglas, first commissioner of works, was held at Windsor Monday when the queen signed the proclamation dissolving parliament.

The royal proclamation dissolving parliament fixes the date of the assembling of the next parliament at August 12.

A Whole Family Dead.

CHICAGO, July 6.—Frederick Hellman, a contractor, on Thursday night murdered his wife and four children by asphyxiation and died with them. The victims of his horrible crime were:

Fritz Helman, 36 years old.
Ida Helman, his wife, 34 years.
Fritz Helman, Jr., 12 years.
Willie Helman, 8 years.
Hedwig Helman, 4 years.
Ida Helman, 11 years.

The place of the tragedy was at the Hellman cottage, 601 Cornelia street. The house is small, but it was their own, and the Hellman family was supposed to be living happily together.

Daughter No. 3.

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., July .—Just before 5 o'clock Sunday night news reached this village that a baby girl had been born at Gray Gables. This report was soon verified by Dr. Bryant, who announced that the happy event occurred at 4:30 p. m. and that both mother and little one were doing as well as could be expected. This is the third child to be born into the president's family and all of them are girls. Ruth is 4 years old and Esther 2.

Best Crop Outlook in Many Years.

MANKATO, Minn., July 6.—Reports from forty-two agents along the line of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railway, covering the territory from St. Paul, Minn., south to Sioux City and west to Mitchell, S. D., shows an excellent condition of growing crops. It is the best outlook in years.

OBSERVED THE DAY.

Various Cities Celebrate the Fourth in a Notable Way.

NEW YORK, July 6.—Tammany hall celebrated the Fourth of July in the historic wigwam with the greatest enthusiasm. From an early hour Thursday the members of the society of Tammany began to assemble at their wigwam, and although the speech-making was not advertised to begin until 10 o'clock, the hall was packed long before that time.

Distinguished speakers had been invited for the occasion from all parts of the country. Among them were Hon. James E. Campell, of Ohio, and Hon. Thomas M. Waller, of Connecticut, who delivered long talks. Grand Sachem Smyth (ex-recorder) delivered the address of welcome, after which Mr. James Lindsay Gordon read the declaration of independence. Ex-Recorder Smyth received many letters of regret from prominent men who were unable to atttend the celebration. Among those received was one from President Cleveland, Senator Hill, Secretary Herbert, Assistant Secretary of the Navy McAdoo, Senator Lindsay, ex-Gov. Flower, Gov. Evans, of South Carolina; Gov. Hughes, of Arizona; Congressman Abbott, F. R. Coudert, Isador Strauss and many others.

CHICAGO, July 6.—With the exception of the picnics and the usual amusements incident to holidays, the Fourth of July passed off very quietly in this city. All the courts and principal places of business were closed and the streets were nearly deserted. The principal patriotic event of the day was the big picnic and labor demonstration at Sharpshooters' park under the auspices of the Illinois Industrial union and the Chicago Trades and Labor assembly. The speakers were Vice President Stevenson, Gov. McKinley, Samuel Gompers, John McBride and others.

ST. LOUIS, July 6.—Independence day was quietly celebrated in this city. There were the usual number of picnics, ball games, aquatic events and excursions to the country. The event of the day was the sham battle at the fair grounds by the military companies participating in the inter-state drill. It is estimated that fully 20,000 persons were present.

PARIS, July 6.—In accordance with the custom that obtains among Americans here on the Fourth of July, a large number of them went to the tomb of Lafayette. Several addresses were made and the tomb was decorated with flowers.

VIENNA, July 6.—The American flag floated proudly Thursday over the United States ministry and consulate general, as well as over a number of American business houses and private residences occupied by citizens of the United States.

BERLIN, June 6.—Many American residents of this city and suburbs hung out the stars and stripes in honor of the Fourth of July, and there were a number of quiet celebrations of the day.

PARIS, July 6.—The principal event of the celebration of Independence day here by the American colony was the dinner which the American chamber of commerce gave in celebration of the "glorious Fourth." The guests numbered about 350.

TO SUCCEED HARRINGTON.

Willis L. Moore to Be Chief of the Weather Bureau.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Willis L. Moore, a local forecaster of the weather bureau, was appointed Wednesday to succeed Prof. Mark W. Harrington as chief of the weather bureau.

He is regarded as one of the best forecasters in the service and has a reputation for accuracy second to none in the department. After writing one of the best essays on practical forecasting a year ago, he was ordered to Washington, to make reports for a month, and received the highest percentage among ten who were selected, his average being almost 100. He was given the position of professor of meteorology at a salary of $2,500. He was, prior to this, local forecaster at Milwaukee but after his promotion was transferred to Chicago. During last winter he made a wonderful record, considering the character of the weather. In politics Mr. Moore is said to be a republican. He is a man of about 40 years of age and has grown up in the service.

Indians Have a Right to Lease Their Lands for That Purpose.

WICHITA, Kan., July 9.—The cattle barons of the Indian territory virtually have been deprived of the use of 60,000 acres of fine grazing land belonging to the Ponca Indians by a decision just made in a test case before the interior department. Settlers have attempted for several years to lease the land of the Indians for farming purposes, but the cattlemen have managed to monopolize the entire tract, leasing the land for only 10 cents an acre. The decision holds that the Indians by and with the approval of the Indian agent, have a right to lease their allotments for farming as well as grazing purposes. The price now established is from twenty-five to fifty cents per acre. Almost all the land of the agency will be broken this year and sowed to wheat. The Poncas celebrated their first legal victory with a corn dance.

Three Are Left.

JACKSON, Mich., July 8.—By the death of Thomas Phillips at Woodville, just west of this city, Friday, the famous Light brigade, whose charge at Balaklava, Oct. 25 1854, makes a bright page in history, was reduced to three members who are pensioners living in England. Mr. Phillips came out of the battle with scores of bullet wounds and saber cuts. He lived to be 70 years of age. He had been a resident of this locality for the past twenty years, having at one time carried on a store, but latterly being engaged in farming.

Fitzsimmons Acquitted.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 5.—Bob Fitzsimmons, the well-known pugilist, who has been on trial here for a week past on the charge of being responsible for the death of his late sparring partner, Con Riordan, is free. Shortly after 8 o'clock on Wednesday night the jury filed in before a crowded court room. After they had answered to their names, their foreman announced the verdict "Not Guilty."

Woman for United States Commissioner

GUTHRIE, O. T., July 9.—Miss Celine Gray, of this city, has the honor of being the first woman appointed as United States commissioner. In business circles it is well known that Miss Gray is in every way capable.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Sixteen Horses Burned.

John Dubay's barn, at 912 Twelfth avenue north, Minneapolis, burned to the ground, and with it 16 horses, several wagons and a number of sets of harness were lost. The loss entailed on the building was $3,000; on contents, about $4,500.

The structure was an old two-story frame building. On the first floor the horses and wagons were kept and on the second the feed and hay were stored. The fire started in the portion devoted to the horses and quickly spread to all parts of the building. Three out of 19 horses were saved and one wagon was taken from the burning building. Mr. Dubay had just returned from driving and his son was busy currying one of the horses when the fire broke out. The origin of the fire cannot be explained, although it is thought that a spark from a cigar started it. Mr. Dubay denies that he or his son were smoking.

Drowned.

A sad drowning accident occurred at Lake Minnetonka. Ernest Reau, 19 years of age, has been camping with a friend near Hotel St. Louis, and while bathing attempted to swim a horse belonging to one of the neighbors. After the animal waded out as far as it could go it swam along nicely until the young man attempted to turn its head toward the shore, when the horse became unmanageable and rolled over, striking the rider with its hoofs as it sank. A companion witnessed the catastrophe and ran down to the shore just as Reau rose for the third time, but not being able to swim could render no assistance. The body was recovered soon afterwards.

Must Pay Taxes.

In response to a letter of inquiry from State Auditor Dunn, Attorney General Childs gave out an opinion that the property of national building and loan associations, including the shares of stock, should be assessed for taxation, as provided by the law of last winter. The associations are endeavoring to escape the taxation by claiming the law is invalid, and the final decision on this question makes a big difference to the state and to the counties in which these national associations are doing business. The attorney general also holds that the property of the Norwegian Y. M. C. A., in Minneapolis, is liable for taxes.

Too Much 4th of July.

Hector Meyer, aged 19 years, living with his parents on Pillsbury avenue, Minneapolis, at the corner of Twenty-ninth street, lost his life through the bursting of a cannon while endeavoring to secure its discharge. A piece of the iron struck him in the left side, and tearing away the flesh entered the lung, leaving the organ exposed. He fell to the ground unconscious, and was carried into his home. The best medical efforts were made to save his life, but death ensued at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, three hours after the accident, the youthful victim failing to regain consciousness.

Saloon Licenses.

There are now in this state something like 4,000 saloons. In 1886 the number of retail liquor licenses was 4,234, or one to every 264 inhabitants of the state. Then the high license law was passed, and in 1890 the number of licenses issued was only 3,485, though the population had increased considerably, the ratio being one license to every 373 inhabitants. Allowing for the increase since, it is probable that the number this year will not fall far short of 4,000.

News in Brief.

According to an order from Gov. Clough Dr. Staples, president of the state board of health, sent a veterinary surgeon to investigate the report of diseased cattle. The investigation shows over a dozen lumpy jawed cattle at Stewartville on three different farms, one case at the Winona slaughter house, and nine on one farm between Pickwick and Lamoyle. The cases are all properly quarantined. Six more cases are reported for investigation in Winona county.

A woman by the name of Mary Kremer was detected in trying to pass a forged check in a dry goods store of Winona, and immediately placed under arrest. The forged name was that of Mrs. Z. J. Kendall, a well-known Winona lady. The check was payable to the forger, Mary Kremer, and was drawn on the Winona Deposit Bank. It was an extremely crude piece of work.

John Leck, of Minneapolis, was awarded the contract for erecting the new custodial building at the State School for the Feeble Minded, at Faribault. The amount of the contract is nearly $54,000. Mr. Leck's bid was $5,000 under his lowest competitor.

Herman Albrecht, proprietor of the general store and flour mill at Crow River, was killed by a bull and thrown into the river, where a searching party found him. The bull had but one horn and made for the searchers when they entered the field. The beast was killed.

Papers were filed for the voluntary assignment of W. J. Dunn, of Mankato, to George Pass, for the benefit of his creditors. Assets are estimated at $4,500, consisting largely of real estate and millinery stock. Liabilities are $4,000, including notes and millinery accounts.

The first prosecution under the new fire law passed last winter took place at Taylors Falls, when August Bloomquist, a farmer living in the town of Amador, in that county, was tried before Justice Levev and a jury for illegally setting a fire on the 28th of May. The case has attracted considerable local interest and was attended by a large number of interested spectators. The jury was out four hours and could not agree.

The Winnebago City Brick and Tile Works plant was partly burned. The engine room and one dry shed, filled with unburned brick, was destroye totally.

Night Officer Albert Winklman, of New Ulm, was found in an unconscious condition about 4 o'clock one morning, having been shot in the neck by some unknown person, the ball passing in on the right side immediately back of the windpipe. Mr. Winklman was detailed for duty in and about the railroad yards, where the shooting occurred.

Tramps broke into P. F. Strong's residence, Minneapolis, and made away with clothing and silverware.

WHAT THE DOCTOR SAYS.

Carelessness of People With Colds Annoys Him Very Much.

Sometimes when a woman comes to see me with her complexion the color of ashes, her eyes as bleary as if she had been running in the teeth of a gale for a week without vail or glasses, and her lips a pale pink-blue combination of tints, I feel very much like ordering an ambulance and sending her to a hospital, for there and there only will she be kept in bed and have the care which she needs. A specimen of this type of woman came to ask my medical advice a few days ago. She coughed like a person in the last stages of consumption. her tongue was yellow, her skin was hot and dry and she said cold childs were chasing each other up and down her back. To begin with, I ordered her home to bed and she at once rebelled. I asked why. "Well, I have been so busy going out every day that I have hardly had a moment even to come to see you, but I have come simply so that you will give me something to take for my cold and brace me up for my afternoon tea to-morrow."

"And you will receive your guests in a nightgown, madam, or be a dead woman to-morrow night," I said. Of course she took offense and called me a most ungracious and harsh thing, and started to go. Finally she calmed down and told me how she had caught cold. She had had it for nearly three weeks; she had taken a hot bath, changed her heavy flannels for light ones, and gone to the house of a friend a block away to attend a dance. She had walked there with only a long loose wrap around her besides her light evening gown, because it was such a short distance. The next day she had a cold in her head and chills and fever; so she took a dose of quinine and went out to make calls. She had spent three weeks of activity, which makes me exhausted to simply think of. Balls and dinners every night, calling and shopping by day, thin clothes and light shoes, wet feet and no lunch! Oh, such a list of misdemeanors! Such crimes against health as she had committed! And now she refused to obey my orders!

I was very much out of patience. I scolded until I was in a fever. I wrote a note to her husband. I stood over her while she indicted notes cancelling all her engagements for the coming three weeks. I sent her home, and said I would go to see her that evening. I did, and of course she was in a raging fever and only half conscious. She didn't get pneumonia. How she escaped is a marvel, but it took a good month to make her look anything like a normally wholesome woman!

I have no interest in the woman who sends her child to school when he coughs and has a sore throat, and I am sorely tempted to blister the woman who parades the streets this weather without rubbers, and then wants to know how she got a cold. The first law of health and sense is to keep the extremities warm. Wear woolen mitts and thick stockings and shoes. All the fur around your neck or pads of unwholsome stuff on your chest will not keep you from getting cold if your hands are frozen and your feet wet. And while grip and kindred insipient horrors are rampant in the land have good, hot, plain food, warm clothes and keep regular hours.—N. Y. Advertiser.

Where to Locate in the South.

Of the thousands and thousands of Northern families who contemplate locating in the South this fall, in the hope of improving their health and bettering their financial status, the vital question is which point in the South is the best to locate in. The three important questions to a farmer, as far as location is concerned, are

1. Soil capable of growing all the cereals he is accustomed to cultivating.
2. A healthy climate.
3. A point where a ready market can be found for everything he raises.

These requisites can be separately found in any of the Southern States, but in the great mineral belt of North Alabama they are all found together.

It was this belt that originally attracted the eyes of the world to the South. It is about fifty miles wide and two hundred miles long, and reaches from the Northeast corner of the State as far south as Tuscaloosa. Within the mineral belt lie all the coal, iron, limerock and other mines; all the furnaces and most of the manufactories of the State, thus providing employment for immense numbers of operators of all kinds, which create a market for every pound of produce raised by the farmer within this region at a high price, and practically at his door. In fact, the consumption of the products of the farm is so great within this mineral belt that the farmers located therein are unable to supply one-twentieth of the demand, and this cannot be said of any other point in the South.

The increase in the value of lands within the mineral belt of North Alabama is more certain than any other point in the South, hence no mistake can be made in locating there.

The land throughout the mineral region is high and dry, though watered by many pure and limpid streams. Its elevation is such that it enjoys the luxury of a pure atmosphere derived from its altitude, thus giving to all this region the uniform climate of the South with the benefit of the seasons.

Birmingham is the center of this mineral belt, with the beautiful city of Fort Payne, on the Alabama Great Southern R. R., at the North and Tuscaloosa at the South.

BEST.

When Clara comes in from her walk
  An' hasn't much to say,
And when a bundle C. O. D.
  Comes later in the day,
And pa gets mad, is Clara dear
  Quite equal to the test?
Oh, yes, indeed. She drops a tear
And says: "Boo hoo! I was so near,
  I really thought it best."

Perchance mamma tri ps off to town
  And buys herself a cloak.
And when papa looks at the bill
  To him it is no joke.
"Look here," he thunders, "how is this?
  Great Scott! Well, I'll be blest."
His wife responds with one sweet kiss,
And meekly says: "Why, what's am'ss?
  I really thought it best."

To womankind this is a phrase
  That covers every sin
And when it's dished up with a tear
  It's always sure to win.
"The girls are troubled with a cough;
  We'll go abroad and rest.
No time to lose. Come, pa, let's off."
Says dear mamma, "you mustn't scoff;
  You know that it is best."

But when we settle down in love
  Their actions none can tell.
And, therefore, to all bashful girls,
  And forward girls as well:
To girls who go about and shop,
  In north, east, south and west,
We hope at pa you will not stop,
But when we come around and pop
  You'll always think it best.

A LAST RESORT.

BY ANTHONY HOPE.

"They're admirably suited to one another!" said I.

"Oh, admirably!" said Cousin Flo.

There was a pause; Flo frowned at the fire, I drummed my fingers on the table. I don't think that we either of us looked very pleased. Yet it was a most fortunate arrangement.

"The only thing that surprises me about it," I observed, "is that Philippa should have done it. I'm very glad, you know, but I'm surprised!"

"I'm not surprised about her!" said Flo.

I looked up, much annoyed.

"You might be above that!" said I severely.

"I'm not blaming her, Dick. When he likes, Capt. Worsley can be very—"

"Oh, I suppose he humbugged her, about culture and all that. If I'd liked to go on like that—"

"Well, Dick?"

"Oh, nothing. Don't worry a fellow!"

"I'm sure that Capt. Worsley did nothing that a gentleman wouldn't."

I was much annoyed at this remark that I said to Flo:

"He got over his disappointment about you pretty soon, though!"

Flo laughed with extraordinary nonchalance as she answered:

"Philippa doesn't seem to have been disappointed at all about you."

"My dear Florence," said I, "I have no desire to discuss Miss March with you."

"Well, then, why did you begin about Capt. Worsley?"

"Come, come, let's say no more about them. We're well quit of them. I don't bear them malice, do you?"

"Not the least, Dick. In fact, I quite understand what Philippa must have felt about you. She likes serious people—people who have high aims, you know."

"I have very high aims," said I.

"Yes, but you don't hit," observed Flo.

"At any rate," I cried, "I don't flirt wholesale with anybody who—"

"What do you mean, Dick?"

At this point—and very fortunate was the occurrence—Aunt Maud came in. She has been married to the colonel for three months, and is recovering her power of patronizing persons who are engaged.

"I'm sorry to interrupt you, dears," said Aunt Maud, "but I've got a piece of news. An engagement! Now guess who it is!"

We neither of us spoke.

"Why, Philippa March and Capt. Worsley! Aren't you surprised?"

"No," said Flo, viciously; "but Dick is."

"The precise opposite of that statement would convey the truth," said I, stiffly.

Aunt Maud looked from Flo to me and from me to Flo.

"Has anything gone wrong?" she asked, anxiously. But as she obtained no answer, she went on: "I've been to see Philippa—and he was there. I never saw a more radiant couple."

"Philippa took me aside," she pursued, "and told me that she had escaped a great danger—"

Flo laughed—again most viciously.

"And was now happier than words. Oh! and when Capt. Worsley was putting me into the carriage, he said that Philippa was absolutely the only girl who had ever really touched his heart."

"Did he, though?" said I, with a smile of triumphant malice.

"Though he didn't deny that he had felt a passing fancy for one or two others."

I slapped my thigh, with an appearance of great merriment. Flo had become quite red.

"So the air's full of engagements," beamed Aunt Maud. "It's quite—"

"Stifling," said I, thoughtlessly.

"My dear Dick, what a funny thing to say! But I must leave Flo to have that out with you. The colonel's waiting for me."

Aunt Maud withdrew. Then Flo, with an air of dispassionate curiosity, observed:

"I wonder if you think you've been behaving like a gentleman!"

"My position," said I, with elaborate politeness, "is rather a difficult one. When the lady who has accepted my hand not only displays obvious regret at another man's engagement, but further twits me—"

"With your obvious regret at another girl's engagement. Yes?"

"I see no use in this sort of thing," said I, with dignity. Nothing else occurred to me to say at the moment.

"People always say that when they're scored off."

"I hate girls who talk slang."

"Nobody need stay to listen to it," said Flo, with a curtsey, and she turned her back on me, and looked out of the window.

I sat still for three minutes. Then I stretched out my hand, took my hat, and rose to my feet. I made some little noise in moving—perhaps more than I need. But Flo did not turn round.

"Just fancy," said she, as though she were enjoying a conversation with the window-pane, "if this sort of thing happened when we were married! And unless you changed very much, it—"

"If it were enough for me to change—" I began, loftily.

"Now," interrupted Flo, still addressing herself to the window-pane, "it doesn't matter. We can just separate. But then we should have to go on being together."

Something struck me in this last observation. I laid down my hat.

"Gad, so we should!" said I. "That would be rather queer."

"We should have to stay in the same house—even in the same room sometimes!" And Flo's graceful back was agitated with a shudder.

"We should," I assented. "I suppose you wouldn't speak for the whole evening?"

"We should have to keep up appearances, and seem to be friendly when the servants were there—and—oh, it would be awful!"

I put my hands in my pockets and surveyed Flo.

"What should we have to do?" I asked, with curiosity.

"Make a loathsome pretense of—of still caring for one another, I suppose," said Flo, with a groan of prospective horror.

"But what should we have to do?" I persisted. I wanted details. "Should we have to talk?"

"Yes," snapped Flo.

"Should I," I pursued, taking a step towards Flo, "have to kiss you?"

"Oh, I suppose—I wonder why you don't go!"

"And would you have to kiss me?"

To this question I received no answer at all. But I was bound to extract one; I could not leave the matter unsettled. So I rang the bell.

"What are you ringing for?" said Flo, facing round suddenly.

"For the footman," said I, nodding my head.

"I should have thought you could find your way out," and she right-about-faced again.

Then William opened the door.

"Did you ring, sir?" he asked, observing, I suppose, that Flo did not appear to want anything.

"Yes, William, I rang. I want—"

"It's a mistake, William," came suddenly from the window.

"No, it isn't," said I. "I must ask William—"

"Nonsense, Dick! It's only Mr. Vansittart's joke, William."

"Well, then," said I, "can we do it without William? If so, he can go."

There was the slightest of pauses. Then Flo said:

"Yes, you may go, William."

William, looking somewhat puzzled, withdrew; and then Flo, much flushed, turned round once for all.

"I can't think," said she, "how you can be so foolish. I don't know what you'd have done in another minute."

"I should," I answered, "have kept up appearances."

Flo's lips twitched a little. I saw it in a moment.

"It is perfectly useless for me," I observed, plaintively, "to try to escape from you. Your resentment is not to be relied upon for a quarter of an hour. I am nearly heart-broken about Philippa March."

"Well, I'm most sore about Capt. Worsley."

"But," said I, "I'm going to be a man. I'm going to forget Philippa and keep my word to you. Will you put the captain out of your heart?"

"I'll try," said Cousin Flo.

"Because you know if, after we are married, you speak of him with regret—"

"Or if you seem to wish Philippa had—"

"All those terrible things will happen."

"Yes, I know, Dick. Are we really wise to—to risk it?"

I knitted my brows. It was really a serious question. I studied Flo's features.

"I'm puzz led," I answered. "You're very charming, Flo, but—"

"I don't trust you, Dick."

There was a long sad pause. Flo held out her hand with a gesture of farewell. I looked in her eyes. I took the hand.

"It is really best," said Flo, gently.

"I suppose it is," said I, rather forlornly, squeezing her hand.

"Marriage is such an irrevocable step," Flo reminded me.

"Well, anyhow, it's very troublesome to—"

"And if," interrupted Flo, "when it was too late, when we awoke to the fact—No! G—good-by, Dick!"

"Good-by, Flo," said I much moved.

Thus we parted. I took my hat, and, without a backward glance, started for the door.

At this moment, curiously enough, the door opened. William came in.

"Please, miss," said he, "tea's ready in the drawing-room."

"Thank you, William," said Flo, in a very low voice.

William withdrew. I stood meditatively in the middle of the room. Then I put my hat down.

"Hang it," said I, resting my eyes on Flo's face, "we shall always have the servants!"

"The servants?" murmured Flo, in question.

"Why, yes," said I, and I began to smile. "And, if the worst comes to the worst, we must—" I paused and took Flo's hand again.

"We must what, Dick?" she asked.

"We must," I answered, "rub along on keeping up appearances."

We were disgracefully late for tea.—Idler.

Monument to an Apple.

The Rumford Historical association of Woburn, Mass., will erect a monument where about a hundred years ago was discovered the Baldwin apple. Samuel Thompson, of Woburn, while surveying a route for the Middlesex canal, discovered this apple. His attention had been drawn to it by the number of woodpeckers which gathered about the tree on account of the apples. Mr. Thompson thought it a new variety, and as it pleased his taste he called the attention of his neighbors to it, and he and his brother hastened to graft from it many trees on their own estates. The neighbor and friend of the Thompsons, Col. Loammi Baldwin, the eminent engineer, showed the fruit to his many guests, who came from distant parts of the country, and this did much for the spread of the apple's fame, which in a few years came to be known as the "Baldwin." The granite shaft is seven feet high and is surmounted by a representation of a Baldwin apple. The shaft will be placed in position within a month.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Yankee Dried Beef: Chip beef very thin, parboil, pour off the water, add milk and thickening, and a lump of butter.—Western Rural.

—Stuffed Beef's Heart: Stuff a beef's heart with dressing, as made for turkey, pour over one cup of water and roast until tender.—Chicago Record.

—Pineapple Compote: Cut pineapple into small dice, stew slowly in a rich sirup, take one fruit, add to the sirup one-third of a box of gelatine previously dissolved in half a cup of hot water. Strain all over pineapple. Serve cold.—Prairie Farmer.

—Broiled Sardines on Toast: Select fine, firm sardines; arrange them in a double broiler and broil for two minutes on each side over a very brisk fire. Place on fresh toast, pour over a little maitre d'hotel sauce, garnish with lemon and parsley.—Chicago Record.

—Cocoanut Pie: Soak one and one-half cupfuls of shredded cocoanut two hours in one pint of sweet milk, then add one cupful of granulated sugar, the well-beaten yolks of three eggs, flavoring to taste. Put in a deep tin with an under crust and bake at least thirty minutes. Use the whites to frost it.—Prairie Farmer.

—Hard Sauce: Beat one cupful of sugar and half a cupful butter to a cream, add the whites of two eggs beaten to a stiff froth, and a tablespoonful of lemon or any flavoring to taste. Beat all together a few minutes; pile lightly upon a dish, grate nutmeg over it, and set it on the ice to harden until needed. — Boston Budget.

—There is nothing more unappetizing than the ordinary boiled potato, and nothing daintier and more palatable than potatoes served as they may be served. Potato croquettes are delicious. Boil and mash thoroughly four or five potatoes, add cream, butter and salt. Cream them and add the white of one egg beaten to a froth. Make into oblong rolls with the hands and dip into the yolk of the egg, and then into cracker crumbs. Put in a wire basket and fry in deep hot lard until a nice brown.—N. Y. World.

—Gooseberry Jelly: Green gooseberries are one of those good fruits that one can not make too much of, and yet the cooking of them in most households is exceedingly monotonous. Stew a pint of green gooseberries in a quart of water with sugar, allow them to get cold, and then heat them again, for this will make the fruit a nice pink color. Dissolve an ounce of gelatine in water, add to it a quarter of a pound of sugar and place it in the juice of the fruit, which should be carefully strained and clear, add sufficient water to make a pint and a half in all. Pour into a wetted mold, and when cold serve.—Leed's Mercury.

—Spanish Cream: One-quarter of a box of gelatine, one-quarter of a cup of cold water, the yolks of four eggs, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half a saltspoonful of salt, one pint of milk, the whites of three eggs, one teaspoonful of vanilla. Soak the gelatine in cold water until soft, then dissolve it in boiling water. Make a custard with the yolks of the eggs beaten and mixed with the sugar and salt. Pour on the hot milk and cook in the double boiler till it thickens. Add the strained gelatine, water, vanilla and the whites of the eggs beaten stiff. Mix all well and turn into molds wet in cold water. Place in ice-chest. When hard serve.—Chicago Record.

FRUIT LUNCHEONS.

How to Prepare a Palatable Warm Weather Repast.

As the fruit season comes again, all good housekeepers who like to entertain are fond of making plans for dainty little luncheons, to which they may invite their very dearest friends. An orange luncheon has already been described, and a strawberry and banana luncheon is well worth a few notes. It may be said just here that a fruit salad composed of strawberries, bananas and oranges is one of the most delicious things imaginable. It is not difficult to get up fruit luncheons, provided one has some dainty china, fine table linen and a small amount of cut glass and silver. Oranges should be prepared in the morning, cut into slices and sprinkled with sugar and set in the ice-box. The bananas must be left until the last moment, as they turn black when cut any time before using, but they may be laid in the ice box if one likes them very cold. Strawberries may be hulled immediately on their receipt. This is best done by dropping them for a few moments into cold water, whirling them gently around, then lifting them out one by one, picking off the hulls and placing them carefully on a dish. These in turn may be set into the ice-box, but under no circumstances should they come in contact with the ice; strawberries lose their most delicate flavor once they are chilled. If kept perfectly cold until time to serve them, they will be exceedingly fresh and crisp. A few fresh strawberry leaves may be placed around the edge of the dish in which the berries are served. A portion of them may be mixed with the bananas and oranges, or they may be served into the same dish if the guests prefer. Strawberry ice-cream and strawberry short-cake are the usual accompaniments.

Among the most appropriate decorations are hawthorn blossoms, if the season admits. There are also many wild flowers that closely resemble the strawberry, quite enough so, at least, to pass as a decoration. Roses are allowable, and there should be an abundance of green, of which there is no lack in strawberry time. Strawberry leaves, properly handled, are very effective in decorating the room when mixed with other greens.

Sandwiches of boiled tongue are very nice and delicate. The bread should be cut very thin, and the butter must be of the finest quality. Nothing is so disappointing as a sandwich in which the butter is not satisfactory.

Iced tea and lemonade, with oranges and strawberries, or claret punch, will be found most satisfactory beverages.—N. Y. Ledger.

Originality and Fashion.

Some women try to keep in the mode and still to preserve a certain originality of their own. As in the matter of dress, it is necessary that their costume should look the same as that of other well-gowned women, but it should not look exactly the same. One must wear a stock and belt with most gowns nowadays. A pretty variation on them was seen the other day with a dark house frock in which black and dull red predominated. The two accessories were worked in bead embroidery in rich dark colors, and made a very lovely trimming indeed.—Philadelphia Press.

NEW ROAD MACHINE.

Three Scrapers Operated Separately by One Man and Two Horses.

Without doubt the best country roads are made by the MacAdam process. But the practice of scraping and hauling dirt on the highway is still so common that there continues to be a demand for machines that will perform that work easily. One of the latest inventions of this class consists of three ordinary road scrapers, hung one ahead of another in a frame, which is supported on four wheels, and which is arched near the front end to let the front wheels pass under in turning. On both sides, near the front of each scraper, there are lugs, to which are attached chains that run up to a horizontal shaft. By rotating this shaft with a winch one can raise or lower the front edge of the scraper. There is another chain from the rear edge, leading up to a loose collar on the same shaft. When this collar clutches a fixed one adjacent thereto, the rear chain may also be wound or unwound with the winch. Further support to the rear end of the scraper is afforded by a cross-bar, riveted thereto, which rests on the side-pieces of the main frame. In order to keep the scraper from sliding backward when its edge is depressed, so as to scoop up earth, there are adjustable horizontal braces on each side of every scraper that are pivoted to the frame. The depth of cut is regulated by the forward chains. When a scraper is loaded its front edge is raised to a proper height by the same means. To dump the scraper the collars are clutched, and the winch turned in the opposite direction from that required to lift the front.

The object of dividing the load into three parts is that by operating each scraper separately the machine can easily be managed with two horses. When the three parts are loaded the machine will hold as much as can ordinarily be drawn on a wagon with two horses. Thus one man and one team can operate the machine. The inventor declares that it requires less than one minute to either load or unload. The machine has been thoroughly tested, and has proved itself entirely satisfactory.—N. Y. Tribune.

STIRRING THE CREAM.

One of the most important items in the making of a good quality of butter is the proper and uniform ripening of the cream. On the average farm the cream for several milkings must be put together in order to make a sufficient quantity to churn together. It is important that all of the cream be ripened uniformly if all of the butter is taken off the cream, hence no fresh cream should be added to what is already ripening for twelve hours before churning. Every time fresh cream is added the whole should be stirred thoroughly together. A long wooden paddle that will reach to the bottom of the vessel should be used, and the stirring should be given with a rather upward, lifting motion that will bring the bottom cream to the top, rather than a stirring motion that will start the cream in a circular motion around the vessel. The idea is to mix the old and new thoroughly together. This must be done every time fresh cream is added. A thorough mixing of the cream secures a uniform ripening, and in churning all of the butter comes at once, so that none is lost in the buttermilk, as is often the case when no particular care is taken on this point. Cream should be thoroughly ripened, but should not be allowed to become sour. Slightly acid is the right condition, and the more fully this condition is secured the easier will be the churning, the more thoroughly the butter will all be taken out of the cream, and the better the quality of the butter. The management of the cream is the essential item in the making of good butter and it should be skimmed off while the milk is sweet, kept at an even temperature while ripening, and ripened as uniformly as possible, and then churned as soon as slightly acid. —Prairie Farmer.

LIME AND ALCOHOL.

The Two Latest Methods of Preserving Fruits and Vegetables.

Fruits and vegetables are preserved in France by simply bedding them in lime. The process has been tried successfully on oranges, cherries, grapes, pears, apples, prunes, gooseberries, onions, potatoes, tomatoes, sugar beets and shelled chestnuts. The following claims are made for this method: 1. The lime does not in the least attack the skin of the fruit even after prolonged contact. 2. The fruit does not dry any more in the lime than in the air. 3. No change takes place in the fruit other than such as is the natural consequence of its evolution.

A still later method is that of preserving fruits by means of the vapor of alcohol. This process, which has hitherto only been tried with grapes, is extremely simple. According to the inventor, another Frenchman, it can be practiced anywhere, and needs no special apparatus. In every place where a uniform low temperature can be assured, grapes can be stored in closed compartments, adding alcohol either in a jar, or even saturating with it the wooden framework which supports the grapes. The cost of the alcohol, it appears, is very small.—N. Y. World.

Remedy for Lice on Cows.

The Practical Dairyman tells us that for lice on cattle nothing is more effective than kerosene emulsion and of the strength usually employed in spraying fruit trees and vines. It is by dissolving one-half pound of hard soap in a gallon of boiling water and adding two gallons of kerosene oil. Stir violently until a perfect emulsion is formed. Dilute with nine to fifteen parts of warm water and apply with a spray pump. It will knock out all lice on the first application but will not kill the eggs. A second spraying should be given in two or three weeks to kill any more which may have hatched out.

GET WIDE TIRES FIRST.

Then Good Country Roads Will Be Easier of Attainment.

The good roads spirit of progress has impressed the value and necessity of wide tires upon all classes of road vehicles Teamsters, merchants and manufacturers in towns and cities are adopting wide tires because they find the loads haul easier and the streets wear smoother and better. Wide tires are imperative on the good roads of France; then how much more important upon our soft dirt roads. A writer in Good Roads says: In those parts of the country where stone does not abound, and the most available road material is prairie mud—the first, best and cheapest relief is to use wide tires, next put in underdrains and keep the road well shaped up. Such a road, properly looked after, comes very near being right for sparsely settled prairie country, and during a large part of the year is good enough for anybody, but it is absolutely necessary to use wide tires, and what is more, it is profitable to the user, in that he can haul double the corn out of the field that he could have hauled with narrow tires, and he can get to town with a very much larger load, even when he is the only user of wide tires over that road; and as soon as the flat-footed wagons become general, it is not necessary to spend one-half the amount keeping up even a common dirt road. With proper drainage and wide tires, a long step is taken in the direction of going to town in the spring and fall. Few localities are so slow that drainage is not practical, and even in the lowest "bottoms" a road, properly raised, with suitable side ditches and cross-tiles, will be in good shape most of the time, but no such road can stand narrow tires. Get proper highways as soon as possible, but get wide tires now. The meanest road is made better, a fair road is much improved, a soft road is kept smooth, a good road is left so, a hard road is made harder, a smooth road is made smoother, a rough road is leveled, all roads last longer, larger loads can be hauled, larger bank accounts can be maintained, better profits for the farmer, better prices for the consumer, better nature will prevail, and better citizens are made by the use of wide tires. Therefore get wide tires first, and good roads will be easier of attainment.

SPRAYING WAGON.

Many people are deterred from many farm operations which they believe would be beneficial, because of a lack of cash to buy implements. A friend put a barrel into a light spring wagon, and undertook to spray potatoes. In turning at the end, the barrel tipped against and broke the dashboard. The team ran, and he came near being killed. A lumber wagon with the box on is heavy, cannot be turned around in a small space, and is too high for ease in filling the barrel. I have seen men so anxious to test the value of spraying, that they used a two-horse sleigh, but it was very unhandy. Ordinary farmers who grow only their own supply of fruit, do not feel justified in buying a special cart for use only in spraying. A wagon similar to one fitted up by my father for gathering sap may be of benefit, as anyone can make it for a very small sum. See the cut. It is an attachment for any ordinary farm wagon, which gives a short turn, and is quickly put on. Three planks come together and are fastened to the kingbolt by putting a ring and key on it. They spread out at the back end, and form a platform for the tub or barrel to stand on. The short planks which stand on edge form the sides, to hold the barrel from slipping off, and also keep the plank down low. A bolt hooks over the bolster, passes through the plank on edge, the floor plank and a cross piece, and has a nut to draw up everything tight: 1 shows how to place each piece, 2 the manner of bolting. The planks are set slanting so that the barrel cannot slip ahead. The whole frame is under both axles, and can be taken off by taking off two nuts behind and one key in front.—Rural New Yorker.

NO. 2.

GARDEN AND ORCHARD.

Summer plants do not thrive in a close crowd.

Heading the trees low shades the ground and aids in equalizing the temperature.

Pears will ripen more evenly and make a better quality of fruit when grown quite open to the sun.

Cutting back any tree that is making a healthy growth tends to make a more vigorous growth next season.

If for any reason it is found necessary to cut off large limbs at this season paint the wounds with thick, coarse paint.

Generally whatever is most favorable to a rapid, vigorous growth is unfavorable to the immediate production of fruit.

Cutting out and burning all parts of the tree showing the least indication of black knot is the surest, simplest and quickest of all remedies.

The curled leaf of peaches is a distinct disease of a fungous character. It usually develops after a cold spell, following a period of warm weather, and rapid growth. Keeping the soil in good tilth and supplying plenty of potash is a good preventive measure.—St. Louis Republic.

To Keep Trees Well Formed.

To keep heads of trees well formed requires but little pruning if given just right and at the right time, but to try to give a rule would be useless. In pruning never cut out small twigs or spurs growing on large limbs. Many cut these out, thinking they will after awhile make cross limbs, but such is not the case. These are your show for fruit, and many persons destroy their first fruit crops by thus cutting away these fruit spurs.—Farmers' Voice.

DELANO DIARY

—Frank Suttons residence on Franklin avenue has been re-shingled and repaired.

—Work was begun Tuesday morning on the extension of the waterworks on North Third street.

—Don't fail to see Rev. R. R. Atchinson's views of the war. He was himself a soldier and knows what he talks about. At the City Hall, Thursday, 18th., at Montrose Friday 19th., in the evening.

—It looks now very much as if the village council would be obliged to levy a tax in order to come out of the hole. Perhaps then the school tax will no longer be the biggest burden for our citizens to bear.

—Mr. Roosen claims that the milk decreased about 10 per cent last week in amount furnished by each cow, owing to dry weather and poor pasturage. A good rain would change this back to the former condition of affairs.

—George Goodrick, the newly installed village Marshall busied himself Monday by taking the census of the swine population. He enumerated some 30 between Railroad Avenue and Bridge Street. It is expected they will vacate their present abodes.

—The new library for the Public school don't seem to be forthcoming for some reason or another. The boys and girls would gladly avail themselves of the opportunity to read, during vacation, some interesting, instructive and wholesome books, such as should have been purchased, months ago, with funds raised for the purpose. The proper committee should attend to this important matter at once.

—The St. Paul Broad Axe reads the City Authorities quite a lecture on leaving streets in such dangerous conditions as to cause the death of the two little girls, one of them the child of Ed Puffe, a former Delanoite, a couple of weeks ago. Are not the gravel pits near the school house, and on Oak street, and the sidewalks on Third and Bridge streets fit subjects for complaint and liable to furnish the village with a law suit, at any time?

--From reports, one would be led to expect the new city fountains would be of magnificent proportions, covering a large territory, and perhaps furnishing good sport for piscatorially inclined, and bathing faculties for the public. It was reported that there was not plank in town from which to make them. Another report says one lumber yard has a thousand feet and the other one three thousand feet. How big will they be any way? They should not be too big, or if the present dry spell continues it is likely there will not be water enough in the river to fill them.

LTTER.--A wooden watering trough has at last been put up near Young's Hotel. If as much time is allowed as was given Noah to build the ark the down town people may look for one like it.

—The third Saturday in July, which, this year, comes on the 20th., is the day for school meeting. Two new members of the board are two be chosen, Messrs C. Vorse and S. Erickson are the retiring members. This is one of the most important elections we have. On the Board of education depends very much, what kind of a school we have. The selection of teachers, the caring for the school house, grounds, books, library, laboratory and other things is in their charge. The heaviest tax paid by our villagers is for school purposes, and the voters should see to it that the men best suited to look after the important duties devolving upon the board be chosen.

—Some of the Hazelbrushers were in town this morning possibly hunting Crickets.

—The Adjuster for the insurance on Dell Young's store was in town Wednesday taking an account of dammage done.

—Several threshing machines started up this week, on barley and rye, and times are growing lively among the farmers.

—Last Saturdays fair was rather a light one. Cows and calves were sold from 20 to 30 dollars, quite a unmber changed hands.

—Charley Burns, of Independence, lost his residence and most of its contents by fire, yesterday. He had a small insurence on the property.

--We understand that a fatal epedemic among children visited Watertown the last week; four little ones dying in two days.

—Superentendent Coffin and a crew of men have about completed the digging for the water works extension on River and Third streets.

--Fred Adickes received a new separator and stacker yesterday. He is bound to keep up with the procession in the thrashing business.

—Idle men, complaining that "they can't find a job" are not so numerous among our citizens as a few weeks ago. Work seems to be picking up.

—If the electric lights were turned off a little earlier at night they could be lighted earlier in in the evening and no more hours work required.

-Thrashing outfits are seen on nearly every west bound freight train. There must be a lot of work for somebody to do out west; to keep them all running.

—A couple of itenerate sign painters have decorated the front windows of a number of buisness men in town this week. Nothing like advertising, for drawing business.

—C. W. Kerrick, with most of the carpenters he can get around Delano go to Sandstone soon to replace railroad buildings burned in the great Hinckley fire last year.

--Rye and barley is most all in the shock, and wheat and oats will soon be ready to harvest; crops generaly will be fair, concidering the long dry spell and numerons frosts we have had.

--No preaching at the M. E. church next Sunday. After next Sunday, evening service each week. Sunday school at 12 M. Christian Endeavor meeting next Sunday at 6:45, P. M. Junior Epworth League at 3 P. M.

--Some of the boys are passing a letter around among their friends, lately received from Dell Cooper who is now at Williston, N. D. He says he likes the country: and Ben caught a couple of sturgeon four feet long, in the Missouri River.

—Quite a number of our citizens have been on the sick list this week, with a prevailing influenza. The changeable weather, hot days and cold nights should be met by a change of clothing but usually is not, consequently sickness results.

—The Eagle this week gives a short account of the 4th in Delano, she uses up about eleven lines in advertising the beer business, while a little more than one line suffices her for the 4th of July oration, which the GAZETTE of the 5th contained in full.

-The village council had another of its jamborees; this time a special, on Saturday evening. Matters and things were discussed, and from accounts, some without the dis. George Goodrick was engaged as night watch, vice Dad Gast, who has accepted a position at Wayzata with James Hill.

—At a meeting of the cabinet of the Willmar district Epworth League, held in this city Wednesday, plans were laid for a convention of all the Epworth Leagues of the Willmar District, to be held in Litchfield, September 17th to 19.—Litchfield Saturday Review.

—Where is the advantage in paying for running the electric lights one fourth louger time every night than most people need. Eleven o'clock is late enough for anybody to go to bed. And at the present rate of speed, in the same direction, our village will soon be a fit subject for the poorhouse.

—Monticello, and some other places do considerable blowing about base ball, and other athletic sports, claiming to be the best in the country. Delano claims the same thing; and whenever any of these intruders show up here they usually go away satisfied. Send over your champions in any line, or keep still. Wind dont count.

—Superior officals are having a big time over the accusations that Mayor Starkweather has been receiving money to allow saloons to run Sundays and longer at night. St. Cloud's mayor says the law closes saloons at eleven each night, and in spite of the council's action granting them more time he proposes to see the law enforced. There seems to pe a chance, at least, for village officals to rake in something for granting such privilegs. So it is but fair to wonder, when Delano's saloons run after eleven who is sharing the profits.

—What has become of the committee appointed to secure the building of the new Insane Asylum at this place? Has anybody heard of it lately? The State committee has advertised for propositions, and are to hold a meeting in August. Our committe should be on hand prepared to make the best offer before the commission. There is $15,000 appropriated by the state to purchase a site with. The site is to contain not less than 640 acres, and properly handled this ought to procure the land within a couple of miles of Delano in these hard times.

W. M. Mowatt and family received a visit from his sister and children, and his father, last week.

Mrs. H. C. Parslow and daughter Annie spent a couple of days in the Cities this week with friends.

Mrs. Maggie Anderson, who moved to town eight weeks ago came to the Post Office for the fist time Tuesda.

Mrs. George W. Bolton entertained a cousin, Mr. James Anderson, of Minneapolis, for several days last week.

Charley Cunningham, wife and two sisters and Miss. Mary Catlin went fishing to Lake Rebecca, wednesday.

C. W. Michaels, of Excelsior, is now day operator here: Sydney Dostlar having been transferged to Como.

Mrs. Thouret and children who have for several weeks been guests of C. G. Roosen's returned to Montreal, Saturday.

Miss Sadie Van Eman, of Watertown, passed through town yesterday, on her way to Buffalo for a Couple of weeeks outing.

Sam and Mrs. Sam Pape shook hands with a lot of Sam's old acquaintances here this A. M. as the train stopped at the depot. They were on their way to Hancock and expect to go to house keeping at once.

County Cullings.

The stores of W. W. Webster and H. E. Shirley, of Clearwater were burglarized last week.

Crops throught the county seem to be much ahead of any we have had for years and with the creamery business bringing money into the hands of the farmers, times bid fair to pick up a little.

The County Commisoners held their regular session Monday. The County funds were found to be: In Treasury, $116.01; in Banks, $65,876 06; available funds, $65,992.07. As the Board's estimate for next year's expenses is only $24,650, it looks as if the County Treasury aught to have a surplus of $41,345.07 at the end of next year.

It is nothing less than a shame for the county to hire printing done for half a cent per folio, of one hundred words that would cost anybody else from 50 to 75 cts per folio. The county is worth as much as the best man in it: and as able to pay fair prices for its work, and instead of being the first, should be among the last to reduce any man's regular prices for his work or his time. "The laborer is worthy of his hire" and should have fair prices.

They have also found out that while it is fun to hunt the tiger there isn't quite so much humor in it when the tiger hunts them. Editor Hoskins is making a pretty good tiger. —Clearwater News.

The logical result of booming an industry by government aid beyond its normal rate of growth is seen in the deplorable decline of the best sugar industry in Germany. Bounty after bounty has been given by the government, farmer after farmer went into the cultivation of sugar beets. It was expected that the export of the product would asume vast proportions, and that beet sugar would knock at the doors of the markets of all the world. Everybody made sugar, and now it is a worse drug on the markets than fireworks after the Fourth of July. —Wright County Times.

Don't try to get along without hogs and good ones. They are the most powerful and direct machinery for converting crude products into cash.

BE CONTENTED.

I'm sick of hoeing in the corn,
And following the plow;
Of working hard from dewy morn
Till eve, with heated brow.
No longer will I stay to mow
Or pitch the scented hay:
To the great city will I go,
Where wealth is made by play.

Tut, tut, my man hush up that song,
Let wisdom be your guide:
That dream of wealth may lead you wrong,
And wreck you on the tide.
Men work as hard as you, in shade,
O'er books and papers bent;
The work of life is easy made
Only by sweet content.
—Farm Journal.

THE Globe gives an interview with John Sherman, in which he is made to say that he will under no circumstances be a candidate for President. He thinks himself to old. Its a good thing he has grown old enough to know that much. Mr. Sherman thinks so says the Interview that the Tariff and the Financial questions will both be before the people. We have been claiming before that these would certainly be two of the most important planks.

IN case Mr. Harvey is as successful, and it appears altogether likely he will be, in showing that the circulating system of the United State is not filled with silver, as was his illustrious predecessor in showing the medical fraternity that human arteries were not filled with air, his opponents will, of course, have to find some plan to dispose of Mr. Horr and his discussion. Maybe they will say the silverites paid him to help Harvey carry on the debate and to submit to defeat. It looks like some of their politics.

MINNEAPOLIS is arranging for a grand bicycle tournament to take place during Fair week. The St. Cloud Bicycle Band is to lead the procession. Bicycle clubs and individuals throughout the state are asked to decorate their wheels, and array themselves in apparel fitted for so grand an occasion and participate in the parade. Delano and vicinity can, if they choose, turn out as fine a looking company of 40 or 50 as perhaps any village of its size in the state, and, being handy by, will doubtless appear well up to the front in the grand procession. Of course the ladies will be about half of the tournament.

Horr vs. Harvey.

The debate on the financial question now going on between Ex-Congressman Horr and Editor Harvey, in Chicago, is a big thing. So far as we were able to make out from the opening speeches Mr. Horr expected to laugh his opponent out of court at the very start, and evidently thought he had an easy job. But from further developments it seems he has concluded there was more to the matter than he had at first admitted. Each contestant was allowed ten picked men as prompters, to aid them in seeing the weaknesses of the enemy and giving proper answers. But, already, this arrangement has been changed and 200 visitors are to be admitted, they are to aid their friends by sending in written questions or suggestions. No reports are allowed to be made of the agreements but what are agreed upon by the disputants and copyrighted, so no colored accounts are supposed to be given.

Mr. Horr seems to have made rather a lame thrust when he asked "Coin" to say whether there ever was such a school as his book described. Mr. Harvey very nicely informed him that the story was an allegory. Mr. Horr after beating about the bush for a long time, was forced to admit, when the constitution and Daniel Webster were turned on him, that silver was a unit of value.

So far as the debate has gone, the Harvey side seems to convince unbiased people that they are adhering at least as close to facts as is Mr. Horr's side.

Economics.

A reader of the GAZETTE, in Woodland, has something to say, last week, of our article of the week previous, on "Economics". The Woodland correspondent agrees with us that we should not "borrow money," and says that "We must now economize to the extent of niggardness, but I fail to see the benefit that will be derived from it in the end.,, The only benefit that seems likely to accrue to the farmer is the simple one of taking care of what he has; of allowing nothing to go to waste; of making the very most of what he has. To some families this is a valuable lesson; to others it amounts to nothing, as they have learned it long ago; and still others appear destined to almost starve among plenty. In any case it does seem as if the present opportunity for learning economy has been sufficient to satisfy the most exacting advocate of the theory, and could now, with some profit, and a great deal of pleasure, be dispensed with. There has been reason for economizing, with almost everybody. People had learned with their plenty, not to save; they had learned that they could live without resorting to the honorable, yet to many disagreeable task of offering for sale small things, which in the aggregate would save the family from destitution. They have now learned, that though living in a a land of plenty, they must, to some extent, depend on others, for many things. That, although the farmer is, perhaps, more independent, more able to live from the products of his own property and the labor of his own and his families hands than is any other man, yet is he dependent, in a measure, on others for many things. When crops are good, prices high, and money plenty these lessons are easily skipped over, and not retained longer than the bargains are being made, often.

Our questioner says. "Why should farmers economize?" Economizing if one desires to accumulate worldly goods, or riches, is necessary. Unless the odds and ends are looked after more may easily be wasted, than would keep those engaged in the business, whether it be farming or some other of the avocations of life. To a degree it is commendable to economize, but not to the extent of niggardness. It is wrong to be wasteful of what we have even in times of plenty. It seems to us, as we have already intimated, that the farmer has as little real reason for studying economy in his household affairs as any one else. He has it in his power, by a little extra labor, to provide his family with most necessaries and many luxuries without asking others consent. He can live well till everybody else has been ground down; then comes his turn and when he sallies out to dispose of his surplus he learns that others have been compelled to economize and now he has to follow in their tracks.

Protective Tariff.

In a recent speech, Congressman Barbous, of Connecticut said: "We believe that for every yard of cloth made in a foreign country and brought here to be sold, there is a yard less cloth to be made in this country; that for every dollar which we pay for foreign labor we pay a dollar less to our wage earners; that it is as plain as that two and two make four; that if under a low tariff, Europe sends us $100,000,000 worth of goods, and we pay for them, we have the goods and Europe has the money; if under a high tariff, the foreign goods are kept out and American manufacturers make that $100,000,000 worth of goods and pay American workingmen for making them, and they are sold here, we have the goods and the money to."—Litchfield Saturday Review.

The Congressman from the land of wooden nutmegs, might have just as well said that for every yard of cloth that could be better andcheaper made in a foreign land and was made here, by charging the individual who bought it for use, a tariff price of from 25 to 75 percent, in addition to its actual value was at least the tariff price, taken directly out of the man who used the cloth. He might have, also said that while the man in this country was engaged in some artificial business, kept up by protective tariffs; he was called away from the duty that was plain before him, he was taken out of the ranks of agriculture, or stock raising; or some business which can live on its own hook; a business for which God designed the country; and furthermore he might have said while the man in Europe was making cloth, for which his country by climate and other reasons is adopted he would be earning money with which to buy some of our products, he would be assisting in building up a shipping interest between his land and ours. Both parties would be benefitted, and while one spent his money for clothing better than he could buy for twice the price, at home, the next ship would bring back his money for a stock of wheat, flour, meat or something else. Commerce would be extended, friendly relations would exist between nations obliged in a measure to depend, and rely upon each other for support. This narrow contracted plan of every nation living within itself has been carried out to the extreme in our own land. Its fruits have already begun to ripen. States are trying to regulate commerce between each other. Laws under the cloak of sanitary regulation were sought to be enforced prohibiting shipment of meat, even into our own state; a society has been talked of and an organization has been sought to be affected prohibiting people in this country from using goods not manufactured in the North West. For shame, on such organization! Minneapolitans have even boycotted country flour mills, and a merchant known to be handling flour made outside of Minneapolis, we have been creditably informed, could sell no goods to those organized to attend to the business.

Things have gone on until the farmer feels the iron heel of protection, after the proceedures above mentioned the husbandman finds himself obliged to sell his wheat only to elevators, for shipment, mills must confine their sales to country places, and their own immediate vicinity. The farmer must take small prices from buyers, just what they may choose to fix. He is obliged to diversify the products of his farm; to raise what he can of all the varieties he needs, as he can not get enough for the surplus of any one kind of product to supply his wants. He must become instead of an able educated raiser of wheat, or of corn or of potatoes, with leisure hours for keeping up with the news, a plodding diversified farmer, with drudgery and slavish work from sun up till dark with no time to think of anything else but trying to make both ends meet, keep his family from penury and want, and keep out of debt.

This is but the logical conclusion of the protective theory, and it has become so instilled into some people that they, even now attribute the hard times to the slight changes made by the Wilson bill.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, July 12, 1895.

Secretary Herbert finds himself so busy with the plans for building the battle ships and torpedo boats authorized by the last Congress, and her important business, that he has been compelled to postpone his vacation for a time. He hopes to have things in such shape that he can leave about the last of the month.

Everybody is laughing at the Spanish minister, who has been sent on a fool's errand by his government. He has gone to Secretary Olney's summer residence, in Massachusets, to ask an explanation and an official statement concerning that silly fake purporting to be an interview with Ambassador Eustice, which was published in a Paris paper early this week and cabled to this country, and which was promptly followed by a denial from Ambassador Eustis. No denial was needed. Everybody knew that the thing was a fake, but the Spanish government seems to have taken it seriously, or, it is so pretending for some purpose of its own. Secretary Olney will dispose of the Spanish minister and his silly request in short order.

According to Col. Harvey, of the New York World's editorial staff, who is in Washington, "Teddy" Roosevelt has given Tammany a "cinch" on the next municipal election, by his strict enforcement of the excise law. Col. Harvey said: "The result will be far-reaching in a political way, and will beyond doubt damage the republicans materially in New York City. I have no idea that they will be able to elect a single Assemblyman or Senator from the city or from Brooklyn this fall. Every Tammany candidate will win. People who live at a distance can't begin to appreciate the local feeling that has been aroused by this affair, and it is not a feeling that will die away in a little while. The administration has gone too far now to recede; it must carry out its policy, and the more rigidly that policy is adhered to the more certain and sweeping will be the victory of the democrats."

Evidently Mr. Benjamin Harrison is becoming frightened at the hammering McKinley is getting at the hands of the friends of the other candidates, as a result of his efforts to keep himself prominently before his party as a Presidential candidate. Mr. Harrison is tender and he never liked hammering, so he has adopted another course. It has been said before, but fearing that it might have been forgotten, he arranged to have Mr. John W. Foster, who was once charged with being Mr. Hrrrison's spy upon Secretary Blaine, and who became Secretary of State himself when Mr. Blaine retired from the Harrison administration, to say again that he was not a candidate; was doing nothing to get the nomination, but would not, of course, decline should the party insist upon nominating him. These statements are absurd, and they fool nobody.

Attorney General Harmon isn't satisfied with the decision against the government in the suit against the Stanford estate and he this week directed the U. S. District Attorney at San Francisco to appeal the case to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Pacific Coast district. It is no violation of confidence to add that should the Court of Appeals decide against the government the case will be carried to the U. S. Supreme Court. This suit, which is for $15,000,000, is only against the Stanford estate, but if the government wins the estates of all of Stanford's Pacific railroad associates who, like him, became rich by their manipulations of a company that has always pleaded its inability to repay money loaned it by the U. S. government, will have to disgorge to the amount of their stock holdings in the road, if to no further extent.

The White House mail gives evidence of the rapidity with which the news of the birth of President Cleveland's third baby has been disseminated, but it also gives evidence of the careless manner in which many people read the news. It would be natural to suppose that every man, woman and child who reads the newspapers knows that President Cleveland and his wife and children are at their summer residence, Gray Gables; on Buzzard's Bay. Well there are thousands who have read or heard of the birth of that third girl who believe that the baby was born in the White House and that Mrs. Mrs. Cleveland is there now, and every mail brings hundreds of letters addressed to her at the White House. This is just as well, however, as there are more clerks at the White House to go over these letters and select such as are worthy of Mrs. Cleveland's attention than there are at Gray Gables. Still their coming to the White House is queer.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

We are now at the front end of harvest time. Some fields of wheat and oats are being cut and farmers will be very busy during the next two or three weeks.

The rain we had last Sunday was as manna in the wilderness to the farm-community. It gave new life to vegitation and to man and beast. It will bring out the potaeoes and corn and also help in a general way.

Mrs. Wm Mills and her daughter Della, went to Buffalo yesterday to be gone two or three days, visiting relatives.

The Christian Workers Convention that was held at Armstrong last Thursday and Friday, was very interesting and well attended. Quite a number came from a distance.

Hope every body will remember the annual school meeting next Saturday.

Another Fat Year.

A thorough investigation of the crop prospects in Minnesota and the Dakotas has been made and the result is most gratifying, but there is need of help to properly care for the abundance now in the fields. Harvesters, threshing crews and machines will be needed in every locality. The lesson of 1891, when hundreds of acres of as fine grain as ever grew spoiled uncut or in the shock, should not be repeated this year. History sometimes repeats itself. It may require a little extra expense to properly secure the sheaves in the stacks, when the thresher is not available to handle them directly from the cutting, but this should be met so that the farmer may get the full benefit of the year's work Failure must not come at last through negligence. When all the vicissitudes of the season pass us by and the fields fairly teem with plenty, spare no effort to garner it. Get men and machines and save the crop. It may rain again as it did in '91.

James Lochran, of Bridgman, who suddenly became insane in St. Cloud one day last week, has been taken to the Fergus Falls hospital.—St. Cloud Times.

Congressman Towne has grit, even if he is on the wrong side of the fence on the silver question. His challenge to the Pioneer Press and Minneapolis Tribune, proves this.—St Cloud Times.

The jury in the United States district court last week gave the Merrits a verdict of 940,000 against Rockfeller, who with his millions tried to bankrupt them and get possession of their valuable iron mines at Duluth.—St. Peter Herald.

Eli Perkins evidently thinks the silver question has reached the stage where his peculiar aptitude for inveracity can find profitable enployment. He is out in a pamphlet in opposition to free coinage. It is the worst blow that has yet been struck at the gold standard.—St. Paul Globe.

Thomas B. Reed has had his moustache shaved off. This is supposed to be a nessary part of his training for the race for the Republican presidential nomination. The moustache was not very heavy but every little counts in a sprinting contest such as this promises to pe.—Minneapolis Times.

J. J. Hill advises farmers to stack their grain and not be in too big a hurry to get it to market, not for a rise in price but to keep from breaking the price by a flood. The advice is no doubt good, but James has in mind the extra expense to his company caused by a rush, rather than the farmers gain.—Howard Lake Herald.

The New York Mail and Express has opened a fund for Miss Key, the impoverished grand-daughter of the author of the "Star-Spangled Banner." Miss Key is above fifty years of age and has her mother to support. For eighteen years she has also cared for a crippled brother, but has been obliged to send him to a soldiers' home since losing her government position. There are many less worthy and appropriate objects of benevolence than these descendants of the author of our flag-hymn.—Pioneer Press.

We had the pleasure, during the campaign of last fall, to listen to several of Congressman Towne's eloquent speeches, and they had the ring of true republicanism in them; we should be sorry to see our brilliant member from tis district, bowing down before the free silver idol at this time as he seems inclined to do, for it is very certain that he cannot take the party with him It has been proven many times that no one man is greater than his party, and we do not believe that the republicans of the 6th district are in favor of free silver.—Sherburne County Times.

If you are running a little bit down on your luck, and seem to be losing your grip, don't make the mistake of pawning your pluck, but just keep a stiff upper lip. If outgo is heavy and income is light, here's a fact you don't want to let slip. The tide it will turn as the day follows night; so just keep a stiff upper lip. The carpet of life will have its dark spot, it can't be all gaudy and flip; so weave as much light as you can in the plot—by keeping a stiff upper lip. For losses will come and profits will go, and of pleasure you can't always sip; but if fortune be high or fortune be low, why just keep a stiff upper lip.—Ex.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.

Square Type. Conical. Spatulate. Artistic. Philosophic. Feminine.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the nobler sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and you will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of a whole family.

"A LARGE part of my religion consists in trying all the while not to be as mean as I know how," was an astute saying of Petroleum V. Nasby.

ONE BILLION DOLLARS in United States silver certificates, laid end to end, would reach a distance of 114,289 miles, or nearly five times around the earth.

IT is said Queen Victoria is worth $175,000,000. If Mrs. Hetty Green hopes to become the richest woman in the world it will be necessary for her to live long and be very economical.

A NATURALIST has arisen to remark that if all the eggs laid by codfish were hatched, the ocean would soon be so full of fish as to make navigation impossible. But fishing would be easy.

A GROWING industry in China is the terrorizing of Christian missionaries and the destruction of their property. The Celestials are evidently soured by their defeat in the late war and want to take it out of somebody.

TO TRAVEL around the world without stint, and to be able to take advantage of the various places so far as possible during the period of staying for coaling, etc., costs close on $1,500, including payments of first-class passage.

IN a recent interview Secretary of Agriculture Morton declares that farming, when intelligently conducted, is a most profitable industry. He thinks the best results are to be found in the proper diversification of crops.

LAST year the world produced 553,700,000 tons of coal. To this total Great Britain contributed 185,000,000 tons; the United States, 170,000,000; Germany, 74,000,000; France, 25,250,000; Belgium, 19,500,000, and Austria-Hungary, 10,250,000 tons. Five million tons were mined in Australia, four in Canada and three in British India.

GRANITE FALLS has adopted the curfew ordinance. According to the Minneapolis Journal's count this is the twenty-seventh place in Minnesota where the law is now in force. There are five South Dakota towns that have it on their statute books, as well as two in northern Michigan, one in North Dakota and one in Illinois.

W. D. CLARK and Thomas J. Howard, miners, returned to Butte, Mont., from a prospecting trip in the Big Hole country and announced the discovery of a tunnel evidently made years ago. It is located in the Fleecor mountains. It is timbered on the sides and overhead with flat stones. The tunnel is seven feet wide and fifty feet long. Near the end of the tunnel were found several stone implements in the shape of picks and hammers.

THE Yankee tar has won more honor. American seamen from the cruiser Machias recently boarded a burning German vessel in a Chinese harbor and extinguished the flames, which had thrown the officers and crew into a panic. The Yankees fought the fire at the risk of their own lives, for the cargo consisted of kerosene. This act of bravery is only one of the many with which American seamen are credited. Such men will make splendid fighters if the time ever comes for them to fight.

UNDER the new state law, Montana has closed all its gambling houses and hereafter the poker room and faro bank can only be conducted sub rosa. How marked a change this is from the old mining days, when every saloon and hotel in the territory had its gambling paraphernalia, and games of chance were indulged in by entire communities with hardly an exception! The far west is becoming reformed and improved to such an extent that the early pioneers would find difficulty in recognizing it.

THE venerable Neal Dow, of Maine, recently participated in a public temperance celebration in Massachusetts, and it was noticed that he was as bright and chipper as any of his associates, notwithstanding the burden of his 91 years. Mr. Dow was one of the original temperance reformers; he advocated rigid temperance when it was an unpopular and at times dangerous thing to do, and if he exemplifies in his own person the benefits of temperate living in preserving physical and mental vigor it is little wonder that the cause has grown and flourished like a green bay tree.
